PREFACE

TO

THE SECOND EDITION

CHARLES GROSS, Gurney Professor of History and Political Science in Harvard University, died after prolonged illness on December 3, 1909. Almost up to the last moment he had clung to the hope that he might live to prepare a second edition of his monumental work on the Sources and Literature of English History, for which, ever since the publication of the first edition in the year 1900, he had been steadily collecting material.

His lamented death, everywhere recognised as an irreparable loss to historical scholarship, seemed to render impossible, or to postpone indefinitely, the realisation of his plan. His colleagues of the historical department at Harvard, however, were unwilling to allow the matter to drop, and early in 1910 appointed a committee with power to communicate with the publishers and with the family of Professor Gross in regard to the practicability of carrying out his design. The response from both sides was heartily in favour of the attempt. The family, represented by Messrs. Marks and Henry Gross of Troy, New York, accepted the financial responsibility of bringing editorial part of the work to completion as an affectionate tribute to the memory of their distinguished brother. publishers on their part showed every willingness to further the project. The services of Miss A. F. Rowe, of Cambridge, who had assisted in preparing the manuscript for the first edition, were secured, and the work was begun.

largely to Miss Rowe's intelligent skill, devoted labour, and scrupulous fidelity to Professor Gross's intentions that the present edition owes whatever measure of completeness and accuracy it may claim.

As the work progressed, many difficulties of detail presented themselves, the solution of which required an amount of time and attention which men who were more than busy in other ways could give in scattered fragments only. The continued appearance of new books also made it imperative that some definite point of conclusion should be set, if the work were not to drag on beyond the period of usefulness. It was therefore determined to fix the end of the year 1910 as the terminus beyond which no attempt at completeness should be made. Only continuations and such notable books or articles as were specially called to the attention of the committee have been included after that date.

The editors were aware that Professor Gross, partly of his own motion and partly as the result of friendly suggestion, would probably have made certain changes in the arrangement of the material; but they did not feel at liberty to undertake such alterations except in rare instances and where the general plan would not thereby be affected. Such a change, for example, has been made in the section on Local Records (§ 57), where the works relating to each county are now arranged under a separate head. A distinct addition has been made in the insertion of § 4d, which comprises works relating to Celtic philology. It is probable also that the author would have made certain omissions, notably of the older literature; but here again the editors have not ventured to use their own judgment. On the other hand, it did not seem to them likely that Professor Gross would have adopted the suggestion made by some well-wishers that he should increase the proportion of titles primarily referring to other countries but containing matter of interest to students of English history. Such additions would certainly have enlarged the volume far beyond the limits which its author contemplated, and the editors have therefore made no attempt in this direction. In accordance with Dr. Gross's plan, the numbering of the old titles has in the main been retained, with sub-numerals employed for new titles. In matters of typography also, including the perplexing subject of capitalisation, the editors have followed the author's practice without change. They realise fully that, since Professor Gross was not able to make a final revision of his material, old or new, their work must be subject to chances of error and omission for which they have to ask indulgence.

The committee have been helped by the cordial co-operation of their colleagues, Professors G. L. Kittredge, F. N. Robinson, and, especially, H. L. Gray of Harvard University, and of Professor J. F. Baldwin of Vassar College. They are under great obligation to Professor T. F. Tout of Victoria University, Manchester, and to Dr. G. T. Lapsley, fellow and lecturer at Trinity College, Cambridge, England, who have been good enough to read the proof of the entire volume. Professor Tout particularly has shown the greatest interest in the undertaking, and has spared no pains to make it a success, as have also the Messrs. Longmans by their unfailing patience and ready assistance at every step of the way.

PREFACE

THE FIRST EDITION

ATTENTION has often been called to the need of a good bibliography of English history.1 There has been a deplorable waste of time and energy in historical investigation, because the literature of English history has so long remained unarranged and unanalysed, and therefore students have often been obliged to grope their way through unclassified catalogues in a futile search for bibliographical information. 'In this respect,' says Mr. H. R. Tedder, in the Library Chronicle, 1886, iii. 185, 'we are still in arrear of almost every other civilised country. . . . It is a slur upon English bibliography and upon English historical research that "our island story," told in so many ways and by so many writers, should be yet without an adequate record of its literature.' In a paper read before the Royal Historical Society (Transactions, 1897, xi. 19-30) Mr. Frederic Harrison also emphasises the need of a treatise which should aid students of English history in some such way as the bibliographies of Dahlmann-Waitz and Monod aid students of German and French history. Mr. Tedder and Mr. Harrison both demand, however, that the proposed bibliography, unlike those of Dahlmann-Waitz and Monod, should give some account of the contents and a brief estimate of the value of the books named; and they agree in asserting that the labour of preparing such a treatise can be successfully undertaken only by some method of co-operation on the part of various experts. But a co-operative scheme of this sort is difficult to initiate and to carry out; and, as no such scheme has as yet been undertaken, I have ventured to put forth a bibliography of that part of the subject which extends from the earliest times to 1485.

The main object of this Preface is to explain the scope and arrangement of the volume. The book contains a systematic survey of the printed materials relating to the political, constitutional, legal, social, and economic history of England, Wales, and Ireland. The manuscript materials are dealt with only incidentally; in this branch of the subject we already have some good guides, like T. D. Hardy and S. R. Scargill Bird.1 Scotland has been omitted, because in the middle ages her government and institutions were foreign to those of England; but so far as Scotland influenced the current of English history she has received consideration. Even within the above-mentioned limits, this bibliography does not profess to be exhaustive: it comprises only select lists of books; worthless and obsolete treatises are omitted, except in the case of a few recent works which are mentioned merely in order that the student may be warned to shun them. Greater fulness has been sought in the sections dealing with the original sources, and it is hoped that no printed source of prime importance has been overlooked. Besides books and pamphlets, the work includes a selection of papers found in collective essays, in journals, and in the transactions of societies; many valuable treasures lie buried in these by-ways of literature. An effort has also been made to include all continental books, pamphlets, and papers that are of any value to students of English history. Throughout the work the task of selection has been a difficult one; it is a labour which no scholar could perform without exposing himself to the accusation of having committed some errors of judgment. The bibliographies mentioned in § 2 and in other sections will furnish the student with many of the titles of books which I have deemed it expedient to omit from my lists.

A glance at the table of contents will show that the materials of English history comprised in this book are systematically and chronologically classified. Part i. includes general or introductory subjects: methodology, bibliographical helps, periodical publications, the studies auxiliary to history (dictionaries, gazetteers, peerages, etc.), the archives in the Public Record Office and other repositories, general collections of chroniclers and records (the publications of the Record Commission, the Rolls Series, record societies, etc.), and the general treatises of modern writers. Part ii. deals with the authorities for the early history of Britain to the close of the Roman occupation; Parts iii. and iv. relate to Anglo-Saxon times and the period 1066-1485 respectively. In Part ii. separate sections, and in Parts iii. and iv. separate chapters, are concerned with modern writers. The separation of the sources from the modern literature doubtless has its disadvantages, but it could not be avoided without seriously impairing other parts of the classification. It is hoped that any defects in the arrangement of the work may be atoned for, in part at least, by the full index, the numerous crossreferences, and the tables in Appendix D.

Many of the titles in my lists are accompanied by brief notes explaining the contents of the books and estimating their value. These notes are supplemented by the preliminary remarks which will be found at the beginning of the sections and subsections. Mr. Frederic Harrison rightly asserts that 'just as a real history is not a series of annals, so a real bibliography is not a mere catalogue of books.' To gauge the value of one treatise as compared with others, in a bibliography which embraces an enormous mass of literature relating to a wide range of subjects, is, however, a delicate and hazardous undertaking, which no one can perform with complete success. Still, it is better to give an inadequate commentary than to allow students to grope in utter darkness.

The book is the outcome of an annual course of lectures on the sources and literature of English history delivered at Harvard University from 1890 to 1899. In 1893 arrangements were made for its publication, and during the past three years it has occupied all the time that I could snatch from my academic duties. Though the work is the fruit of much labour, I am painfully conscious of its shortcomings; but I hope that it will help to smooth the path of teachers and students of English history.

Finally, I wish to express my obligation to the many friends who have kindly aided me; it is difficult to name those who have been most helpful. I am also grateful to the officials of the British Museum Library and the Society of Antiquaries of London for their courtesy and kindness.

C. G.

NOTE.

An asterisk (*) is prefixed to the titles of works which are particularly important for the study of English history. A dagger (†) is prefixed to titles of works which the compiler has not been able to examine.

Most of the titles are presented in abbreviated form.

The number of pages when less than one hundred is usually indicated.

The tables of contents appended to titles of books do not profess to be exhaustive. The page references in such tables are usually to the latest edition mentioned.

In most of the sections dealing with the sources all the printed editions of each work are given, or attention is called to books in which they may be found. Usually only the first and last editions of modern writers are named.

The same topic may be dealt with in various parts of the book; therefore the reader should not neglect to use the index.

Corrections or additions, sent to the publishers, will be welcomed.

<sup>1</sup> In the new edition the daggers have been removed, since Professor Gross saw none of the books published after 1909.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTORY

§ 1. HISTORICAL METHOD.

THE most elaborate and valuable treatise is Bernheim's. The best book in English is Berry's translation of the work of Langlois and Seignobos. For additions to the following list, see Bernheim, 5th edition, 244–50; and J. I. Wyer, A Bibliography of the Study and Teaching of History, American Hist. Assoc., Annual Report, 1899 (Washington, 1900), i. 559–612. There is a periodical bibliography, since 1888, in Jahresberichte (No. 22), vol. xi., etc.

I. ACTON, Lord [J. E. E. D. ACTON]. A lecture on the study of history. London, 1895.

See also J. B. Bury, An Inaugural Lecture [on the Science of History], Cambridge, 1903, pp. 42; C. H. Firth, A Plea for the Historical Teaching of History, Oxford, 1904, pp. 30; and T. F. Tout, Schools of History, in University Review, 1906, ii. 521-46.

- 2. *Bernheim, Ernst. Lehrbuch der historischen Methode, mit Nachweis der wichtigsten Quellen und Hülfsmittel zum Studium der Geschichte. Leipsic, 1889.—5th and 6th edition: Lehrbuch der historischen Methode und der Geschichtsphilosophie. Leipsic, 1908.
- 2a. BOURNE, H. E. The teaching of history and civics in the elementary and the secondary school. New York, etc., 1902.

See also M. W. Keatinge, Studies in the Teaching of History, London, 1910.

3. Collins, W. E. The study of ecclesiastical history. London, 1903.

A brief but valuable treatise, by no means confined to ecclesiastical history.

4. Droysen, J. G. Grundriss der Historik. Jena, 1858; 3rd edition, 1882, pp. 90.—Translated by E. B. Andrews: Outline of the principles of history. Boston, 1893.

Valuable, but scarcely 'the weightiest book of its size composed in our century' (Andrews, p. vii). Droysen often shrouds his thoughts in unintelligible philosophical language; his book is pedantic and obscure.

5. Essays on the teaching of history. [By F. W. Maitland, R. L. Poole, and others, ed. W. A. J. Archbold.] Cambridge, 1901.

Nine brief essays. The one by R. L. Poole, on palæography and diplomatics, pp. 11-30, is a good introduction to the study of those subjects.

6. Frederico, Paul. The study of history in England and Scotland. Translation from the French, by Henrietta Leonard. Baltimore, 1887. pp. 54.

The French text (Paris, 1885), with similar studies concerning Germany, France, Holland, and Belgium, is reprinted in his L'Enseignement Supérieur de l'Histoire, Ghent, etc., 1899.

7. Freeman, E. A. The methods of historical study. London, 1886.

Valuable.

8. FROUDE, J. A. Short studies on great subjects. 2 vols. London, 1867; new edition, 1 vol., 1878.—2nd series, London, 1871; new edition, 1878.—Both series reprinted, London, 1907.

The first series contains an essay on the science of history, the second an essay on scientific method applied to history.

- 11a. MEISTER, ALOYS. Grundriss der Geschichtswissenschaft. Leipsic, 1906, etc.; new edition of vol. i., 1911, etc.

In progress; issued in parts. Contains a good short account of historical method and auxiliaries to historical study.

12. Methods of teaching history, ed. G. S. Hall. Boston, 1883; 2nd edition, 1885.

Contains essays written by several professors of history.

- 17. TARDIF, ADOLPHE. Notions élémentaires de critique historique. Paris, 1883. pp. 30.

A good brief account.

17a. VINCENT, J. M. Historical research. New York, 1911. Somewhat elementary, but useful. At pp. 327-39 there is a selected bibliography of the subject.

§ 2. BIBLIOGRAPHY; HISTORY OF THE SOURCES.

u. Europe, Nos. 18-27.

b. England's Continental Neighbours, Nos. 28-33.

c. Great Britain: General History, Nos. 34-62.

d. Great Britain: Local History, Nos. 63-84b.

a. EUROPE.

For other works besides those mentioned below, see Langlois, Manuel (No. 23); and Bernheim, Lehrbuch (No. 2), 270-78. A short account of the chief foreign bibliographies of history, and a more detailed account of those relating to English history, will be found in H. R. Tedder's Proposals for a Bibliography of National History, in the Library Chronicle, 1886, iii. 185-94.

- 18. Bratke, Eduard. Wegweiser zur Quellen- und Litteraturkunde der Kirchengeschichte. Gotha, 1890.
- 19. Chevalier, Ulysse. Répertoire des sources historiques du moyen âge. Bio-bibliographie. [Issued in parts.] Paris, 1877-86; supplement, 1888.—New edition, 2 vols. (9 pts.), 1905 [1903]-07.

An elaborate list or encyclopædia of medieval writers, statesmen, etc., with bibliographical references.

20. — Topo-bibliographie. 2 vols. (6 pts.). Montbéliard, 1894–1903.

The second part of the preceding work. It contains bibliographical references arranged under the names of places and subjects; see under 'Angleterre,' etc. The article on 'Angleterre' was also separately printed (Montbéliard, 1893, pp. 79). The Topo-bibliographie, like the Bio-bibliographie, though very useful, contains much obsolete rubbish and omits many valuable works.

21. EBERT, ADOLF. Allgemeine Geschichte der Literatur des Mittelalters im Abendlande [to the beginning of the eleventh century]. 3 vols. Leipsic, 1874-87; 2nd edition of vol. i., 1880.

Aldhelm, Bede, Winfrid, Alcuin, etc., ii. 387-91, iii. 239-50.

Boniface, i. 622-59, ii. 12-36.
Nennius, Anglo-Saxon Chronicle,
Anglo-Saxon poetry, lives of saints homilies, iii. 3-96, 492-520.

French translation, by Joseph Aymeric and James Condamin, 3 vols., Paris, 1883-89.

21b. GRÖBER, GUSTAV. Übersicht über die lateinische Litteratur, in his Grundriss der Romanischen Philologie, ii. 97–432. Strasburg, 1896.

Extends from the middle of the 6th century to 1350.

22. Jahresberichte der Geschichtswissenschaft im Auftrage der historischen Gesellschaft zu Berlin [1878, etc.]. Berlin, 1880, etc.

Issued annually. Contains a survey of the historical works published in the various countries of Europe. Medieval England is dealt with in vols. xi.-xiii., xxvii.-xxviii. only, covering the publications of the years 1888-90, 1904-05. The reports for 1904-05, by Miss Bateson, are excellent.

- 23. *Langlois, C. V. Manuel de bibliographie historique. Pt. i. Paris, 1896.—[Revised edition], 2 pts., 1901-04.
- Pt. i. (Instruments Bibliographiques) is an admirable little book, containing an account of the principal bibliographical aids for the study of the history of the various European nations.

b. ENGLAND'S CONTINENTAL NEIGHBOURS.

The following works are all valuable.

28. Dahlmann-Waitz. Quellenkunde der deutschen Geschichte. [Ist and 2nd editions, by F. C. Dahlmann, 1830–38; 3rd, 4th, and 5th editions, by Georg Waitz, 1869–83.] 6th edition, by Ernst Steindorff. Göttingen, 1894.—7th edition, by Erich Brandenburg, Leipsic, 1906; supplement, 1907.—8th edition, by Paul Herre, Leipsic, 1912.

This is supplemented by the periodical bibliography in No. 90.

29. GAVET, G. Sources de l'histoire des institutions et du droit français. Paris, 1899.

Gavet is supplemented by Jean Brissaud, Manuel d'Histoire du Droit Français, Paris, 1898[-1904].

- 30. LORENZ, OTTOKAR. Deutschlands Geschichtsquellen im Mittelalter seit der Mitte des dreizehnten Jahrhunderts. Berlin, 1870; 3rd edition, 2 vols., 1886–87.
- 30a. MOLINIER, AUGUSTE. Les sources de l'histoire de France [to 1494]. 6 vols. (vol. vi. is an index). Paris, 1901-06. An excellent work; gives much space to English chroniclers.
- 31. MONOD, GABRIEL. Bibliographie de l'histoire de France. Paris, 1888.—Enlarged edition in preparation.

The best bibliography of French history. It is supplemented by Vidier's Répertoire (No. 99). For Gascony, see L. Barrau-Dihigo, La Gascogne, in Revue de Synthèse Historique, 1903, vi. 182-221, 277-300. For Normandy, see Henri Prentout, La Normandie, ibid., 1909, xix. 52-71, 203-222; 1910, xx. 37-72, 188-220, 306-21; also published separately, Paris, 1910.

32. PIRENNE, HENRI. Bibliographie de l'histoire de Belgique. Ghent, 1893; 2nd edition, Brussels, etc., 1902.

See also Martinus Nijhoff, Bibliotheca Historico-Neerlandica, The Hague, 1899.

- 33. WATTENBACH, WILHELM. Deutschlands Geschichtsquellen im Mittelalter bis zur Mitte des dreizehnten Jahrhunderts. Berlin, 1858.—7th edition, by Ernst Dümmler, vol. i., Stuttgart, etc., 1904.

c. GREAT BRITAIN: GENERAL HISTORY.

There is no good survey of the sources and modern literature of English history, nothing comparable with the works of Dahlmann-Waitz, Monod, and Wattenbach (Nos. 28, 31, 33). The most useful handbook is that of Gardiner and Mullinger (No. 43). The best account of the chroniclers will be found in Hardy's Catalogue of Materials (No. 45), to which valuable additions were made by Pauli and Liebermann in Monumenta Germaniæ Historica, Scriptores (Hanover, 1881-88), vols. xiii., xxvii.-xxviii. Good short accounts of the legal sources are given by Brunner and Maitland (Nos. 36, 48). For catalogues, etc., of records, see § 12. Some of the bibliographies under the names of chroniclers, statesmen, etc., in the Dictionary of National Biography (No. 305) are valuable. See also § 3, and Nos. 334, 631a, 633. A short yearly bulletin called History, describing primarily for teachers the year's work in history, is published by the Historical Association of Great Britain, under the general editorship of A. G. Little. The first number deals with works issued in 1911.

Treatises, etc.

34. BALE, JOHN. Illustrium majoris Britanniæ scriptorum summarium. Ipswich, 1548; 2nd edition, 2 pts., Basel, 1557–59.—Another version [arranged alphabetically, compiled circa 1549–57]: Index Britanniæ Scriptorum, ed. R. L. Poole and Mary Bateson. Oxford, 1902.

The earliest detailed account of the medieval writers of England; useful, but disfigured by inaccuracies and misrepresentations. Based on John Leland's Commentarii de Scriptoribus Britannicis, ed. Anthony Hall 2 vols., Oxford, 1709.

35. BRINK, BERNHARD TEN. Geschichte der englischen Litteratur [bis zur Reformation]. 2 vols. Berlin, 1877-93; 2nd edition of vol. i., Strasburg, 1899.—Translated by H. M. Kennedy and others: History of English literature. 2 vols. in 3 pts. New York, 1889 [1883]-96.

Contains a good short account of the chroniclers, especially to the middle of the 12th century.

36. Brunner, Heinrich. Geschichte der englischen Rechtsquellen im Grundriss: mit einem Anhang über die normannischen Rechtsquellen. Leipsic, 1909. pp. 75.

A revised edition of his paper in the 5th (but not in the 6th) edition of Franz von Holtzendorff's Encyklopädie der Rechtswissenschaft (1890), vol. i. pt. ii. § 4 f'also a revision of the paper as translated by Ernst Freund (revised by the author) in Select Essays in Anglo-American Legal History (No. 660a), ii. 7-52. The original paper, as it appeared in Holtzendorff's 4th edition of the Encyklopädie (1882), was translated by William Hastie: The Sources of the Law of England, Edinburgh, 1888.

37. BRUYSSEL, ERNEST VAN. Etude bibliographique sur les chroniqueurs anglais, écossais, et irlandais. Commission Royale d'Histoire [de Belgique], Compte-Rendu, 3rd series, iii. 79–118. Brussels, 1862.

A brief account, of little value.

37a. Cambridge history of English literature, ed. A. W. Ward and A. R. Waller. Cambridge, 1907, etc.

Ten volumes have thus far appeared. Chapters by various writers cover both the Latin and the vernacular literature of England. Contains bibliographies.

38. COURTNEY, W. P. A register of national bibliography. 3 vols. London, 1905–12.

A subject-index to bibliographical literature.

39. Dictionary of English history, ed. S. J. [M.] Low and F. S. Pulling. London, 1884.—'Revised' editions, 1897, 1904, and 1910.

For brief bibliographical lists, now sadly out of date, see under 'Authorities' and other topics.

40. Elze, Karl. Grundriss der englischen Philologie. Halle, 1887; 2nd edition, 1889.

Contains much information concerning books on English literature, history, antiquities, etc. The material is badly arranged, and there is no index.

41. [FLAHERTY, W. E.] The annals of England: an epitome of English history. 3 vols. Oxford, 1855-57.—Library edition, in 1 vol., 1876.

App. i. contains an account of the chroniclers, collections of records, publications of societies, etc. App. ii. is an index of statutes. These appendixes are very useful.

42. GAIRDNER, JAMES. Early chroniclers of Europe: England. London, [1879].

A good popular account of the chroniclers, to the latter part of the sixteenth century.

43. GARDINER, S. R., and MULLINGER, J. B. Introduction to the study of English history. London, 1881; 3rd edition, 1894.

Part ii., by J. B. Mullinger, contains a good brief account of the sonrces and modern literature, but devotes little attention to record publications and to continental writers.

44. GIBSON, W. S. Remarks on the medieval writers of English history. London, 1848. pp. 51.

A brief account.

- 44a. Hall, Hubert. A select bibliography for the study, sources, and literature of English mediæval economic history. London, 1914.
- 45. *HARDY, T. D. Descriptive catalogue of materials relating to the history of Great Britain and Ireland [to 1327]. Rolls Series. 3 vols. in 4 pts. London, 1862-71.

Deals mainly with the chroniclers. The appendix of vol. i. contains a useful list of the printed materials: publications of societies, collections of records and chroniclers, etc. The body of the work is mainly a catalogue of MSS.

46. HYDE, DOUGLAS. A literary history of Ireland. London, 1899.

Ch. xiii. St. Patrick.

Ch. xlii. The Brehon laws.

Ch. xli. The Irish annals. Valuable.

47. [MACRAY, W. D.] A manual of British historians, to A.D. 1600. London, 1845.

A meagre account. See also A. J. Grant, English Historians, London, 1906.

√ 48. Maitland, F. W. The materials for English legal history. Political Science Quarterly, iv. 496–518, 628–47. New York, 1889.—Reprinted in his Collected Papers (No. 656a), ii. 1–60, Cambridge, 1911; and in Select Essays (No. 660a), ii. 53–95, London, 1908.

49. Morley, Henry. English writers. 11 vols. London, etc., 1887-95.

Contains a brief account of the chroniclers.

50. O'CURRY, EUGENE. Lectures on the manuscript materials of ancient Irish history. Dublin, 1861; reprinted, 1873.

The principal older works on the Irish chroniclers are: James Ware, De Scriptoribus Hiberniæ, Dublin, 1639 (translated by Walter Harris, History of the Writers of Ireland, Dublin, 1764); William Nicolson, The Irish Historical Library, Dublin, 1724; Tanner (No. 52); and Edward O'Reilly, Account of Irish Writers, Dublin, 1820.

51. Stephens, Thomas. The literature of the Kymry. Llandovery, 1849; 2nd edition, London, 1876.

The chroniclers, 295-317.

52. TANNER, THOMAS. Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica sive de scriptoribus, etc., ed. David Wilkins. London, 1748.

A dictionary of writers, containing much valuable historical material, and in large part superseding the older works of Leland, Bale, Pits, Ware, Cave, and Nicolson. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials (No. 45), vol. i. pp. xxxvi.-xlii.

Catalogues, etc.

The following are some of the many by-ways of bibliography which are often useful to the historian who is searching for it les of books.

- 53. Allibone, S. A. A critical dictionary of English literature. 3 vols. Philadelphia, 1858–71.—Supplement, by J. F. Kirk, 2 vols., 1891.—Various reissues.

§ 3. JOURNALS, REVIEWS, PROCEEDINGS OF SOCIETIES, ETC.

- a. General: Journals and Reviews, Nos. 85-104a.
  b. General: Proceedings of Societies, etc., Nos. 105-11.
- c. Local Journals, Proceedings, etc., Nos. 112-87.

Many of the archæological and antiquarian magazines and proceedings of societies contain valuable historical papers and records, which lie buried with disquisitions on urns, fibulæ, barrows, etc. Even in London it is difficult to obtain access to all these publications, and most students shrink from the laborious but fruitful task of searching them in quest of information. The various local 'notes and queries' (most of which have come into existence during the past thirty years), though replete with trifling gossip, contain much useful material.

For bibliographical purposes the Catalogue of the British Museum under 'Academies,' the Year-Book of Learned Societies, and the Index of Archæological Papers (Nos. 54a, 62, 107), though incomplete, are valuable. See also Nos. 41, 45, 56-58; and the list of societies in Rye's Records (No. 310), app. vii.

For magazines and journals relating to genealogy, heraldry, numismatics, etc., see Nos. 298-302, 371; for record and other publication societies, § 15.

Series of monographs relating in whole or in part to medieval English history are published by certain universities and colleges (listed in this volume without reference to the universities): notably, the Studies of the London School of Economics and Political Science (Nos. 44a, 66a, 1934, 2396a, 3223 [Terry]); the Historical Series of the university of Manchester (Nos. 643 [Petit-Dutaillis's Studies], 984a, 994a, 1177a, 2803a, 2840a, 2858b); the Oxford Studies in Social and Legal History (p. 32 [Neilson], No. 1562); the Studies in Local History of University college, Reading (Nos. 352 [Stenton], 848a); the Harvard Historical Studies (Nos. 66, 696a, 727, 728b, 893, 3231b), and Harvard Economic Studies (Nos. 1215a, 3220a); the Studies in History, etc., of Columbia university (No. 2981); the Studies of the universities of Colorado (No. 3089, Willard), Missouri (Nos. 704a, 3195a), and Nebraska (No. 671); the history series of the Bulletin of the university of Wisconsin (No. 1586a); and the Yale Historical Publications (p. 618, Mitchell). Many doctoral dissertations of other universities, not issued in formal series. also relate to medieval English history. A volume of Aberystwyth Studies was published by the University college of Wales in 1912; and see No. 1134a. For some translations and reprints of the university of Pennsylvania, see Nos. 1274 (Fairley), 1454 (Munro), 3225b, p. 227 (Howland). See also No. 148a. records published by universities, see Nos. 559a-60.

Besides the periodicals mentioned below, the following will be found useful: Archiv der Gesellschaft für ältere Deutsche Geschichtskunde (12 vols., Frankfort and Hanover, 1820–74), and Neues Archiv, etc. (Hanover, 1876, etc.); Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen und Literaturen, Brunswick, 1846, etc. (index, or 'register,' of vols. i.–l., 1874; of vols. li.–cxx., 3 vols. in 2, 1900–1908); Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte, 26 vols., Göttingen, 1862–86 ('register' of vols. i.–xx., 1880); Historisches Jahrbuch, Münster, etc., 1880, etc.; Vierteljahrschrift für Social- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte, Leipsic, 1903, etc.; Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, Paris, 1839, etc. (indexes, or 'tables,' of vols. i.—lxx., 6 vols. in 5, 1849—1911); Revue de Synthèse Historique, Paris, 1900, etc.

In the following lists the date of the initial number or part of the first volume of a publication is put within square brackets.

a. GENERAL: JOURNALS AND REVIEWS.

- 85. American Historical Review. New York, etc., 1895, etc.—Index of vols. i.-x., 1906.

CHAPTER II

AUXILIARIES TO HISTORICAL STUDY

THE historian must turn to account all branches of knowledge, but there are certain studies, kindred to history, which he finds particularly useful. These are called by the Germans 'Hülfswissenschaften,' and by the French 'sciences auxiliaires.' Freeman (No. 7) calls them 'the satellites of history.' Their relations to history are well explained in Bernheim's Lehrbuch (No. 2), 5th edition, 279-323. For the literature of the subjects, see ibid.; Meister (No. 11a); Jahresberichte (No. 22); and the bibliographies of Dahlmann-Waitz and Monod (Nos. 28, 31).

§ 4. PHILOLOGY: DICTIONARIES AND GLOSSARIES.

- a. English, Nos. 188-99.
- b. French, Nos. 200-209.
- c. Latin, Nos. 210-15.
- d. Celtic, Nos. 215a-n.

This section includes only those works which are of most service to students of English history. There is a useful catalogue of glossaries, etc., in W. W. Skeat's Etymological Dictionary of the English Language, new edition, Oxford, 1910, pp. xxx.-xli. In seeking the meanings of old words the historian is frequently thrown upon his own resources, for the existing dictionaries, especially of Low Latin and Anglo-French, are very incomplete. Help is often afforded by the brief glossaries appended to many of the volumes of the Rolls Series (for example, the Monumenta Gildhallæ, and the works of Higden, Pecock, Robert of Gloucester, and Robert of Brunne), or by the glossaries in the publications of the Selden and Surtees societies and in such works as Stevenson's Records of Nottingham, Höhlbaum's Hansisches Urkundenbuch, vol. iii., Gross's Gild Merchant, Nichols's edition of Britton, Atkinson's Vie de St. Auban, Lamond's Walter of Henley, Miss Neilson's Customary Rents (Oxford, 1910), etc. A bibliography of such glossaries would be useful.

For works dealing with the structure of the medieval languages, see Bernheim (No. 2), 5th edition, 286-9; Gustav Gröber, Grundriss der Romanischen Philologie, 2 vols. in 5, Strasburg, 1888-1902 (2nd edition, vol. i., 1904-06); and Hermann Paul. Grundriss der Germanischen Philologie, 2 vols. in 3, Strasburg. 1891-93 (2nd edition, 3 vols. in 4, 1900-09). The best account of Anglo-French is in W. W. Skeat's Principles of English Etymology, 2nd series, Oxford, 1891, pp. 1-136. See also Behrens (No. 200a); Johan Vising, Etude sur le Dialecte Anglo-Normand du XIIº Siècle, Upsala, 1882, pp. 104; Emil Busch, Laut- und Formenlehre der Anglonormannischen Sprache des XIV. Jahrhunderts, Greifswald, 1887, pp. 71; Westphal (No. 352); and especially Maitland's introduction to Year Book 1-2 Edward II. (see p. 34, below). On the Scandinavian element in the English language, see Erik Björkman, Scandinavian Loan-Words in Middle English, 2 pts., Halle, 1900-1902.

a. ENGLISH.

See Nos. 215, 3224a; and R. P. Wülker, Grundriss zur Geschichte der Angelsächsischen Litteratur (Leipsic, 1885), 99–101.

188. Bosworth, Joseph. An Anglo-Saxon dictionary, based on the manuscript collections of Joseph Bosworth, ed. T. N. Toller. Oxford, 1882–[98].—Supplement, pt. i. (A–E), 1908.

The best Anglo-Saxon dictionary; it entirely replaces Bosworth's Dictionary of the Anglo-Saxon Language (London, 1838), which is untrustworthy.

- 189. Catholicon Anglicum, an English-Latin wordbook, dated 1483, ed. S. J. H. Herrtage. Early English Text Soc. London, 1881.—The same edition, Camden Soc., London, 1882.
- 190. Century dictionary (The), ed. W. D. Whitney. 6 vols New York, [1889-91].—Supplement, ed. B. E. Smith, 2 vols., [1909].—Revised edition, by B. E. Smith: Century dictionary and cyclopedia. 12 vols. New York, [1911].
- 191. Grein, C. W. M. Sprachschatz der angelsächsischen Dichter. 2 vols. Cassel, etc., 1861–64.—New edition, by J. J. Köhler, 1 vol., Heidelberg, 1912.

A good glossary of words found in Anglo-Saxon poetry.

192. HALLIWELL, J. O. A dictionary of archaic and provincial words, obsolete words, proverbs, and ancient customs, from the fourteenth century. 2 vols. London, 1846; 11th edition, 1889; 6th edition, in 1 vol., 1904.

- 199. WRIGHT, JOSEPH. The English dialect dictionary. 6 vols. London, 1898 [1896]—1905.

Contains English dialect words which are known to have been in use at any time during the last two hundred years in England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. The eighty volumes published by the English Dialect Society between 1873 and 1896 are incorporated in this dictionary. At the end of vol. vi. Wright reprints his English Dialect Grammar, 1905.

b. FRENCH.

'I know of nothing more disgraceful to such a land as England, the lawyers of which have made more or less use of Anglo-French for some eight hundred years, than the fact that no one has yet taken in hand to make a reasonably useful dictionary, or even a vocabulary, of this highly important language: 'W. W. Skeat, Principles of English Etymology, 2nd series, 1891, p. 26. We have now, however, Maitland's paper, Of the Anglo-French Language in the Early Year Books, in Year Book 1–2 Edward II. (Selden Soc., London, 1903), introd., xxxiii.—lxxxi.; reprinted in Cambridge History of English Literature (No. 37a), vol. i. ch. xx. For town French of the fourteenth century, see Studer's supplement to his edition of the Oak Book of Southampton (No. 2391c). A glossary of Anglo-French is being prepared by L. O. Pike.

The best glossary of Low Latin; a rich mine of information concerning the middle ages, especially in France. Some of the additions made by Favre are of doubtful value. W. H. Maigne d'Arnis's Lexicon Manuale ad Scriptores Mediæ et Infimæ Latinitatis (Paris, 1858, reprinted 1866) is a useful compendium of Du Cange's work, with some additions. # § 5. CHRONOLOGY.

The most nearly complete treatise is Ideler's. Giry's Manuel (No. 233), bk. ii., contains an admirable account, with elaborate tables. The best handbooks in English are those of Bond and In German the best theoretical manual is Rühl's, Nicolas. the best for practical use Grotefend's. There is an essay, entitled Chronology of Medieval Historians, in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 103-28; and a review of the literature relating to chronology, in Mittheilungen des Instituts für Oesterreichische Geschichtsforschung, 1904, xxv. 338-51. For ready reference, use may be made of Cappelli or Grotefend; of Augustus De Morgan's Book of Almanacs, London, 1851, pp. 89 (3rd edition, by E. J. Worman, Cambridge, 1907); or of J. E. Doliarius's Zweitausendjährige Kalendertafel (with supplementary sheet), and his Janus, ein Datumweiser für alle Jahrhunderte, both issued recently at Leipsic. Fuller tables will be found in Robert Schram's Kalendariographische und Chronologische Tafeln, Leipsic, 1908. A special phase of chronology is treated by Gustav Bilfinger, Die Mittelalterlichen Horen und die Modernen Stunden, Stuttgart, 1892. See also No. 235.

216. Art (L') de vérifier les dates. Paris, 1750.—4th edition, by N. V. de Saint-Allais and others, 44 vols., 1818-44.

The best of the older works. The 3rd edition, 3 vols., 1783-87, is more convenient to use than the 4th.

X217. BOND, J. J. Handy-book of rules and tables for verifying dates. London, 1866; 4th edition, 1889.

One of the most useful books for students of English history, but the parts that deal with general chronology are in need of revision. Contains tables of regnal years.

An excellent book, dealing mainly with Germany. Contains a valuable glossary and list of saints. His Taschenbuch der Zeitrechnung, 1898 (3rd edition, 1910), is a summary of the work published in 1891-98; and he has a briefer summary in Meister's Grundriss (No. 11a), i. 267-319.

- 221. IDELER, LUDWIG. Handbuch der Chronologie. 2 vols. Berlin, 1825–26; 2nd edition, Breslau, 1883.

The most nearly complete treatise on the theory and history of chronological systems, but the author does not devote much attention to questions which interest students of diplomatics. His Lehrbuch der Chronologie, Berlin, 1831, is an abridgment of the larger work.

§ 6. PALÆOGRAPHY AND DIPLOMATICS.

- a. Manuals and Treatises, Nos. 226-50.
- b. Facsimiles, Nos. 251-66.

Palæography is the study of the handwriting of former ages. Diplomatics is the study of the construction or constituent parts of records whereby we are enabled to determine their age and authenticity or historical value. 'Le paléographe,' says Léon Gautier, 'étudie le corps des chartes, le diplomatiste en étudie l'âme.' Mabillon was the founder of the science of diplomatics; and the greatest English diplomatist was George Hickes, whose monumental work (No. 234), as well as the whole subject of diplomatics, has been sadly neglected in England. In general, Hickes accepts the critical canons laid down by Mabillon, but combats some of the latter's views. Madox, Kemble, and Hardy (Nos. 238, 1419, 2108) contributed to our knowledge of charters; and recently scholars like Round, Maitland, Miss Bateson, and Stevenson have begun to deal with records in a thoroughly scientific manner.

The list given below is fairly complete as regards the books produced in England, but comprises only a selection of the best continental works. For additions to this list, see Giry, Manuel, 37–50; E. D. Grand, Leçon d'Ouverture du Cours de Paléographie (Montpellier, 1890), 15–24; Prou, Manuel, 3–12; Thompson, Introduction, 571–83 (poorly arranged); and the periodical reports of Bresslau, Wattenbach, and Tangl in the Jahresberichte (No. 22) since 1879. A good short account of the literature will be found in Wattenbach's Schriftwesen, 1–39. For useful bibliographies, see Bulletin of the John Rylands Library (Manchester, 1903), i. 67–79; and M. F. Moore's Two Select Bibliographies of Mediæval Historical Study (London, 1912), 29–70.

The best general work on palæography is Wattenbach's

Schriftwesen; the best manual in English is Thompson's; for practical purposes the most useful handbook is Prou's. There are convenient summaries of palæography and diplomatics in Meister's Grundriss (No. 11a.) A good introduction to the study of these subjects is Poole's essay on the Teaching of Palæography and Diplomatic, in Essays on the Teaching of History (No. 5). New light has been thrown upon the history of writing, especially in the early Middle Ages, by the studies of Traube, collected in his Vorlesungen und Abhandlungen, vols. i.-ii., Munich, 1909-11. For the abbreviated forms of Latin words, and the signs of contraction, the works of Cappelli, Chassant, Martin, and Walther are particularly useful; see also the lists of contracted words in T. D. Hardy's Registrum Dunelmense (Rolls Series, 1878), vol. iv., and the Pipe Roll Society's Introduction to the Study of the Pipe Rolls, 1884. The best treatises on diplomatics are those of Bresslau and Giry. W. H. Stevenson has some interesting remarks concerning the early history of the English chancery in the English Historical Review, 1896, xi. 731-44; he rejects the view of Aronius (No. 1410), Giry, and others, that there was no chancery in the Anglo-Saxon period. On all such matters, reference should now be made to Hall's Studies (No. 233a). Cf. Wolfgang Keller, Angelsächsische Palaeographie, 2 pts. (with 13 plates), Berlin, 1906; and see the atlas accompanying Delisle's Recueil des Actes (No. 2107a).

b. FACSIMILES.

Many of the preceding works contain facsimiles. See also Hardy, Catalogue of Materials (No. 45), vol. iii., 20 plates; and the Epinal Glossary (No. 1483). Facsimiles of Welsh and Irish MSS. will be found in the Series of Welsh Texts edited by John Rhys and J. G. Evans, Oxford, 1887, etc. (The Text of the Bruts from the Red Book of Hergest, The Text of the Book of Llan Dâv, etc., Nos. 1374, 1728, 2674), notably Facsimile of the Black Book of Carmarthen, 1888 ('diplomatic' reproduction of the same MS., Pwllheli, 1906); and in various other 'books,' like the Book of Leinster, published by the Royal Irish Academy. Most of the following collections are elaborate and expensive. Those published by the English Ordnance Survey (Nos. 256, 258, 260-62) are marred by many inaccuracies. For fuller lists of facsimiles, see Gabriel Meier's Die Fortschritte der Palaeographie mit Hilfe der Photographie, in Centralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, 1900, xvii. 1-32, 113-30, 191-8, 255-78; [Henri Omont], Listes des Recueils de Facsimilés et des Reproductions de Manuscrits conservés à la Bibliothèque Nationale, in Revue des Bibliothèques, 1903, xiii. 111-178 (also, re-arranged alphabetically by authors, in Bulletin de la Société Française de Reproductions de Manuscrits à Peintures, Paris, 1911; 2nd edition, separately printed, 1912); and Poupardin and Prou, Liste des Recueils de Facsimile de Chartes, in Actes du Congrès International pour la Reproduction des Manuscrits, des Monnaies, et des Sceaux (Brussels, 1905), 217-57. There are also valuable facsimiles of some of the chief literary texts; e.g. that of the Ellesmere Chaucer, 2 vols., Manchester University Press, 1911.

a. SPHRAGISTICS.

There are good accounts of this subject in Bresslau's Handbuch (No. 228), ch. xix., and Giry's Manuel (No. 233), ch. ix. See also Nos. 235, 284. There is a long list of works concerning seals in A List of Books and Pamphlets in the National Art Library, South Kensington Museum, illustrating Seals, London, 1886, pp. 46. A recent popular handbook, English Seals, by J. H. Bloom, London, 1906, cannot be commended. It is much to be regretted that the Public Record Office has published nothing of value with reference to the vast collection of seals which it contains,

b. HERALDRY.

The most elaborate treatise on heraldry is that of Woodward and Burnett. Boutell's and Fox-Davies's are the best of the numerous manuals. The dictionaries of Burke, Elvin, and Papworth are useful books of reference. For the bibliography of heraldry, see No. 290, and the works of Gatfield and Moule (Nos. 296-7). The periodicals, guides, etc., in § 8 are also useful.

§ 8. BIOGRAPHY AND GENEALOGY.

- a. Bibliographies and Journals, Nos. 296-302.
- b. Dictionaries, Guides, etc., Nos. 303-11.
- c. Peerages, Nos. 312-21.
- d. Royalty, Chancellors, Justices, etc., Nos. 322-34.
- e. History of Names, Nos. 335-42.

The best biographical work of reference is the Dictionary of National Biography (No. 305); the most nearly complete 'peerage' is Cokayne's (No. 315). There is a long list of works on the genealogy of royal and noble families in Sims's Manual (No. 311), 178-92. See also §§ 16b, 38d, 47d, 56d, 70c.

An index of the pedigrees contained in every important genealogical and topographical work.

309. PHILLIMORE, W. P. W. How to write the history of a family: a guide for the genealogist. London, 1887; 2nd edition, 1888.—Supplement, 1896; 2nd edition, 1900.

A useful work, containing much bibliographical information. His Pedigree Work (London, 1900, pp. 73) is more elementary.

X 310. RYE, WALTER. Records and record searching: a guide to the genealogist and topographer. London, etc., 1888; 2nd edition, 1897.

Valuable.

311. SIMS, RICHARD. A manual for the genealogist, topographer, antiquary, and legal professor. London, 1856; 2nd edition, 1861; new edition, 1888.

The three editions are printed from the same plates. The work is still useful, though sadly in need of revision.

c. PEERAGES.

See J. H. Round's volumes, No. 3038a.

312. Banks, T. C. The dormant and extinct baronage of England. 4 vols. London, 1807-37.

This work originally appeared in 3 vols. 1807-09. In 1837 his Stemmata Anglicana (1825), which contained some emendations and additions to the Baronage, was published as a fourth volume.

313. Burke, John, J. B., and A. P. A genealogical and heraldic dictionary of the peerage and baronetage of the British empire. London, 1826; 76th edition, 1914.

This well-known work should be used with caution. Mr. R. E. Chester Waters (Parish Registers, 1883, p. 39) calls it a 'gorgeous repertory of genealogical mythology.' For the untitled, see Burke's Genealogical and Heraldic Dictionary of the Landed Gentry, 3 vols., London, 1847-49, and later editions.

314. CLEVELAND, Duchess of [C. L. W. ROWLETT]. The Battle abbey roll. 3 vols. London, 1889.

Deals with the pedigrees of many noble families; professes to be a list of the principal followers of William the Conqueror who took part in the battle of Hastings. The original is not extant (it was borrowed from the abbot of Battle by Henry V. and was never returned), and the various copies have little historical value. The duchess of Cleveland admits that, owing to the numerous interpolations, 'its value as an authority is irretrievably lost.' See Joseph Hunter, On the (so-called) Roll of Battle Abbey, Sussex Archæol. Soc., Collectious, 1853, vi. 1-14; he claims that the existing copies or lists were not ascribed to Battle abbey until the time of Elizabeth. See also G. [F.] Duckett, Remarks on a Battle Abbey Roll, ibid., 1878, xxviii. 127-31; and A. E. P. Gray, The Roll of Battle Abbey, Historic Soc. of Lanc. and Chesh., Trans., 1895, xlvi. 1-18.

× 315. *C[OKAYNE], G. E. Complete peerage of England, Scotland, Ireland, Great Britain, and United Kingdom, extant, extinct, or dormant. 8 vols. London, 1887–98.—New edition, revised and much enlarged [to be in 12 vols.], by Vicary Gibbs, 1910, etc.

The most comprehensive work of this kind in the English language.

- 316. COLLINS, ARTHUR. The peerage of England. London, 1709.—New edition, by S. E. Brydges, 9 vols., London, 1812.
- 317. *DOYLE, J. E. The official baronage of England, showing the succession, dignities, and offices of every peer from 1066 to 1885. 3 vols. London, 1886.

Valuable, but deals only with the higher grades of peerage, giving the offices held by dukes, marquises, earls, and viscounts.

318. *DUGDALE, WILLIAM. The baronage of England. 2 vols. London, 1675-76.

Though many of Dugdale's pedigrees are wrong, his work remains of great value for the middle ages, especially for the post-Norman periods.

- 319. FOSTER, JOSEPH. The peerage, baronetage, and knightage of the British empire. 5 vols. London, 1879-83.

  Valuable.
- 320. LODGE, EDMUND. The peerage and baronetage of the British empire. London, 1831; 81st edition, [1912].
- 321. NICOLAS, [N.] H. The historic peerage of England, being a new edition of the Synopsis of the peerage of England, by the late Sir Harris Nicolas [2 vols., 1825]. Revised by William Courthope. London, 1857.

Contains also the succession of bishops and an essay on dignities. The remainder of the work is now replaced by Cokayne's Peerage, but its conciseness and convenient form make it still useful.

d. ROYALTY, CHANCELLORS, JUSTICES, ETC.

§ 9. GEOGRAPHY AND TOPOGRAPHY.

- u. Treatises, Nos. 343-52.
- b. Dictionaries and Gazetteers, Nos. 353-61.
- c. Historical Atlases, Nos. 362-8.

✓ For the physical geography of Britain in relation to English history, see H. J. Mackinder, Britain and the British Seas, London, 1902.

Political geography has long been considered an important part of historical study, and in recent years the scientific § 9] investigation of place-names has thrown much light on the early history of European nations. For bibliographical purposes Egli's Namenkunde (No. 345) is valuable; see also Karl Elze, Englische Philologie (No. 40), 100-133. There is a good account of the history of place-names, especially in France, with a bibliography of the subject, in Giry's Manuel (No. 233), 377-420. For Anglo-Saxon names, see Kemble, Codex Diplomaticus, vols. iii., vi., and Saxons in England, ii. 550-58; Leo, Rectitudines (No. 349). For the influence of the Danes, see § 42, especially the works of Worsaae and Ferguson; Taylor, Words and Places (No. 351); Harald Lindkvist, Middle-English Place-names of Scandinavian Origin, pt. i., Upsala, 1912.

One of the greatest difficulties that the historical investigator encounters is the identification of old place-names. All the general dictionaries (Nos. 353–61) are very incomplete. They must be supplemented by the indexes in such works as Stubbs's edition of Hoveden, the Calendars of the Patent and Close Rolls, the Catalogue of Ancient Deeds (No. 2772), the Index to the Charters and Rolls in the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum (No. 516a), the publications of the Selden Society, Petrie's Monumenta, Kemble's Codex Diplomaticus, vol. vi., Maitland's edition of Bracton's Note Book, Tanner's Notitia Monastica, Cowell's Law Dictionary, 1708, appendix, etc. See also Martin, Record Interpreter (No. 239), 345–422; Pearson, Historical Maps (No. 366), 12–38.

The bibliographies of topographical works are given above, in § 2. Lewis's dictionaries (No. 361), though not works of much research, will be found useful for purposes of general reference. For topographical guides, etc., see Nos. 301, 308-11; and for histories of counties, boroughs, manors, etc., § 24, especially many sections in the Victoria county histories (No. 839).

c. HISTORICAL ATLASES.

The best general maps are those of the Ordnance Survey, on the scale of one inch to the mile. Maps on a larger scale can also be had. See Catalogue of Maps, etc., of the Ordnance Survey of England and Wales (London, 1895); and similar catalogues for Ireland and Scotland. A useful and practical, as well as less expensive, series is J. G. Bartholomew's set of New Reduced Ordnance Survey Maps, prepared on a scale of two miles to the inch (four miles to the inch for Ireland), published by Bartholomew and Company, Geographical Institute, Edinburgh. Convenient general historical atlases for students are those by Ramsay Muir, London, 1911, and W. R. Shepherd, New York, 1911. Some of the newest historical maps are published in various general historical works, such as the Political History of England (No. 632a).

§ 10. NUMISMATICS.

- a. Bibliographies and Journals, Nos. 369-71.
- b. General Treatises, Nos. 372-82.
- c. Particular Periods, Nos. 383-92.

The most useful general treatises are those of Hawkins, Kenyon, and Ruding. Evans (No. 386) gives the best account of the earliest coins of Britain; Hildebrand and Keary (Nos. 388-9) are the best authorities on Anglo-Saxon coins. A useful short account of Anglo-Saxon coinage will be found in Reinhold Schmid's Gesetze der Angelsachsen, 1858, pp. 591-5. In Hubert Hall's edition of the Red Book of the Exchequer (iii. 991-1010, and cf. ibid., iii. preface) there is a valuable tract concerning the mint, entitled Tractatus Novæ Monetæ, written in the second half of the fourteenth century; and (iii. 979-90, 1072-81) some documents of the thirteenth century relating to the mint and coinage.

- b. Architecture, Nos. 421-41.
- c. Costume, Armour, and Weapons, Nos. 442-56a.

The Catalogue of the Avery Library (No. 421) is useful for bibliographical purposes. For the transactions of archæological societies, see § 3: especially Archæologia, published by the Society of Antiquaries of London; the Journal of the British Archæological Association; and the Journal of the Archæological Institute of Great Britain. Some of the publications of the local societies (§ 15) are also valuable. Recent volumes of Archæologia contain useful archæological surveys of various counties: George Payne, Kent, li. 447; John Evans, Hertfordshire, lii. 245; R. S. Ferguson, Cumberland and Westmorland, liii. 485. The Society of Antiquaries of London has continued these surveys as a series of separate publications, which now includes William Harrison's Lancashire, 1896, J. O. Bevan's Herefordshire, 1896, and T. J. George's Northants, 1904. For archæological magazines (the Antiquary, Archæological Review, Reliquary, etc.), see § 3a. See also §§ 27–30, 42 (prehistoric, Celtic, Roman, and Danish remains); various sections in the Victoria county histories (No. 839); and § 24 (castles). For some of the best of the local work, see No. 1177b.

In October, 1908, a royal commission was appointed to make an inventory of the Ancient and Historical Monuments and Constructions connected with or illustrative of the contemporary culture, civilisation, and conditions of life of the people in England, excluding Monmouthshire, from the earliest time to the year 1700,' and to specify those which seemed most worthy of preservation. This commission, styled the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments and Constructions of England, printed with its first report, in 1910 (see Parl. Papers, 1910, vol. xxxvi.), an inventory of the historical monuments in Hertfordshire, and in 1912-13 it published an inventory of Buckinghamshire in two volumes. A similar commission for Wales and Monmouthshire, appointed a few months earlier than the English one, also made its first report in 1910, and published an inventory of the county of Montgomery in 1911, of Flint in 1912, and of Radnor in 1913. A like commission for Scotland has reported on Berwickshire (1909), Sutherland (1911), Caithness (1911), Wigtown (1912), and Kirkcudbrightshire (1914).

CHAPTER III

ARCHIVES AND LIBRARIES

§ 12. PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE AND HISTORY OF PUBLIC RECORDS.

Owing mainly to the blessings of insularity and to the absence of violent domestic revolutions, the national archives of England are older, richer, more continuous, and more nearly complete than those of any other European nation. When we consider their neglect, migrations, and vicissitudes in modern times, it is indeed marvellous that so much has been spared. Before the thirteenth century there was probably no separate record office in England. The royal muniments were safeguarded with the regalia, money chests, and saintly relics in the various royal treasuries; and the exchequer buildings, together with the neighbouring chapter house of Westminster, continued to be the great repositories of fiscal and judicial records until the nineteenth century. Since the thirteenth century the Tower of London had been the chief repository for the chancery records, i.e. the enrolments of charters, patents, statutes, and many other documents that were drawn up under the supervision of the chancellor, the chief secretary of state for all departments. teenth and fifteenth centuries much of the chancellor's work was performed by the keeper of the rolls of chancery (later called master of the rolls) at the Rolls Chapel Office, where from I Richard III. most of the chancery records were permanently preserved. In modern times the State Paper Office and many other repositories were established. Hardy, in his Memoirs of Lord Langdale, ii. 112, 143, says that there were more than sixty such record offices in London before the reign of Victoria.

Prynne, in the dedication to his Brevia Parliamentaria Rediviva, laments that the records in the Tower 'had for many years by past layer buried in one confused chaos under corroding, putrifying cobwebs, dust [and] filth; ' and he tells us that he proceeded to 'rake up this dung-heap.' In the eighteenth century various parliamentary committees complained of the neglected condition of the public archives: see Nos. 485-6. In the year 1800 there was an exhaustive investigation of the subject (No. 487), which in the same year resulted in the creation of the first Record Commission of Great Britain, 'to provide for the better arrangement, preservation, and more convenient use of the said records.' New commissions were issued in 1806, 1817, 1821. 1825, and 1831; the sixth and last expired in 1837. During the thirty-seven years of their activity the commissioners spent much money in printing the records of England, Wales, and Scotland (see No. 538), but accomplished very little for their care and preservation. The editorial work of the publications was severely criticised; charges of corruption and jobbery were freely made and answered. Cooper, Nicolas, and Palgrave (Nos. 461, 476-8, 480, 2004) were particularly prominent in these acrimonious personal dissensions. See also Nos. 472, 488-9; and the pamphlets, magazines, etc., mentioned in Lowndes's Bibliographer's Manual (No. 58), 2063-4, and in Thomas's Notes (No. 497), app. H, I. In 1836 a committee of the house of commons made an elaborate report on the affairs of the Record Commission (No. 488), calling attention to the unsafe and filthy condition of many valuable muniments. As a result of the recommendations contained in this report, the commission was allowed to expire in 1837, after having issued its general report (No. 489). In 1838 the Public Record Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, was passed, 'to establish one Record Office and a better custody, and to allow the free use of the said records.' It put the master of the rolls, Lord Langdale, in charge of all the public records, empowered the treasury to provide a suitable building for their custody, created a deputy keeper of the public records, who since 1840 has issued valuable annual reports (No. 491), and ordained that the term 'public records' should 'be taken to mean all rolls, records, writs, books, proceedings, decrees, warrants, accounts, papers, and documents whatsoever of a public nature belonging to His Majesty' (Pike, Public Records, o). In 1856-59 most of the ancient muniments were removed from their various repositories to the present Public Record Office, in Fetter Lane, where much attention has been devoted to their arrangement and preservation, and where investigators find the privilege of using the national records as free from restrictions as in any other country of Europe. In October, 1910, a Royal Commission was appointed to 'inquire and report' as to the working of the Public Record Act, the arrangements now in operation for the collection, control, custody, and preservation of public records in England and Wales, the custody of local records of a public nature, the training of archivists, etc. Its first report was published in 1912.

There used to be separate collections of records for the various extraordinary, or palatine, jurisdictions in England, such as Durham, Lancashire, Cheshire, Cornwall, and Wales; but the archives of Cheshire and Wales were removed to the Public Record Office about sixty years ago, and those of Durham and the duchy of Lancaster about forty years ago (see No. 2296 and p. 546). Some of the records of the duchy of Cornwall are still in charge of the duchy office in London.

Ireland and Scotland have separate record offices. The Irish Record Commission (No. 490) was created in 1810 and expired in 1830. In 1867 provision was made for a general record repository at Dublin, and since 1869 the deputy keeper of the public records in Ireland has issued annual reports (No. 492). For the history of the records of Ireland, see No. 457.

There is no adequate history of the English records and their repositories. The best accounts will be found in the works of Edwards, Hall, and Thomas; see also Nos. 458, 462-8, 485-8. There is no book in English like Franz von Löher's Archivehre, Grundzüge der Geschichte, Aufgaben, etc., unserer Archive, 1890; or like Langlois and Stein's Les Archives de l'Histoire de France (No. 471). The official guide to the public records is Scargill Bird's: No. 459. Rye (No. 310) gives much useful information. Many valuable calendars, lists, and indexes of records have been printed (see No. 473 and § 53), and many manuscript indexes are accessible in the Public Record Office.

b. LONDON.

Among repositories of manuscript material relating to English history, the British Museum ranks next to the Public Record Office. It contains twelve distinct collections (over 50,500 volumes and 76,000 charters and rolls), the most valuable of which for students of history are the Cotton, Harley, Lansdowne, and Additional MSS. The smaller collections acquired from time to time, excepting those purchased with the income of the Egerton fund, are usually merged in the Additional MSS. These are numbered consecutively (up to No. 38,091 at the close of the year 1910); Nos. 1–4100 form the Sloane collection. The Additional and the Egerton MSS. are described in the Catalogue of Additions (No. 505). There is a separate printed catalogue of each of the other collections, except the New Royal or King's collection, the catalogue of which is in manuscript only. There is also accessible in the British Museum a useful General Class-Catalogue of the various collections. For facsimiles of some of the MSS., see Nos. 255, 257.

The library of the Inner Temple contains the valuable Petyt MSS., and the library of Lincoln's Inn the Hale MSS. In Lambeth palace will be found the registers of the archbishops of Canterbury, numerous ancient charters, court rolls of manors, rentals, etc.; and in the library of the Society of Antiquaries are Liber Winton, wardrobe accounts, the registers of Peterborough abbey, etc. The archives of the College of Arms are of special interest to genealogists.

CHAPTER IV

PRINTED COLLECTIONS OF SOURCES

UNDER this head are included both chroniclers and records. For works dealing with their history, see §§ 2, 12.

Much was accomplished in the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries by Parker, Twysden, Savile, Hearne, and other editors (§ 16a) to make the texts of the medieval chroniclers of England more accessible to students; but their works, judged by our present canons of criticism, were unscholarly. In 1823 the Record Commission entrusted to Henry Petrie the task of editing a new collection of chronicles and other materials of English history extending to the close of Henry VII.'s reign. The work was to comprise about twenty-five volumes. After all the text of the first volume had been prepared and materials had been gathered for other volumes, the work was suspended, in 1835, by order of the commissioners, and volume i. was not published until 1848 (No. 537).

In 1855 the master of the rolls, Sir John Romilly, obtained permission to publish the well-known Calendars of State Papers, and in 1857 he was authorised to undertake the series of Chronicles and Memorials (No. 539). The plan of Petrie's Monumenta was abandoned, and it was determined to treat each chronicle or collection of documents as a separate work complete in itself, and to confide it to a competent editor. This series now includes most of the prominent chroniclers of England, and some of them are admirably edited. In 1896 the master of the rolls ceased to undertake new publications of texts, and is now devoting the money at his disposal mainly to the printing of calendars of records. The Rolls Series (which technically includes all the series published by the master of rolls, but in ordinary phrase has come to be applied specifically to the Chronicles and Memorials) has given a new impulse to the study of English Its success in this and other directions has in the main been in marked contrast with that of the Record Commissioners' publications (No. 538).

Apart from these two series the English government, in the eighteenth century, provided for the publication of Rymer's Fædera, Domesday Book, and the Rolls of Parliament; a commission created in 1825 issued the State Papers of Henry VIII.'s Reign (11 vols., 1830–52); and three volumes of extracts from the issue rolls were published in 1835–37 under the direction of the comptroller of the receipt of the exchequer (Nos. 1932–3).

The services which the government has rendered to historical students have been supplemented by the efforts of learned societies (§ 15). The English Historical Society, the Caxton Society, and the Anglia Christiana Society accomplished some good work in the second quarter of the nineteenth century, but perished from lack of support. The Surtees Society and the Camden Society, established in 1834 and 1838 respectively, have published many volumes of chronicles and records. Within the past thirty years the Pipe Roll Society, the Selden Society, the Canterbury and York Society, and various local record societies have done much to make the sources more accessible.

§ 14. PUBLICATIONS OF THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT.

a. CHRONICLERS, ETC.

On the old collections of chroniclers, mentioned below, see the introduction to Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537); Hardy, Catalogue of Materials (No. 45), vol. i. pp. xliii.-xlvi. and app.; Annals of England (No. 41), app. i. § 4. Many of these older editions of the chroniclers have been superseded by the editions in the Rolls Series (No. 539), but in some cases (e.g. Roger of Wendover, No. 1864) they continue to be the better. For details concerning the works mentioned in the brief tables of contents appended to the titles given below, see §§ 34, 48. Some small collections of chroniclers for the period 1066-1485 will be found in § 48a. Translated extracts from English chronicles bearing on Scottish history, A.D. 500-1286, are printed in A. O. Anderson's Scottish Annals from English Chroniclers, London, 1908. Sir A. C. Lawrie's Annals of the Reigns of Malcolm and William, Kings of Scotland, 1153-1214, Glasgow, 1910, also contains extracts (not translated) from English chronicles. See too Hilda Johnstone's Hundred Years of English History, 1216-1327, London, 1912.

The contents of continental collections that contain chronicles which throw light on English history may be learned from Potthast's Bibliotheca (No. 25). Another series containing English material is the Collection de Textes pour servir à l'Etude et à l'Enseignement de l'Histoire, Paris, 1886, etc. This series includes Matzke's Lois de Guillaume le Conquérant, Mandrot's edition of the Mémoires of Philippe de Comines, Bémont's Chartes des Libertés Anglaises, Cosneau's Grands Traités de la Guerre de Cent Ans (Nos. 1407, 1757, 2013, 2118a); Annales Gandenses (1296–1310), Chronique Artésienne (1295–1304), and Chronique Tournaisienne (1296–1314), all edited by Frantz Funck-Brentano, 1896–99; and Recueil d'Annales Angevines et Vendômoises, edited by Louis Halphen, 1903.

Berlin, 1877—1913.—Epistolæ. Vols. i.—vii. pt. i. Berlin, 1887—1912.—Indices Monumentorum Germaniæ historicorum. By Oswald Holder-Egger and Karl Zeumer. Hanover, etc., 1890.

Vol. xiii. of the Auctores contains Mommsen's editions of Gildas, Nennius, and Bede's Chronica.

The Epistolæ contain the register of Pope Gregory I., and the letters of Boniface, Alcuin, etc.

The Scriptores, though relating mainly to Germany, contain extracts to the close of the 13th century, accompanied by valuable critical apparatus, from the following English chroniclers: vol. v., Florence of Worcester, ed. Waitz; vol. vi., Robert of Torigni, ed. L. C. Bethmann; vol. vii., Adam of Bremen, ed. J. M. Lappenberg; vol. x., William of Malmesbury, ed. Waitz; vol. xv., life of Alcuin, ed. Wilhelm Arndt; vol. xvi., Annalium Angliæ Excerpta, ed. Pertz; vol. xix., Encomium Emmæ, Annales Lindisfarnenses, and Annales Dunelmenses, ed. Pertz; vol. xx., Historia Pontificalis [John of Salisbury], ed. Arndt; and Ordericus Vitalis, ed. Pertz; vol. xxvi., Histoire des Ducs de Normandie, and Geoffrey of Vigeois, ed. Holder-Egger; Rigord and Guillaume le Breton, ed. Auguste Molinier; Etienne de Rouen, and more of Ordericus Vitalis, ed. Waitz; vol. xxix., the Knytlinga saga, the Heimskringla, and Olaf's saga, ed. Finnur Jónsson. Vols. xxvii., xxviii., edited by Reinhold Pauli and Felix Liebermann, and a group of extracts in vol. xiii. edited by Pauli, are concerned more particularly with English chroniclers; although only excerpts from the texts are printed, the introductions often give the best critical accounts of the authors:-

b. CHURCH HISTORY: ACTA SANCTORUM.

Although the 'lives' of saints are filled with miracles and incredible stories, they form a rich mine of information concerning the life and customs of the people. Some of them are 'memorials of the best men of the time written by the best scholars of the time': and certain saints, like Dunstan, Anselm, and Becket. were men of political prominence, whose biographies throw light on contemporary history. For some parts of the Anglo-Saxon period this legendary lore is almost the only historical material at our disposal. On the value of saints' lives, see Hardy, Catalogue of Materials (No. 45), vol. i. pp. xvii.-xxxvi.; Froude, Short Studies, 1st series; W. H. Hutton, Influence of Christianity upon National Character Illustrated in the Lives of English Saints, London, [1903], and edition, [1908]; and the valuable paper of Hippolyte Delehaye, Les Légendes Hagiographiques, in Revue des Questions Historiques, 1903, lxxiv. 56-122, printed separately at Brussels, 1905 (2nd edition, 1906), and translated by V. M. Crawford as The Legends of the Saints, an Introduction to Hagiography, London, etc., 1907.

There is an elaborate bibliographical list of 'acta sanctorum' in Potthast's Bibliotheca (No. 25), ii. 1131–1646; and a detailed account of Irish hagiologists and materials relating to Irish saints in O'Hanlon's work (No. 611), vol. i. introd. See also Nos. 26,

The most valuable collection of saints' lives. A detailed account of the history of this stupendous undertaking is furnished by Augustin de Backer, Bibliothèque des Ecrivains de la Compagnie de Jésus (Liège, 1859), v. 41-81 (new edition, Paris, etc., 1890, i. 1627-75); and by Potthast (No. 25), vol. i. p. xxxii. sq. ### c. CHURCH HISTORY: COLLECTIONS OF RECORDS.

The best collection of materials for the general history of the English church is that of Wilkins. For monastic history Dugdale's is the most valuable work. The papal registers (Nos. 612, 620) throw light on the relations of England to the papacy. The canon law is dealt with in Nos. 614, 622, 762, 767–70. For church history, see also Nos. 546, 583, 597, 600, and §§ 38, 56. The local ecclesiastical chartularies, registers, etc., most of which begin after the Norman Conquest, are examined in §§ 37, 57.

Vol. ii. Churches of Cumbria and Vol. iii. Anglo-Saxon church, to 870.

Scotland, to 1188; church of Ireland, to 665.

This admirably edited work is a new edition of a portion of Wilkins's Concilia (No. 631). See also No. 1424.

617. HARDY, W. J., and GEE, HENRY. Documents illustrative of English church history [A.D. 314-1700]. London, etc., 1896.

Contains forty-five medieval and seventy-nine modern documents (translations only).

618. HART, RICHARD. Ecclesiastical records of England, Ireland, and Scotland, to the Reformation. Cambridge, 1836; 2nd edition, 1846.

An epitome of Wilkins's Concilia (No. 631).

619. HOLSTENIUS [HOLSTE], LUCAS. Codex regularum monasticarum. 3 pts. Rome, 1661; [new edition], 6 vols., Augsburg, 1759.

The most nearly complete collection of monastic 'rules.' A copy of the autograph of St. Benedict's Rule was made for Charlemagne, and a copy of this copy is extant in St. Gall MS. 914 (published entire by Germain Morin: Regulæ Sancti Benedicti Traditio Codicum MSS. Casinensium, etc., Monte Cassino, 1900). Edmund Schmidt's edition (Regulæ Sancti Patris Benedicti juxta Antiquissimos Codices, Ratisbon, 1892), though not constructed on critical principles, gives a fair idea of this text. Woelfflin's edition (Leipsic, 1895, pp. 85), though based on manuscripts older than St. Gall 914, in the main represents the text as modified by later changes. See also The Rule of St. Benedict, edited, with an English translation, by a monk of St. Benedict's abbey, Fort-Augustus [O. H. Blair], London, [1886], 2nd edition, [1906]; Ludwig Traube, Textgeschichte der Regulæ S. Benedicti, Munich, 1898; The Rule of St. Benedict, translated by F. A. Gasquet, London, 1909; and § 38c.

622. LYNDWOOD, WILLIAM. Provinciale (seu constitutiones Angliæ) continens constitutiones provinciales archiepiscoporum Cant' a Stephano Langtono ad Henricum Chichleium, cum annotationibus, auctore Gul. Lyndwood. Cui adjiciuntur constitutiones Othonis et Othoboni, cum annotationibus J. de Athona. 2 pts. Oxford, 1679.

The most authoritative digest of medieval canon law of England. Lyndwood's work was completed in 1430, and was first printed at Oxford, without title-page, about 1470-80. This edition was soon followed by others, for which see Dictionary of National Biography, 1893, xxxiv. 341. The best edition is that of 1679. On the value and contents of the work, see Maitland, in English Historical Review, xi. 446-78, and his Roman Canon Law (No. 767), 1-50. John of Ayton's annotations or commentary on the constitutions of Otho and Ottoboni, papal legates in England in the 13th century, was compiled between 1333 and 1348. He was a canon of Lincoln. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 754-62. The earlier portions of Wilkins's work are uncritical and incomplete, and are now superseded (to A.D. 870) by the edition of Haddan and Stubbs (No. 616). The most nearly complete collection of Concilia, though far from satisfactory, is Sacrorum Conciliorum Nova Collectio, ed. J. D. Mansi, 31 vols., Florence, etc., 1759-98; reissued and supplemented by Hubert Welter, Paris, 1901, etc. (Introduction, 1903).

CHAPTER V

§ 17. GENERAL TREATISES.

- a. General History, Nos. 631a-7.
- b. Constitutional History, Nos. 638-45a.
- c. Legal History, Nos. 646-60a.

a. GENERAL HISTORY.

SEVERAL valuable papers dealing with medieval English history are printed in Mélanges d'Histoire offerts à M. Charles Bémont par ses Amis et ses Elèves, Paris, 1913.

√ 631a. *Cambridge medieval history. Planned by J. B. Bury, edited by H. M. Gwatkin and J. P. Whitney. Cambridge, 1911, etc.

The two volumes that have appeared cover European history, including that of England to about A.D. 800. Each chapter is accompanied by a bibliography.

5. 632. GREEN, J. R. History of the English people. 4 vols. London, 1877–80; reprinted, 8 vols., 1895–96, and 1905–08.

An important general history of England, devoting much attention to the social condition of the people. It is an expansion of his Short History of the English People, London, 1874; new edition, 4 vols., 1892-94, and various later editions and reprints.

- 632a. *Hunt, William, and Poole, R. L. (editors). The political history of England [in twelve volumes]. London, etc., 1905, etc.
  - I. To 1066, by Thomas Hodgkin: No. 1491a.
  - II. 1066-1216, by G. B. Adams: No. 2807a.
  - III. 1216-1377, by T. F. Tout: No. 2845.
  - IV. 1377-1485, by C. [W. C.] Oman: No. 2878a. Each volume contains a valuable appendix of authorities.
- 633. LAPPENBERG, J. M., and PAULI, REINHOLD. Geschichte von England [to 1509]. 5 vols. Hamburg, 1834-58.

Vols. i.—ii., by Lappenberg, were translated by Benjamin Thorpe: History of England under the Anglo-Saxon Kings (2 vols., London, 1845; new edition, 1881); and History of England under the Norman Kings (Oxford, 1857). Vols. iii.—v., by Pauli, contain the best account of political events from 1154 to 1509. The five volumes give a good survey of the works of the chroniclers.

634. Lingard, John. A history of England to 1688. 8 vols. London, 1819–30; 5th edition [the last edition revised by the author], 10 vols., 1849; new edition, 10 vols., 1883; reprinted, 1888 and 1902.—Newly abridged and brought down to the accession of George V., by D. H. N. Birt, London, 1912.

A good survey of English history from the Roman Catholic point of view. His account of the 14th, 15th, and 16th centuries is more useful than the earlier portions of the work.

- ✓ 634a. *OMAN, C. W. C. (editor). A history of England, in seven volumes. London, [1904], etc.
  - I. Before the Norman conquest, by C. W. C. Oman: No. 1495.
  - II. Under the Normans and Angevins, by H. W. C. Davis: No. 2810b.
  - III. In the later middle ages, by K. H. Vickers, 1914.
- 635. Pearson, C. H. History of England during the early and middle ages. 2 vols. London, 1867.

A scholarly work, but the author lays undue stress upon 'the perpetuity of Roman influences' and the continuity of constitutional development.

X~636. *RAMSAY, J. H. The foundations of England, or twelve centuries of British history, B.C. 55-A.D. 1154. 2 vols. London, 1898.—The Angevin empire, 1154-1216. London, etc., 1903.—The dawn of the constitution, 1216-1307. London, etc., 1908.—The genesis of Lancaster, 1307-99. 2 vols. Oxford, 1913.—Lancaster and York, 1399-1485. 2 vols. Oxford, 1892. 33 60

A very useful survey of the main facts of English history, if employed with caution. Devotes much attention to military and financial operations.

637. St. John, J. A. History of the four conquests of England [B.C. 55-A.D. 1087]. 2 vols. London, 1862.

b. CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY.

Some of the most important of the older works concerning English institutions were written on the continent, where the English constitution was regarded as a model worthy to be studied and copied. The most eminent of these writers were Montesquieu, L'Esprit des Lois, bk. xi., 1748; De Lolme, Constitution de l'Angleterre, 1771; and Von Vincke, Darstellung der Innern Verwaltung Grossbritanniens, 1815. Judged by our present standard of criticism, all these works are rather superficial. Early in the last century De Lolme's book and the historical sketch in Blackstone's Commentaries seem to have been the leading authorities on English constitutional history. They were, however, in large part superseded by Hallam's View of the State of Europe (No. 640). Palgrave and Kemble did much to stimulate research, but their investigations related mainly to the Anglo-Saxon period. The treatises of Gneist and Stubbs have a wider range, and are the best general authorities on the medieval institutions of England. Gneist was led to the study of the subject by the desire to ascertain what there was in the English constitution which Prussia might safely copy; he wished to show the futility of attempting to establish parliamentary government in Prussia without a good substructure of local and provincial institutions, and he believed that Germany could learn much concerning administration and self-government from a careful study of English history.

638. Adams, G. B. The origin of the English constitution. New York, etc., 1912.

Incorporates earlier studies: American Hist. Review, 1900, v. 643-58; 1903, viii. 487-90; 1907-08, xiii. 11-15, 229-45, 713-30; English Hist. Review, 1904, xix. 702-6; 1909, xxiv. 490-95. See also his papers in Columbia Law Review, April, 1913, and Yale Law Journal, April, 1914.

✓ 639. *GNEIST, RUDOLF. Englische Verfassungsgeschichte. Berlin, 1882.—Translated by P. A. Ashworth: The history of the English constitution. 2 vols. London, 1886; 2nd edition, 1889; another edition, 1 vol., 1891.

This is a sort of digest of Gneist's more detailed works on English history. His books lack unity of design, and often overlap one another. Without examining all of them the reader cannot be sure that he has before him in a given volume all that Gneist wrote on a particular subject; much that is found in one treatise may be omitted in a later edition, or may be repeated in another work. For example, the 3rd edition of the Communalverfassung appears under a new title, and omits the valuable account of the history of self-government which is contained in the earlier editions. The basis of all his works on English institutions is Das Heutige Englische Verfassungs- und Verwaltungsrecht, 3 pts., Berlin, 1857-63. The 2nd edition of one part of this is called Das Englische Verwaltungsrecht, 1867; 3rd edition, 1883-84. The 2nd edition of the other part is entitled Communalverfassung, 1863; 3rd edition, Self-Government, Communalverfassung und Verwaltungsgerichte, 1871; French translation by Théodore Hippert, entitled La Constitution Communale de l'Angleterre, 6 vols., Paris, 1868-70. His history of parliament, Das Englische Parlament (No. 668), contains many pages taken, verbatim or in the form of abstracts, from the Verfassungsgeschichte.

Gneist strongly emphasises the development of administration in England from below upward, the aristocratic tendencies of English self-government, and the important part played by the gentry in local and central affairs.

c. LEGAL HISTORY.

The best account of legal history to the reign of Edward I. is that of Pollock and Maitland. For the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries we had to resort mainly to the treatise of Reeves, until that was superseded by Holdsworth's third volume (No. 653a). Holmes's Common Law is excellent for the ground which it covers. Spence's Equitable Jurisdiction (No. 2984) also devotes much attention to the history of the common law. There are some valuable papers on the History of Assumpsit and the Disseisin of Chattels, by J. B. Ames, in Harvard Law Review, 1888–90, vols. ii.—iii.; reprinted, with some additions, in Select Essays (No. 660a), vol. iii.; and in his Lectures on Legal History (Cambridge; Mass., 1913); 129–91. Law and Politics contains a popular and useful account of the origin of various institutions and legal ideas: the state, the village, hundred, shire, courts of justice, property, and contract.

√ 656. MAINE, H. S. Ancient law. London, 1861; 10th edition, 1885. [New edition], by Frederick Pollock, 1906.

Contains a valuable comparison of English and Roman law, etc. In this work, as also in his Early History of Institutions, London, 1875, and in his Early Law and Custom, London, 1883, Maine connects certain modern institutions with the usages of primitive mankind. His works are valuable for the study of the comparative history of institutions, though some of his theories are untenable.

✓ 657. *POLLOCK, FREDERICK, and MAITLAND, F. W. The history of English law before the time of Edward I. 2 vols. Cambridge, 1895; 2nd edition, 1898.

'A tout prendre, voilà peut-être l'œuvre de la plus haute allure scientifique que l'érudition anglaise ait produite: 'C. Petit-Dutaillis, in Revue de Synthèse Historique, 1904, viii. 379. Very valuable for the study of English institutions, especially for the period 1066–1272. It is supplemented by Maitland's Domesday Book (No. 1493), which deals mainly with Anglo-Saxon times. Maitland's Prologue to a History of English Law, in Law Quarterly Review, 1898, xiv. 13–33, is incorporated in the 2nd edition of the History of English Law, as is Pollock's English Law before the Norman Conquest, published in the same volume of the Review, pp. 291–306. For the period from Edward I. to Elizabeth this still remains the most useful general history of English law. Finlason's attempt to modernise the treatise was a failure, and his edition cannot be recommended.

§ 18. THE CROWN, PARLIAMENT, AND TAXATION.

The best general history of parliament is Gneist's, and the best treatise on taxation is Dowell's; but neither work is satisfactory for the medieval period. On both subjects there is still plenty of room for further investigation. Of books dealing with the crown the most useful is Allen's.

The best book on this subject. On the coronation service, see also Maskell, Monumenta Ritualia (No. 623), vol. ii.; and No. 2216.

§ 19. THE FORESTS.

The standard treatise on this subject is Manwood's. The best account of the early history of the forests to 1217 is Liebermann's. See also Turner's Select Pleas of the Forest (No. 2052). Some useful material will be found in Bémont's Chartes des Libertés (No. 2013), introd.; Ellis's Introduction to Domesday Book (No. 1886), i. 103–16; Pearson's Historical Maps (No. 366), 49–53; Turton's Forest of Pickering (No. 2733), introd. For the history of particular forests, see § 24; Fisher's Forest of Essex and Rawle's Forest of Exmoor (Nos. 900, 1077) are the most valuable.

§ 20. JUSTICE AND POLICE.

The most comprehensive treatises are those of Pike and Stephen. Brunner and Thayer are the best authorities on the history of the jury; for the literature of this subject, see Brunner, r-ii. Lea gives a detailed account of the older forms of trial; Neilson's Trial by Combat and Patetta's Ordalie are also valuable. For the development of the king's peace, see Nos. 670, 671, 674.

686. *Brunner, Heinrich. Die Entstehung der Schwurgerichte. Berlin, 1872.

An epoch-making treatise. Brunner demonstrated the Frankish origin of the jury. Among other continental works on this subject the best is F. A. Biener's Das Englische Geschwornengericht, 3 vols., Leipsic, 1852-55; see Brunner, 1-9. See also Haskins (No. 2987).

A brief account, for popular use; based on Campbell, Nicolas, Southey, etc.

§ 22. TENURES OF LAND AND CLASSES OF SOCIETY.

One of the best treatises on the history of land tenures is Digby's; Pollock gives a good short account. For Wales the best authority on this subject is Seebohm's Tribal System (No. 1116); see also Nos. 731, 736a.

There is no comprehensive treatise on the history of the classes of society; besides the works of Allen, Brownlow, Garnier, and Selden, mentioned in this section, those of economic writers (§ 25), like Ashley, Cunningham, Rogers, and Seebohm, are useful. There is also much information on land tenures and on classes of society in Pollock and Maitland's English Law, and in Maitland's Domesday Book (Nos. 657, 1493). See also Nos. 1172a, 1240a, 1552a.

II. From 1066 to the close of the 13th century, by W. R. W. III. 14th and 15th centuries, by W. W. Capes: No. 3075.

This series probably gives the best general survey of the history of the English church.

A good brief, but rather one-sided, account.

b. SYNODS, CONVOCATION, CANON LAW, AND COURTS.

Atterbury's work gave rise to much controversy. He boldly advocated the rights of the clergy in convocation, and was opposed by Gibson, Kennett, and Wake. For the proceedings of councils, see Nos. 616, 627, 631.

II. Church, state, and decretals. III. William of Drogheda.

V. Execrabilis in the common pleas. VI. The deacon and the Jewess.

Essays iv.-vi. are reprinted in his Collected Papers (No. 656a). The author contends that the canon law of Rome was binding on the ecclesiastical courts of England, a refutation of Stubbs's view (No. 768a). See also his History of English Law, bk. i. ch. v.; and his paper, Canon Law in England, a Reply to Dr. MacColl [who opposed his views], in English Historical Review, 1901, xvi. 35-45 (Collected Papers, iii. 137-56, and see ibid., 65-77). ### c. TITHES AND CHURCH-RATES.

Selden still remains the most exhaustive and best authority on the history of tithes, though recent investigation has corrected some of his views, as, for example, his interpretation of Ethelwulf's donation. The tone of most of the other works mentioned below is controversial. Clarke upholds the ancient tripartite division of tithes among the clergy, the church fabric, and the poor; this view is opposed by Easterby, Fuller, Hale, Selborne, and other recent authorities.

—Also printed in Works of Selden, iii. 1069—1298. London, 1726.

This book shows that the practices of the early church are inconsistent with the view that tithes are payable by divine right, though Selden nowhere expressly denies the doctrine of divine right. The work gave great offence to the clergy, and was suppressed by order of the court of high commission.

d. MONASTICISM.

Dugdale (No. 613) is the best authority on the history of particular religious houses, and Tanner's Notitia is a useful work of reference. Dugdale is now supplemented by sections in the Victoria county histories (No. 839). The best general accounts are those of Eckenstein, Fosbroke, Hill, and Montalembert. Fosbroke gives the fullest account of the inner life of English monasteries; Pearson, in his Historical Maps (No. 366), gives a brief exposition, with a map and lists of religious houses. See also the introduction to Stubbs's edition of Epistolæ Cantuarienses, Rolls Series (No. 2220); and Poole's Atlas (No. 367). A good short survey of the general history of monasticism in Europe will be found in Otto Zöckler's Askese und Mönchthum, 2nd edition, 2 vols., Frankfort, 1897; and a bibliography, in No. 26. Vol. i of Max Heimbucher's Orden und Kongregationen der Katholischen Kirche (2 vols., Paderborn, 1896-97, 2nd edition, 3 vols., 1907-08) is also useful. On double monasteries, see No. 1611. For the history of individual orders, see § 70b.

Bks. vii.-xv. deal with Great Britain. The work is an eloquent plea in favour of monasticism; a panegyric, rather than a critical history, of monastic life. For its faults and merits, see Remains of A. W. Haddan, 1876, pp. 198-211.

§ 24. LOCAL HISTORY, INCLUDING IRELAND AND WALES.

- a. General, Nos. 816-40a.
- b. Particular Counties, Boroughs, Manors, etc., Nos. 841-1191.

There is no good general history of English boroughs; the most elaborate work is that of Merewether and Stephens (No. 832). Maitland's Township and Borough (No. 831) throws much light on this subject. N. M. Trenholme is preparing a history of English monastic boroughs. There is an excellent chapter on craft gilds in Ashley's Economic History (No. 1193), and a detailed account of the gild merchant in Gross's treatise (No. 824). On general manorial history the student should consult Pollock and Maitland's English Law, Maitland's Domesday Book, Vinogradoff's Villainage, and Seebohm's Village Community: Nos. 657, 1222, 1493, 3054. The best general work on castles is Clark's (No. 426), which is supplemented by the works of Armitage, Round, and Mackenzie (Nos. 422a, 435a, 829); see also the lists of castles in Pearson's Maps (No. 366), 42-49. The general treatises on the forests are enumerated in § 19, and those on church history in § 23.

There is a vast literature relating to particular counties, churches, towns, manors, castles, and forests. Though many of these books contain valuable matter, few display much scholarly research in dealing with local institutions. The best county histories are little more than great storehouses of crude material concerning particular churches, manors, and boroughs, interspersed with considerable genealogical information. In the lists given below,  $\S 24b$ , an effort has been made to enumerate those works which throw most light on institutional development or which contain valuable records. Other titles will be found in the local bibliographies,  $\S 2$ .

√831. * MAITLAND, F. W. Township and borough. Cambridge, 1898.

Throws much light on the transition from rural to urban life among the townsmen, and on the evolution of corporate unity in boroughs. The same writer has made valuable contributions to municipal history in his History of English Law and his Domesday Book (Nos. 657, 1493).

832. * MEREWETHER, H. A., and STEPHENS, A. J. The history of the boroughs and municipal corporations of the United Kingdom. 3 vols. London, 1835.

The material in this work is valuable, but many of the general conclusions are untenable.

833. PAGE, WILLIAM. Some remarks on the Northumbrian palatinates and regalities. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, li. 143-55. London, 1888.

Tries to show that the regaliar rights enjoyed within the palatinates of Durham and Lancaster, the honours of Richmond, Holderness, Hexham, etc., had their origin in the regality of the ancient kingdom and earldom of Northumbria.

The author shows that the chroniclers greatly exaggerate the extent of the desolation wrought by William the Conqueror in the construction of the New Forest. F. Baring, however, in his paper The Making of the New Forest, in English Historical Review, 1901, xvi. 427-38, disagrees with Wise, and with Lewis (No. 681), and is inclined to accept the old view that William wrought much devastation in the making of the New Forest. Cf. F. H. M. Parker, ibid., 1912, xxvii. 26-38, who argues that the story of William's devastation was fabricated to cover the conspiracy which resulted in the death of William II.; and see Baring's note, ibid., pp. 513-15.

Wales: General.

For a long time the standard work on Wales was an Elizabethan compilation called A Historie of Cambria, by Caradoc of Llancarvan, translated by Humphrey Lloyd, edited by David Powel, London, 1584; 8th edition, 1832. Carnhuanawc's [Thomas Price's] Hanes Cymry (Crughywel, 1842) had some vogue. Woodward (No. 1121) added nothing to the stock of knowledge, nor did Miss Williams (No. 1120), who is, however, concise and accurate. A more ambitious work than any of these is Hanes y Brytaniaid a'r Cymry, by Gweirydd ap Rhys [Robert John Pryse], 2 vols., London, [1873-76]. The most useful recent histories are those by Lloyd (No. 1113a) and Rhys and Jones (No. 1115). See reports of the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of Wales (p. 67, above); and Nos. 84b. 361, 731, 836, 863, 1236, 2880, 3148a, 3225a.

§ 25. COMMERCE, INDUSTRY, AND AGRICULTURE.

- a. General, Nos. 1192-1201a.
- b. Particular Subjects, Nos. 1202-26.

The most valuable general works are those of Ashley and Cunningham. Palgrave's Dictionary (No. 1196) is a useful book of reference. Rogers, Meitzen, and Seebohm (Nos. 1199, 1217, 1222) have thrown much light on the history of agriculture. See also No. 726; the sections on industries and agriculture in the Victoria county histories (No. 839); and, for works on coinage and gilds, §§ 10, 24. For a bibliography of economic history, see Hall (No. 44a); for records, No. 540a. One or two good text-books are included in the following list: Nos. 1197, 1198a.

a. GENERAL.

1192. [Anderson, Adam.] An historical and chronological deduction of the origin of commerce. 2 vols. London, 1764; other editions, 4 vols., 1787–89, 1801.

A useful collection of undigested material on the history of commerce and industry, written in the form of annals, 1193. *Ashley, W. J. An introduction to English economic history and theory. 2 vols. London, etc., 1888-93; 3rd edition of vol. i., 1894.

Vol. i. deals with the manor, gilds, and economic legislation; vol. ii., with the towns, the crafts, the woollen industry, the agrarian revolution, the relief of the poor, and the canonist doctrine. See also his Surveys, Historic and Economic (London, etc., 1900), which deals with the history of the township, boroughs, gilds, etc.

1194. CRAIK, G. L. The history of British commerce. 3 vols. London, 1844.

A brief account, based largely upon Macpherson's work (No. 1198).

✓ 1195. *CUNNINGHAM, WILLIAM. The growth of English industry and commerce. [2nd edition.] 2 vols. (vol. i., early and medieval; vol. ii., modern). Cambridge, 1890–92; 4th edition, 2 vols. in 3, 1905–07.—1st and 5th editions of vol. i., 1882, 1910.

Bibliography, i. 657-81.

✓ 1195a. CURTLER, W. H. R. A short history of English agriculture. Oxford, 1909.

See also R. E. Prothero, English Farming, Past and Present, London, 1912 (expanded from a volume published in 1888).

1196. Dictionary of political economy, ed. R. H. Inglis Palgrave. 3 vols. and appendix. London, etc., 1894 [1891]-1908.

Contains many valuable articles, with bibliographical notices of the authorities.

1. X 1197. GIBBINS, HENRY DE BELTGENS. Industry in England: historical outlines. London, 1896.

Deals with commerce, manufactures, agriculture, etc.

1197a. KOWALEWSKY, MAXIME. Die ökonomische Entwicklung Europas bis zum Beginn der kapitalistischen Wirtschaftsform. Translated from the Russian by Leo Motzkin and others. Vols. i.-vi. Berlin, 1901-13.

Contains chapters on English agrarian history,

1198. MACPHERSON, DAVID. Annals of commerce, manufactures, fisheries, and navigation. 4 vols. London, etc., 1805.

Written in the annalistic form; contains much useful material. Based on Anderson (No. 1192) for the period 1492-1760, 1198a. MEREDITH, H. O. Outlines of the economic history of England. London, etc., [1908].

A good short history.

- 1199. ROGERS, J. E. T. A history of agriculture and prices in England, 1259-1793. 7 vols. Oxford, 1866-1902.
- 1200. Six centuries of work and wages: the history of English labour. 2 vols. London, 1884; 11th edition, 1 vol., 1912.
   Based on his History of Agriculture (No. 1199).

v 1201. — The economic interpretation of history. London, etc., 1888; 7th edition, 1909.

Deals with labour legislation, agriculture, taxation, metallic currencies, the gild system, etc., especially in the later middle ages and in modern times. His Industrial and Commercial History, London, 1892 (6th edition, 1909), relates mainly to modern times. All his books are valuable as pioneer work, but some of his views on important subjects are rejected by good authorities.

9 X 1201a. SALZMANN, L. F. English industries of the middle ages. London, 1913.

b. PARTICULAR SUBJECTS.

In addition to the following works, see also Alexander Bugge, Die Nordeuropäischen Verkehrswege im frühen Mittelalter und die Bedeutung der Wikinger für die Entwicklung des Europäischen Handels, in Vierteljahrschrift für Social- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte (Berlin, etc., 1906), iv. 227-77 (gives much attention to England); C. 1202. BECK, LUDWIG. Die Geschichte des Eisens. 5 vols. Brunswick, 1884-1903; 2nd edition of pt. i. (to 1500), 1891. The best work on this subject.

1203. BECK, S. W. The draper's dictionary: a manual of textile fabrics, their history and applications. London, [1882].

1204. — Gloves, their annals and associations. London, 1883.

Ch. xi. Companies of glovers. | Ch. xii. The glove trade.

1205. Bennett, Richard, and Elton, John. History of corn-milling. 4 vols. London, etc., 1898–1904.

Valuable.

- 1206. BICKERDYKE, JOHN [i.e. C. H. COOK]. The curiosities of ale and beer. London, [1886].
- 1207. BISCHOFF, JAMES. A comprehensive history of the woollen and worsted manufactures. 2 vols. London, 1842.

  Devotes little attention to the medieval period.
- 1208. Bonwick, James. Romance of the wool trade. London, 1887; reprinted, 1893.
- 1209. BOURNE, H. R. F. English merchants: memoirs in illustration of the progress of British commerce. 2 vols. London, 1866; new editions, 1 vol., 1886, 1898.

Deals with early English commerce, the De la Poles of Hull (1311-66), Richard Whittington of London, the Canynges of Bristol (1360-1475), etc.

1210. Burnley, James. The history of wool and wool-combing. London, 1889.

§ 28. THE CELTS.

Besides implements, graves, and similar remains, the sources include inscriptions on coins (§ 10) and passages in the classical writers, the most important of whom are Cæsar and Tacitus. These passages, most of which were written after Cæsar's invasion of Britain, are printed in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537).

Some historians assert that a large part of the Celtic population survived in Anglo-Saxon Eugland, and exerted great influence upon English institutions. Those who emphasise this view most strongly are Lewis, Nicholas, and Pike (Nos. 641, 1264, 1266); see also Davies (No. 1262), Grant Allen's Anglo-Saxon England [1881, reprinted 1901], ch. vii., and A. #### CHAPTER II

THE ROMANS IN BRITAIN

THE great repositories of materials for the study of this period are Petrie's Monumenta, Hübner's Inscriptiones, and Horsley's Britannia Romana (Nos. 537, 1284, 1302). 'Archæology has much to tell us concerning it [the period of the Roman occupation], but history is almost altogether silent. A few sections of Dion Cassius, some confused notices in the Historia Augusta, a page or two of Ammianus Marcellinus, are practically all that is left to us of the written history of our country from Agricola to Stilicho': Hodgkin, Political History of England (No. 632a), 52.

§ 29. GREEK AND ROMAN WRITERS, ETC.

The principal passages relating to Roman Britain are found in Cæsar's Commentaries; Strabo's Geography; Pliny's Natural History; Tacitus's Agricola (best edition by Henry Furneaux, Oxford, 1898), Histories, and Annals; Suetonius's Twelve Cæsars; Ptolemy's Geography; Dion Cassius's Roman History; the Itinerary of Antonine: Ammianus Marcellinus's History; and the Notitia Dignitatum. These passages, and all the information concerning Britain furnished by other contemporary writers, will be found in Petrie's Monumenta. See also Hardy's Catalogue of Materials, vol. i. pp. cxvi.cxxxiv., and Cayzer's Britannia: Nos. 45, 1271. to Cæsar and Tacitus, the Itinerary of Antonine and the Notitia Dignitatum (Nos. 1273-4) are of the greatest value. Peutinger's Tabula and the Anonymus Ravennas (Nos. 1275-6) supplement the Itinerary of Antonine. On these three geographical works, see Horsley (No. 1302), and H. F. Tozer, History of Ancient Geography, Cambridge, 1897, ch. xiv. The spurious treatise ascribed to Richard of Cirencester (No. 1271a) gives a fictitious itinerary of Britain. The information concerning the laws and government of Britain furnished by the Greek and Roman authors is very meagre. The Codex Theodosianus, ed. Gustav Haenel, Bonn, 1842 (new edition, by Theodor Mommsen and P. M. Meyer, Theodosiani Libri XVI., etc., vols. i.—ii., Berlin, 1905), lib. xi. tit. vii. § 2 ('De exactionibus'), contains a brief rescript of the fifth century relating to Britain, in which the decurion is mentioned.

1271. CAYZER, T. S. Britannia: a collection of the principal passages in Latin authors that refer to this island. London, 1878.

VI271a. 'CIRENCESTER, RICHARD OF.' The description of Britain, translated from Richard of Cirencester, with the original treatise De situ Britanniæ, and a commentary on the Itinerary [ed. Henry Hatcher]. London, 1809.

This treatise was first published in C. J. Bertram's Britannicarum Gentium Historiæ Antiquæ Scriptores Tres: Ricardus Corinensis, Gildas, Nennius (Copenhagen, 1757), 1-60. For other editions, and for arguments proving that it could not have been written by Richard of Cirencester in the 14th century, but that it was probably fabricated by Bertram, see B. B. Woodward, A Literary Forgery, Richard of Cirencester's Tractate on Britain, in Gentleman's Magazine, new series, 1866, i. 301-8, 617-24, ii. 458-66, and 1867, iv. 443-51; and Ricardi de Cirencestria Speculum Historiale (ed. J. E. B. Mayor, Rolls Series, 2 vols., 1863-69), vol. ii. pp. xvii.-clxiv. Mayor gives a full account of the history of this spurious work. See Nos. 574, 582, 1516; and, for Bertram's life, Dictionary of National Biography, 1885, iv. 412-13.

1273. *Itinerarium Antonini Augusti et Hierosolymitanum, ed. Gustav Parthey and Moritz Pinder. Berlin, 1848.

Antonine's Itinerary names the principal stations and towns in the Roman empire, with the intermediate distances. It was probably compiled in the 2nd century by one of the Antonines, either Antoninus Pius or Marcus Aurelius Antoninus; but the edition which has come down to us belongs to the time of Diocletian or of Constantine the Great. See William Burton, Commentary on Antoninus his Itinerary, London, 1658; Thomas Reynolds, Iter Britanniarum, Cambridge, 1799; Guest, Origines Celticæ (No. 1263), ii. 101–18; [J. J.] Raven, The British Section of Antonine's Itinerary (a series of papers in the Antiquary, 1900–1904, vols. xxxvi.-xl. passim); A. C. Yorke, Iter V. and Iter IX. of Antonine, Cambridge Antiq. Soc., Proceedings, 1907 [1903-06], xi. 2-74; Jahresberichte (No. 22), xxiv. I., 101; the Catalogue of the British Museum Library, under 'Antoninus Augustus'; and Nos. 1272, 1302.

1274. *Notitia dignitatum, ed. Eduard Böcking. 2 vols. in 3, and index. Bonn, 1839–53.—Also ed. Otto Seeck, Berlin, 1876 (the better edition, but Böcking gives a more detailed commentary); and extracts (translation only), ed. William Fairley; Philadelphia, 1899, pp. 40.

This work is an official register or list of the military and civil dignitaries in both the eastern and the western empire, with the names of the places at which they were stationed, and the number of troops under their command. It was probably compiled under Honorius early in the 5th century. Mommsen (in Hermes, 1901, xxxvi. 544-7) shows that the date of the last redaction is about 425 A.D. For the editions and literature, see Potthast, Bibliotheca (No. 25), ii. 868; and No. 1302.

1275. Peutingeriana tabula itineraria nunc primum arte photographica expressa. Vienna, 1888.—Another edition: Die Weltkarte des Castorius genannt die Peutinger'sche Tafel, ed. Konrad Miller. 2 vols. (text and atlas). Ravensburg, 1887–88. —The best editions are: Tabula itineraria Peutingeriana, edited, with a valuable introduction, by Conrad Mannert, Leipsic, 1824; and La Table de Peutinger, ed. Ernest Desjardins, nos. i.—xiv., Paris, 1869–74.

This chart or map of the world in the time of the Romans is 21 ft. long and 1 ft. wide. The oldest existing copy, now at Vienna, was made by a monk of Colmar in 1265, and belonged to Konrad Peutinger of Augsburg in the first half of the 16th century. It traces the lines of the roads throughout the Roman empire, marking the military stations and indicating the distances between them. The part relating to Britain is incomplete. Miller ascribes the work to a cartographer of Rome called Castorius, who compiled it about A.D. 366; but Mannert adduces strong evidence that it was drawn up in the 3rd century, while Desjardins believes that some portions belong to the age of Augustus and others to the 4th, 5th, and 6th centuries. See No. 1302.

1276. Ravennatis anonymi Cosmographia et Guidonis Geographica, ed. Moritz Pinder and Gustav Parthey. Berlin, 1860.

This Ravenna cosmographer seems to have flourished about A.D. 650. He enumerates the Roman stations. See Nos. 1272, 1302; M. A. P. d'Avezac-Macaya, Le Ravennate et son Exposé Cosmographique, Rouen, 1888; and, for the editions, etc., Potthast, Bibliotheca (No. 25), i. 498.

§ 30. ARCHÆOLOGICAL REMAINS: INSCRIPTIONS, ETC.

The most valuable of the older collections of Roman remains is Horsley's Britannia Romana (No. 1302). Much material will also be found in the treatises and journals mentioned in § 11, and in the works on local history (§ 24), especially Haverfield's sections on Roman Remains in the Victoria county histories (No. 839). The inscriptions throw some light on the provincial administration and military history of Britain, but they are so brief and obscure that they do not add much to our historical information. 'A victorious legion, the death of a commander, the performance of a vow, a tribute to the memory of a departed relative, are the subjects generally commemorated.' The best collection of inscriptions is Hübner's (No. 1284); there are smaller collections in Petrie's Monumenta and McCaul's work (Nos. 537, 1287). For Roman coins, see § 10; for Roman forts, etc., No. 393a. See A. H. Lyell, A Bibliographical List descriptive of Romano-British Architectural Remains in Great Britain. Cambridge, 1912.

§ 31. MODERN WRITERS: POLITICAL AND CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY.

The best of the older authorities are Camden's Britannia and Horsley's Britannia Romana (Nos. 343, 1302); the best recent accounts of the history of this period are in Ramsay's Foundations of England (No. 636), and Oman's England before the Norman Conquest (No. 634a). Some of the books mentioned in §§ 27, 28, especially Nos. 1243, 1247, 1263, 1269, deal with Roman Britain. See also No. 1516; and Palgrave's Commonwealth (No. 1497), vol. i. chs. x.-xi. Hübner (No. 1303) gives the best account of the military and civil government. There is a brief bibliography of Roman Britain in the Cambridge Medieval History (No. 631a), i. 666-7.

The question of the survival and influence of Roman institutions after the fifth century has evoked much discussion. The most elaborate plea in favour of the permanence of Roman influence is presented by Coote (No. 1298); and the same general doctrine is advocated by Wright (No. 420), ch. xvi., Pearson, Finlason, Seebohm, and Scarth (Nos. 635, 658, 1222, 1310). # CHAPTER III

THE EARLY GERMANS

To understand early English history it is necessary to study German institutions as they existed before the Saxons and the Angles invaded England. Whatever concessions may be made to the advocates of the theory of Celtic and Roman survivals in England (see the preliminary notes to §§ 28, 31), a substantial Germanic element will remain at the base of the English constitution. The school of 'Germanists,' or writers who believe in the Teutonic origin of English institutions, includes Stubbs, Freeman, Green, Gneist, Maitland, Pollock, Vinogradoff, and many others.

§ 32. SOURCES: THE GERMANIA OF TACITUS, ETC.

The central point of the study of the early Germans is the Germania of Tacitus, which is supplemented by his Annals and Histories, by Cæsar's Commentaries, and by some passages in other classical authors, notably Strabo, Pliny the Elder, Ptolemy, Dion Cassius, and Ammianus Marcellinus. Many of these passages are printed in Müllenhoff's Germania Antiqua (No. 1318), and in Alexander Riese's Das Rheinische Germanien in der Antiken Litteratur, Leipsic, 1892. They are translated in vols. i.—ii. of Die Geschichtschreiber der Deutschen Vorzeit, ed. G. H. Pertz and others, Berlin, 1849—79; 2nd edition, by W. Wattenbach, Leipsic, 1884. There is a good short account of the principal sources in Fustel's Institutions (No. 1330), ii. 226—47.

The best edition of the text of the Germania is Müllenhoff's, and he has also written the best commentary (Nos. 1318, 1340). The most elaborate exposition is Baumstark's (No. 1314); the brief commentaries of Furneaux, Schweizer-Sidler, and Holtzmann (Nos. 1315–16, 1319) are also useful. For descriptions of two recently discovered MSS., see F. F. Abbott, The Toledo Manuscript, Chicago, 1903; and Cesare Annibaldi, La Germania di Cornelio Tacito nel MS. in Jesi, Leipsic, 1910, pp. 88. There is a good English translation of the Germania by A. J. Church and W. J. Brodribb, entitled The Agricola and Germany of Tacitus, London, 1868; another by A. C. Howland, The Early Germans (Philadelphia, 1899, other editions, 1901, 1908), 4-27.

§ 33. MODERN WRITERS.

The best general work on early Germanic institutions is that of Waitz: No. 1346. For additions to the list of books given below, see Jahresberichte, Dahlmann-Waitz, and Brunner: Nos. 22, 28, 1326. See also Nos. 1506, 1509, 1519. For the relations of the Germans to Rome, see Mommsen (No. 1306), especially bk. v. ch. vii., and bk. viii. ch. iv.

Von Maurer's mark theory (No. 1338), of which ch. xxvi. of the Germania is the battle-ground, has evoked much discussion. His chief opponents are Fustel, Ross, and Seebohm: Nos. 1331, 1341, 1561. On this subject, see also Nos. 1327, 1333, 1337, 1339; and the works of Andrews, Gomme, and Maine, in § 44a. Meitzen (No. 1339) has thrown some new light on the early agrarian system. A good review of the recent literature is Max Weber's Der Streit um den Charakter der Altgermanischen Sozialverfassung in der Deutschen Literatur des Letzten Jahrzehnts, in Jahrbücher für Nationalökonomie und Statistik, 3rd series, 1904, xxviii. 433–70. This essay was first printed in Revue des Questions Historiques, April, 1889, and was translated by Margaret Ashley under the title of The Origin of Property in Land (London, 1891; 2nd edition, 1892). The author assails Von Maurer's views regarding the mark (No. 1338). Fustel believes that early German society rests on an aristocratic basis, and that there was no communal ownership of land among the early Germans. # PART III THE ANGLO-SAXON PERIOD

ORIGINAL SOURCES

DOMESDAY BOOK, which is of great importance for the study of Anglo-Saxon institutions, is examined in § 50a.

§ 34. CHRONICLES AND ROYAL BIOGRAPHIES.

For the events of the fifth and sixth centuries we must rely mainly upon the meagre information afforded by Gildas. Nennius, who has evoked so much discussion in recent years, is of little value as a historical authority, and Geoffrey of Monmouth is romantic.

From 506 onward we have two safe guides, the two most important authorities mentioned in this section, namely, Bede and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. From them Ethelwerd (No. 1366) and the Latin chroniclers of the twelfth century, notably Florence of Worcester, Simeon of Durham, Henry of Huntingdon, and William of Malmesbury, derive most of their facts regarding Anglo-Saxon history; but these later writers, especially Simeon of Durham, add some information drawn from sources not now extant. See No. 1376; Petrie, Monumenta (No. 537), 83-92, 522-829; Earle, Two of the Saxon Chronicles (No. 1349), pp. lix.-lxvii. Bede is the foremost exponent of Northumbrian culture, which was unequalled elsewhere in Europe in the seventh and eighth centuries; and his Historia Ecclesiastica, with its connected narrative or grouping of facts, represents a type of historical writing quite distinct from the brief chronological memoranda of events contained in the annals or chronicles. The germinating point of the latter is to be sought in contemporary Latin notes or jottings entered in the margins of Easter tables, a practice which began in England probably not long after the coming of Augustine and was introduced into the kingdom of the Franks by English missionaries. These chronological notes were soon copied, amplified, and continued as independent works. See Wattenbach, Geschichtsquellen (No. 33), 7th edition, i. 154-7, 165-7; and, for the use of Easter tables at Canterbury, Reading, and Peterborough in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, Liebermann, Geschichtsquellen (No. 586), I, o, 13. In the elaboration of the Easter-table jottings, old popular songs and royal genealogies (No. 1368) were sometimes turned to account. Thus were produced some of the annals that were used in the earlier portions of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, which originated in southern England. To this category of annalistic works belong also four remnants of Northumbrian historiography.—the Annales Lindisfarnenses, the Chronologia Brevissima, the Continuatio Bedæ, and the lost chronicle (Nos. 1352, 1359, 1361, 1376); also the Annales Cambriæ, and the Annals of Tigernach (Nos. 1351, 1377). The last two are the primary authorities for Wales and Ireland respectively; from them later writers derive much of their information regarding this period: they are, indeed, to Welsh and Irish history what the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle is to English history. Of these later derivatives the Brut y Tywysogion, the Annals of Ulster, and the Chronicon Scotorum (Nos. 1713, 1728, 1752) deserve particular mention. because, although the first is based partly upon the Annales Cambriæ, and the other two upon Tigernach, they contain additional information concerning the early history of England. Ireland, and Wales, Another group of sources comprises the monastic histories of Ramsey, Abingdon, Crowland (spurious), Ely, and Hyde (Nos. 1357, 1358, 1371-3), all compiled after the Conquest. They are a combination of the chartulary and the chronicle, dealing mainly with local ecclesiastical history, but also containing some details as to the general affairs of the kingdom and interesting illustrations of customs and institutions. Simeon's History of the Church of Durham (No. 1767) gives some valuable information regarding the secular affairs of northern England in the ninth century. Still more local in their scope are the tract on the siege of Durham and Elmham's work on Canterbury (Nos. 1362, 1364).

Of royal biographies Asser's life of Alfred is the most important. Two others are also worthy of notice, the Encomium Emmæ and the contemporary Vita Edwardi (Nos. 1365, 1378); these are of some value for the study of political history in the eleventh century. For biographies of prelates, etc., see § 38d.

For the careers of Sweyn, Cnut, and other Danish chieftains who invaded Britain, see Adam of Bremen (No. 1356), the War of the Gaedhil (No. 1380), Langebek's Scriptores (No. 585), and the Norse sagas (§ 35).

A more detailed enumeration of editions, and other information concerning the chroniclers of the Anglo-Saxon period, will be found in the works mentioned in § 2, especially in Potthast's Bibliotheca, Hardy's Catalogue of Materials, the Cambridge History of English Literature, vol. i., and Manitius's Lateinische Literatur. See also the Dictionary of National Biography (No. 305); Hodgkin's History of England (No. 632a), app. i.; and cf. Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), preface.

✓ 1349. *Anglo-Saxon chronicle (The). Chronicon Saxonicum, ed. Edmund Gibson. Oxford, 1692.—The Saxon chronicle, with an English translation, ed. James Ingram. London, 1823; new edition of the translation, in Everyman's Library, London, [1912]. -Edited, with a translation, in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 291-466. London, 1848.—The Anglo-Saxon chronicle, with a translation, ed. Benjamin Thorpe. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1861.—Two of the Saxon chronicles parallel, ed. John Earle. Oxford, 1865. The same, ed. Charles Plummer, on the basis of Earle's edition. 2 vols. Oxford, 1892-99. [This is the best edition.]—Excerpts, 767-1129, with a Latin translation, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 103-120. Hanover, 1881.—Translated by J. A. Giles, 1847 (new edition, 1912), and J. Stevenson, 1853 (Nos. 574, 507); and by E. E. C. Gomme, London, 1909.

This is the oldest historical work written in any Germanic language, and is the basis of most of our knowledge of Anglo-Saxon history from the year 732 onward. The MSS., with the periods which they cover, are :-

A=Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, clxxiii. (B.C. 60-A.D. 1070).
```

The compilation of each MS, has been identified with a religious house in southern England: hence A is called the Winchester chronicle; B has

B=Cotton, Tib. A. vi. (Incarnation-A.D. 977).

C=Cotton, Tib. B. i. (B.c. 60-A.D. 1066). D=Cotton, Tib. B. iv. (Inc.-A.D. 1079).

E = Bodleian, Laud, 636 (Inc.-A.D. 1154). F = Cotton, Domit. A. viii. (Inc.-A.D. 1058).

G = Cotton, Otho, B. xi. (B.C. 60-A.D. 1001).

been assigned to Canterbury; C to Abingdon; D to Worcester; E to Peterborough; F to Canterbury; G is largely a late copy of A. The greater part of G was destroyed in the Cottonian fire of 1731, but the whole was printed by Abraham Wheloc in 1643. The best authorities regard A as the oldest, but believe that it is a copy of an older original of the 9th century, from which also the other MSS. (B-G) were derived directly or indirectly. Thorpe's valuable edition contains the texts of six MSS. (A-F) in parallel columns. In the introduction to Earle's edition of A and E we find for the first time a careful investigation of the structure and pedigree of all the MSS.

Some writers believe that the Chronicle was first compiled in Alfred's reign and at his command; but the researches of Earle, Grubitz, and Horst show that the Alfredian compilation was merely the continuation and expansion of older annals. As to the nature of the original nucleus or germinating point opinions diverge. The nucleus probably comprised brief contemporary Latin annals written at Winchester in the 7th and 8th centuries; this work was continued and expanded about the year 855, and again in Alfred's reign, about 892. The annals of the first five centuries seem to have been inserted by the Alfredian compiler, who made considerable use of Bede down to 732. From Alfred's time onward the Chronicle was continued independently in different monasteries until the second half of the 12th century. This independence gradually caused so great divergence in the various MSS, that we are justified in regarding them as a series of distinct works with a common basis, a series to which we may apply the plural designation, the Anglo-Saxon Chronicles. The best contributions to our knowledge of this subject are those of Earle, Plummer, Grubitz, and Horst. The fullest account is Plummer's, in vol. ii. of his edition of the Chronicle; he believes that the idea of a national chronicle as opposed to local annals was Alfred's, and that the idea was carried out under Alfred's supervision. For a résumé of his views, see Revue Historique, 1901, lxxvi. 137-8, GRUBITZ, ERNST. Kritische Untersuchung über die angelsächsischen Annalen bis zum Jahre 893. Göttingen, 1868. pp. 34. (In his opinion the nucleus of the oldest part of the Chronicle comprises brief contemporary annals compiled at Canterbury and dealing with local ecclesiastical matters; of these annals there are traces from A.D. 664 to 833. In the middle of the 9th century they were continued either at Canterbury or at Winchester in the form of general annals to 855, with Wessex as the central point of interest; and in this continuation much attention was given to the Danes and to military affairs. Probably after 870 additions were made at Winchester from B.C. 60 to A.D. 755, and from 855 onward.)

- 1350. Annales Anglosaxonici breves, A.D. 925–1202, ed. Felix Liebermann, Ungedruckte Geschichtsquellen, 1–8. Strasburg, 1879.

Brief notices of events written in Anglo-Saxon to 1109, with a Latin continuation to 1202; compiled by monks of St. Augustine, Canterbury; begun late in the 11th century and continued by various hands.

1351. * Annales Cambriæ [A.D. 444-954, with a continuation to 1288], ed. John Williams ab Ithel. Rolls Series. London, 1860.—The part A.D. 444-1066, in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 830-40. London, 1848.—The Annales Cambriæ [A.D. 457-954] and old Welsh genealogies, ed. Egerton Phillimore. Soc. of Cymmrodorion, Y Cymmrodor, ix. 141-83. London, 1888.

[Well edited.]—Excerpts from the continuation (known as Annales Meneviæ and Annales Stratæ Floridæ), 1107–1273, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 442–4. Hanover, 1885.

This is the best authority for early Welsh history, and seemingly the basis for all later chronicles of Wales. It was compiled about 954, probably at St. Davids, and perhaps by Blegewyrd, archdeacon of Llandaff. The earlier portion seems to be derived from an Irish chronicle. Although the work deals mainly with Wales, it contains some brief but valuable notices of English events from A.D. 597 onward. The latter part of the continuation was probably written in the monastery of Strata Florida. In the editions of 1848 and 1860 the Annales have been amalgamated with two later chronicles. For a valuable paper on the Annales Cambriæ, see Egerton Phillimore's Publication of Welsh Historical Records, Soc. of Cymmrodorion, Y Cymmrodor, 1892, xi. 133-75.

1352. Annales Lindisfarnenses [A.D. 532-993] et annales Dunelmenses [A.D. 995-1199], ed. Pertz, in Monumenta Germ. Hist., Scriptores (No. 594), xix. 502-8. Hanover, 1866.

These brief northern annals were discovered by Pertz at Glasgow in 1862. They were compiled at different times by various persons. Pertz's view, that they are contemporary annals and that they were used by Simeon of Durham, is combated by L. Theopold, Kritische Untersuchungen (Lemgo, 1872), 71-73. For other remains of early Northumbrian historiography, see No. 1376.

1353. Annals of Ireland: three fragments copied from ancient sources by Dubhaltach Mac Firbisigh [Irish text, with a translation], ed. John O'Donovan. Irish Archæol. and Celtic Soc. Dublin, 1860.

The age of the MS. from which these annals were copied is not known. They extend from about A.D. 573 to 913, and dwell especially upon the military achievements of the princes of the territory of Ossory and Leix.

✓ 1354. *ASSER (d. circa 909). ✓ Asser's Life of king Alfred, together with the Annals of Saint Neots erroneously ascribed to Asser, ed. W. H. Stevenson. Oxford, 1904. [With valuable introduction and notes.]—Annales rerum gestarum Ælfredi Magni, ed. Francis Wise. Oxford, 1722.—Also in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 467–98; based on Wise's edition. London, 1848.—Older editions: by Parker, 1574; by Camden, 1602 and 1603: Nos. 576, 593.—Brief extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 120–22. Hanover, 1881. ✓ Translated by J. A. Giles, 1848 (reprint, 1908), J. Stevenson, 1854, and E. Conybeare, 1900 (Nos. 574, 597, 1532a); by A. B. Cook, Boston, [1906]; and by L. C. Jane, London; 1908.

Asser, a monk of St. Davids, went to the court of Alfred about 884 to assist the king in his studies, and a few years later he was made bishop of Sherborne. His life of Alfred, compiled about 894, consists of two parts: (1) a narrative of events, A.D. 849-887, drawn mainly from the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle; (2) an account of Alfred's career to 893, based on the author's personal observations. By some writers the work used to be regarded as spurious; but Stevenson shows that it may be considered trustworthy and valuable, though it doubtless contains many later interpolations. For the literature of the older controversy, now superseded by Stevenson's scholarly introduction, see the first edition of Gross's Sources (London, 1900), p. 180. The only MS. then known to exist was destroyed in the Cottonian fire of 1731.

✓ 1355. *Bede, or Beda (672 or 673-735). Venerabilis Bedæ Historiæ ecclesiasticæ gentis Anglorum libri quinque, ed. John Smith. Cambridge, 1722.—Other editions: by Joseph Stevenson, English Hist. Soc., London, 1838; J. A. Giles, with a translation, 2 vols., London, 1843; Robert Hussey, Oxford, 1846; Petrie, Monumenta (No. 537), 103-289, London, 1848; G. H. Bede, one of the most eminent historians of medieval Europe, was probably born at or near Wearmouth, and spent most of his life in the monastery of Jarrow on the banks of the Tyne. The most important of his works is the Historia Ecclesiastica, extending from B.C. 55 to A.D. 731. the date of its compilation. The brief account of British history to 596, in bk. i., is derived mainly from Orosius and Gildas. From 597 to 731 the narrative is based upon written documents and verbal communications. For the secular as well as the ecclesiastical events of those years it is our only authentic source, the one from which all later writers obtain their information. The oldest and best MSS. are the Moore MS. (called M), in the Cambridge University library, and two in the British Museum, namely, Cotton, Tiber. A. xiv. (=B) and Cotton, Tiber. C. ii. (=C). Smith's excellent text was based upon these three eighth-century MSS., especially upon M, and was adopted with few corrections by subsequent editors; hence little was done for the textual criticism of Bede from 1722 to 1896. Plummer's text is now the best: he has carefully collated the oldest MSS., attaching considerable value to C as well as to M. This is the first critical edition since Smith's, and the only one which exhibits the various readings of the older MSS. Vol. ii. consists mainly of valuable notes. For Bede's complete works, see Nos. 1448-51. The best accounts of his life and writings will be found in Plummer's edition of the Historia Ecclesiastica and in Werner's Beda.

including also much information concerning Scandinavia and northwest Germany, A.D. 788-1072; compiled in 1075. Contains some valuable details regarding the relations of the Danes to England, especially in the 11th century. See Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 10-12.

1356a. Caithreim Cellachain Caisil: the victorious career of Cellachan of Cashel, or the wars between the Irishmen and the Norsemen in the middle of the 10th century. Edited, with a translation, by Alexander Bugge. Christiania, 1905.

The foundation of this saga is historical. Cellachan was king of Munster, and began his reign circa 934. He died circa 954. The work was compiled toward the end of the 15th century, but was based on an older text.

1357. Chronicon abbatiæ Rameseiensis [circa A.D. 924-1200, in four parts], ed. W. D. Macray. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Pts. i.-iii., ed. Gale, Scriptores XV., 385-462. Oxford, 1691.

Probably compiled in 1170, some of the matter in pt. iv. having been added later. It is commonly cited as the Historia Rameseiensis; the unknown author calls it Liber Benefactorum Ecclesiæ Rameseiensis. Pts. i.—iii., extending to 1066, comprise the story of the foundation of the abbey, the life of St. Oswald, and charters of lands granted to Ramsey, together with some notices of public events. Pt. iv. is little more than a register of legal documents; it contains many charters conveying lands to the abbey, A.D. 974 to circa 1200. The work affords many illustrations of legal customs. App. iv., pp. 368–417, of Macray's edition also contains a letter-book of Abbot John de Sautre, A.D. 1285–1316, and extracts from a register of the letters of Abbot Simon de Eye, A.D. 1317–32.

1357a. Chronicon fani Sancti Neoti sive Annales Asserii [B.C. 60-A.D. 914], ed. Thomas Gale, Scriptores XV., 141-75. Oxford, 1691.—Edited by W. H. Stevenson, Oxford, 1904 (No. 1354).

These annals (probably compiled in the 12th century) are in part derived from Asser's life of Alfred, and hence were formerly assigned to Asser. 'Of little value in themselves for history . . . they are of great importance for the criticism of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, for, while founded largely on that Chronicle, they have preserved the true chronology, which in all our MSS. is disjointed': Plummer, Two Saxon Chronicles, vol. ii. p. ciii.

1358. Chronicon monasterii de Abingdon [A.D. 201–1189], ed. Joseph Stevenson. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1858.

The oldest MS. belongs to the first half of the 13th century. The earlier and larger portion of the chronicle is mainly a transcript of the title-deeds of the abbey, A.D. 687-1066, with some narrative. After 1066 we find fewer charters and more narrative. The documents embodied in this work illustrate political and ecclesiastical history, institutional life, and the social condition of the people. The narrative portions, though dealing mainly with the monastery, also give some information concerning the general affairs of the kingdom.

1359. Chronologia brevissima ad Northanhymbros spectans, A.D. 547-737, in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 290. London, 1848.

A few lines containing scanty chronological notes, recording the length of the reigns of several Northumbrian kings and the dates of certain other events. Most of the compilation is derived from Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica. Petrie believes that it may have been written in 737, but this conclusion is doubted by Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 464.

1360. CIRENCESTER, RICHARD OF (d. circa 1401). Speculum historiale de gestis regum Angliæ [A.D. 447–1066], ed. J. E. B. Mayor. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1863–69.

A careless compilation of little value, derived from Bede, Geoffrey of Monmouth, Roger of Wendover, and other chroniclers. Bk. iv. is devoted to Edward the Confessor. The author was a monk of Westminster. For the forgery entitled De Situ Britanniæ, attributed to him, see No. 1271a.

✓ 1361. Continuatio Bedæ. Printed at the end of most of the editions of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica (No. 1355): for example, Smith's, 223-4; Stevenson's, ii. 256-8; Hussey's, 313-15; Petrie's, 288-9; Plummer's, i. 361-3.

This continuation of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica, often called Appendix ad Bedam, comprises brief but valuable memoranda, which extend from A.D. 731 to 766 and relate mainly to Northumbrian affairs. The earliest MS. is of the 12th century. The tract seems to have been compiled contemporaneously with the events which it records. It has been conjectured that the part to 734 was written by Bede, and the rest by Egbert, archbishop of York. See H. Hahn, Die Continuatio Bedæ, in Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte, 1880, xx. 553-69; and No. 1376.

1362. De obsessione Dunelmi et de probitate Uchtredi comitis, ed. J. H. Hinde, Symeonis Dunelmensis Opera et Collectanea, i. 154–7. Surtees Soc. London, etc., 1868.—Other editions: Twysden, Scriptores X., 79–82, London, 1652; Thomas Arnold, Symeonis Monachi Opera, i. 215–20, Rolls Series, 1882.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iii. pt. ii. 765–8. London, 1855.

This short tract has been attributed to Simeon of Durham, but it was probably written circa 1090 by an unknown author. It depicts the prowess of Uchtred, earl of Northumbria, in connection with the siege of Durham by the Scots in 969 (1006?); and it gives information regarding the earls who succeeded him down to the time of the Norman Conquest. It also throws some light on the usages and manners of northern England in the 11th century. See Hinde's edition, pp. xxix.-xxx.; Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 569. The date of the siege as it stands in the tract, A.D. 969, is clearly erroneous. Hinde believes that it is a mistake for 999, while Freeman, Norman Conquest, i. 328, declares that the correct date is 1006.

1363. De primo Saxonum adventu sive de eorundem regibus libellus, ed. J. H. Hinde, Symeonis Dunelmensis Opera et Collectanea, i. 202–15. Surtees Soc. London, etc., 1868.—Also ed. Thomas Arnold, Symeonis Monachi Opera, ii. 365–84. Rolls Series. London, 1885.

This compilation has been ascribed to Simeon of Durham, but it was probably written in 1138 or 1139, after Simeon's death. It gives a brief account of the kings of Kent, East Auglia, Essex, Mercia, Wessex (to Henry I.), Bernicia, Northumbria, and Deira, together with a sketch of the earls of Northumbria and the bishops of Canterbury, York, and Durham. The portion relating to Northumbria contains particulars not met with elsewhere, probably derived from authorities which no longer exist. See Hinde's edition, pp. xlv.-lv.

1364. ELMHAM, THOMAS OF (d. circa 1428). Historia monasterii S. Augustini Cantuariensis [A.D. 597-1191], ed. Charles Hardwick. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

Compiled in 1414, probably by Thomas of Elmham, a monk of St. Augustine's. The portion of the work actually completed covers the years 597-806, while the rest of the volume is made up of rough materials for the projected continuation of the history, such as charters and bulls (many of them spurious) relating to the abbey, from about 1066 to 1191. The author passes with facility from the history of St. Augustine's to that of the Anglo-Saxon church in general, and the net result of his labour is little more than a painstaking compilation. He made free use of Bede, William of Malmesbury, and other well-known sources. For his other writings, see Nos. 1769, 1789.

1365. Encomium Emmæ, ed. Pertz, in Monumenta Germ. Hist., Scriptores (No. 594), xix. 509–25, under the title, Cnutonis regis gesta sive Encomium Emmæ. Hanover, 1866. [This is the best edition.]—Other editions: by Duchesne, 1619; Langebek, 1773; anonymous, London, 1783; Maseres, 1807; Migne, Patrologia, 1853, vol. cxli.: see § 16a.

This is a contemporary source, compiled by a monk of St. Bertin and covering the years 1012-42. The writer dedicates his work to Emma, wife of Ethelred II. and Cnut, and dwells particularly upon the exploits of the Danish king. Though of some importance, it should be used cautiously, for it often sets forth events inaccurately and imperfectly. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 627-30, ii. 1-5.

✓ 1366. ETHELWERD (d. 998?). Fabii Ethelwerdi Chronicorum libri quatuor, in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 499–521. London, 1848.—Also ed. Savile, Scriptores, 473–83. London, 1596; reprinted, Frankfort, 1601.—Brief extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 122–3. Hanover, 1881.—Translated by J. A. Giles, 1848 (reprint, 1908), and J. Stevenson, 1854: Nos. 574, 597.

The author was probably an alderman, and he says that he was a descendant ('pronepos') of King Ethelred I., brother of King Alfred. His work is the only Latin chronicle that bridges the gap of two centuries between Asser and Florence of Worcester. It extends from the creation to A.D. 975, and is an abridgment of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, with some small additions for the years 892-975. Its chief value lies in the fact that it represents a copy of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle which no longer exists. The only MS. then extant was destroyed in the Cottonian fire of 1731.

[Irish text and English translation.]—Extracts in W. F. Skene's Chronicles of the Picts and Scots, 18–22, 119. H.M. Register House, Edinburgh, 1867.

In this tract, which is written in Irish, the author compares or synchronises the chronology of Ireland with that of other countries, giving careful lists of Irish kings, together with the names of contemporary monarchs who reigned elsewhere. The work, with its continuation, extends from the creation to III9. MacCarthy (p. 243) contends that there is no evidence to show that the work was written by Flann of the Monastery. He says (pp. 247-59) that the Chronicon Scotorum (No. 1752) is a compendium of Tigernach (No. 1377), and that the pre-Patrician portion of Tigernach was based mainly on the Synchronisms. Flann also wrote some historical poems. See E. O'Curry, Lectures on the MS. Materials of Irish History (Dublin, 1861), 53-57.

1368. Genealogia regum.

Royal genealogies and lists of English kings were compiled probably as early as the 7th or 8th century, and seem to have been turned to account in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. Genealogies of the kings of northern and eastern England in MS. Cotton, Vespasian B. vi. fol. 108, written seemingly in Northumbria between 811 and 814, are printed in Henry Sweet's Oldest English Texts (London, 1885), 167-71; the last king mentioned is Ceonwulf, who died in 819 or 821. They resemble the genealogies embedded in Nennius's Historia Britonum, §§ 57-65: see H. Zimmer, Nennius Vindicatus (Berlin, 1893), 74-106; R. Thurneysen, in Zeitschrift für Deutsche Philologie, 1895, xxviii. 99-102. For Wessex we have the Genealogia Regum et Successio Regum West-Saxonum, A.D. 494-978, in Cotton, Tiber. A. iii. fol. 175, a MS. of the 11th century, of which there is a facsimile in Thorpe's edition of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, London, 1861, vol. i. plate vii. Another version is prefixed to the Corpus Christi college MS. of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle: Thorpe's edition, i. 1-2; Earle's edition, 2-4. Both versions, together with a third, are printed in Hardy's Catalogue of Materials, i. 575-9. Genealogies of the kings of Kent, East Anglia, Mercia, Northumbria, and Wessex, probably based upon older lists, are also preserved at the end of the Chronicle of Florence of Worcester: they are published in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 627-44, and in Thorpe's edition of Florence of Worcester, i. 247-80. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 133 (cf. ibid., ii. 174, 250, 257); J. M. Kemble, Ueber die Stammtafel der Westsachsen, Munich, 1836, pp. 35.

1369. Gesta regum Britanniæ, ed. Francisque Michel. Cambrian Archæol. Assoc. [London], 1862.

✓ 1370. *GILDAS (d. circa 570). De excidio Britanniæ, ed. Joseph Stevenson. English Hist. Soc. London, 1838.—Also in Petrie's Monumenta (No. 537), 1-46. London, 1848.—Gildæ sapientis De excidio et conquestu Britanniæ, ed. Theodor Mommsen, in Monumenta Germ. Hist., Auctores Antiq. (No. 594), xiii. 1-85. Berlin, 1898 [1894]. This is the best edition.—Gildæ de excidio Britanniæ [with translation], ed. Hugh Williams. Soc. of Cymmrodorion, Record Series, no. 3. Pts. i.-ii. London, 1899-1901. [Pt. iii. will complete the work.]—Translated by J. A. Giles, 1841, 1848 (reprint, 1908): Nos. 574, 582.—For other editions and translations, see Potthast, Bibliotheca. i. 525.

Gildas, called St. Gildas the Wise, was probably a Welsh monk, who, according to Mommsen, was born not long before 504. Little is known concerning his life: see the two 'Vitæ' printed with Mommsen's edition, and that by Ferdinand Lot in Annales de Bretagne, 1909–10, xxv. 346–65, 493–516. His work, often called Liber Querulus de Excidio Britanniæ, was written in Armorica. The date of its compilation is placed by Mommsen shortly before 547; by Hardy, in 560. In most editions it is divided into two parts, namely, the Historia (§§ 1–26), which deals briefly with the period of the Roman occupation and with the coming of the Saxons, and the Epistola (§§ 27–110), which is a verbose jeremiad against the wickedness of the British princes and clergy; Mommsen, however, condemns this division of the work. Though the tract contains few facts, it is valuable as the sole contemporary authority for the study of the Teutonic conquest of England.

Ingulf, abbot of Crowland, was one of the secretaries or chancery clerks of William the Conqueror. The Historia Croylandensis, also called Descriptio compilata per Dominum Ingulphum, contains, in addition to the history of the abbey and numerous spurious charters, many particulars concerning the affairs of the kingdom. It used to be regarded as a work of great historical value, but it is now known to be a forgery. In 1824 Palgrave declared that it was a 'mere monkish invention,' and his view has been confirmed by the investigations of Riley, Hardy, Liebermann, and Searle. Although their arguments seem to be conclusive, Birch refuses to accept them. Liebermann believes that the fabrication dates from about the middle of the 14th century, whereas Riley assigns it to about A.D. 1414. The work was probably written by a monk of Crowland to forward the interests of the abbey in connection with some lawsuit, the spurious charters forming the real nucleus of the compilation. The discovery that it was a forgery 'necessitated the revision of every standard book on early English history'. Stubbs, Lectures, 52. Liebermann shows that the continuation to 1135, which is extant only to 1117 and professes to have been written by Peter of Blois, is also a forgery of the 14th century. The other continuations are genuine works of considerable value: see No. 1798.

Compiled by Thomas, a monk of Ely, who died not long after 1174. Gale and Wharton print it under the title Historia Eliensis. Bk. i. extends from circa 499 to circa 970, bk. ii. to 1107, bk. iii. to 1169. Bk. ii. seems to be based on a work undertaken by Richard, a monk of Ely, at the request of Bishop Hervey (1108-31), and bk. iii. was seemingly begun by Richard, prior of Ely, who flourished in the middle of the 12th century; but there is much uncertainty regarding the portions written by the two Richards. The Book of Ely contains a history of the abbey (interspersed with charters), together with some allusions to the general affairs of the kingdom and an account of certain pleas in the local public courts.

Probably compiled late in the 14th century. Chs. i.-xi. give a brief summary of the history of the heptarchic kingdoms and their union into one state. This is followed by a chronicle of each reign from Ethelwulf to Cnut. The author quotes Bede, Henry of Huntingdon, William of Malmesbury, Roger of Wendover, Higden, and other chronicles, some of which are not now extant. The Book of Hyde affords some information not obtainable elsewhere, especially regarding the reign of Alfred. It is a chartulary as well as a chronicle: each reign from Alfred to Ethelred the Unready has an appendix of charters relating directly or indirectly to the monastery of Hyde, some of which are not found elsewhere. Edwards, in his edition, pp. 283-321, also prints the brief Chronica Monasterii de Hida, A.D. 1035-1120, compiled in the reign of Henry I.

Evans, in The Red Book of Hergest, vol. ii.: The Text of the Bruts from the Red Book, 1-256. Oxford, 1890. Translated into English by J. A. Giles, 1842 and 1848, reprinted 1908 (Nos. 574, 582); and by Sebastian Evans, London, [1903].

Geoffrey, archdeacon of Monmouth, was consecrated bishop of St. Asaph in 1152. His Historia Britonum, or Historia Regum Britanniæ (of which the first draft was made before 1138 and the final edition completed in 1147), consists largely of fabulous matter; it is 'an elaborate tissue of Celtic myths, legends, and traditions, scraps of classical and Scriptural learning, and fantastic inventions of the author's own fertile brain, all dexterously thrown into a pseudo-historical shape': Kate Norgate, England under the Angevin Kings, ii. 445. It is the fountainhead of medieval romance, the principal source of the legends of Merlin and Arthur, which were accepted as real history by many chroniclers from the 12th century onward. San-Marte believes that Geoffrey's Historia Regum is based on a Welsh brut, or chronicle, of Tysilio, a Welsh saint (fl. circa A.D. 600); but the Brut Tysilio seems to be a late translation or adaptation of Geoffrey's work. The Brut Tysilio is printed in the Myvyrian Archaiology of Wales (London, 1801), ii. 81-390 (new edition, Denbigh, 1870, pp. 434-75); translated into English by Peter Roberts, The Chronicle of the Kings of Britain, London, 1811; translated into German by San-Marte in his edition of the Historia Regum. Geoffrey's work is the basis of Wace's Roman de Brut and of Layamon's Brut (Nos. 1809, 1859), both of which were compiled within fifty years after Geoffrey's death. For the literature relating to Geoffrey, and for the older editions of the Historia Britonum, see Dictionary of National Biography, 1890, xxi. 133-5; Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 487-8; Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 341-59; R. Lewis Jones, in Transac tions of the Society of Cymmrodorion, 1898-99 (London, 1900), 52-95.

Todd. Irish Archæol. Soc. Dublin, 1848.

There is much dispute regarding this work. It has been ascribed to Gildas and to an Irish bishop, Mark the Hermit, but most authorities now believe that it was compiled by an anonymous writer. Zimmer 'vindicates' Nennius as the real author, and contends that the Historia was completed in 796 in southeast Wales. Duchesne, Mommsen, and Thurneysen believe that the oldest text was compiled before the time of Nennius, and that he simply made additions to it. The work contains a description of Britain, and deals briefly with the period of the Roman occupation, the incursions of the Picts and Scots, the arrival of the Saxons, their conflict with the Britons, and genealogies of English kings to 796. As a historical source it has little value, but it is of some importance for the study of early British mythology, especially for the study of the legend of Arthur. Of the books and essays mentioned below, those of Thurneysen and Zimmer are the best.

1376. Northumbrian chronicle (The).

This work is not extant, but remains of it are embedded in the first portion of Simeon of Durham's Historia Regum Anglorum et Dacorum. Fragments of these portions are edited by Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 154-6. The lost chronicle probably covered the years 732-802, in continuation of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica; and it seems to have been used by some of the compilers of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle in dealing with northern affairs. Stubbs believes that it was written in Latin early in the 9th century, under the title Gesta Veterum Northambrorum, and that Alcuin may have been instrumental in its composition. The entries often coincide with those of the Continuatio Bedæ (No. 1361); hoth these sources supply valuable information, not found elsewhere, relating to the kingdom of Northumbria.

Tigernach was abbot of Clonmacnoise. The extant fragments of his Annals, written partly in Latin and partly in Irish, extend from the time of the prophets to 1088, with a continuation to 1178; but the years 767-974 are wanting, and there are other gaps. This valuable work seems to be the source from which most of the later annalists of Ireland borrowed their materials for Irish history down to 1088. It also throws some light on the affairs of Scotland and England. See E. O'Curry, Lectures on the MS. It was compiled by an unknown writer between 1066 and 1074; Böhmer, in his Kirche und Staat (No. 3074), p. 75, says that it was written by a chaplain of King Edward or Queen Eadgyth who was educated in Flanders. Extends from about 795 to 1014; compiled from contemporary sources, probably at the end of the 11th century, by some one who witnessed the exploits of Brian Boru (d. 1014). It is conjectured that the author may have been Mac Lieg, who died in 1016. The first part gives an account of the arrival of the Norsemen in Ireland; the second part is devoted to the history of the Munster chieftains, especially to the deeds of Brian Boru. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian sagas. See Douglas Hyde, Literary History of Ireland, 1899, pp. 434-42.

- a. Collections, Nos. 1381-5a.
- b. Particular Sagas, Nos. 1386-90.

This literature is chiefly of Icelandic origin. A saga is a prose epic narrating the tale of a chieftain's adventures at home and abroad. The most important of these stories seem to have taken shape in the mouths of Icelanders in the eleventh century, and at first were orally recited. They were reduced to writing in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, most of them between 1140 and 1240. Those that are of interest to students of English history may be classified as follows:—

- I. Icelandic family sagas, each containing the life and exploits of an Icelandic chieftain or family, mainly in the period A.D. 900-1030 (Nos. 1386, 1388).
- 2. Kings' sagas, memoirs of kings, chiefly of Norway (Nos. 1383-4, 1389).
- 3. Sagas referring to countries other than Iceland and Norway (Nos. 1387, 1390).

The sagas are valuable for the study of the Northmen in England and Ireland, especially in the tenth and eleventh centuries, but they must be used cautiously. The kings' sagas throw most light upon the doings of the Northmen in England, being filled with stories like those concerning the relations of Harold Fair-Hair to Athelstan, the exploits of Eric Blood-Axe in Northumbria, the expeditions of the two Olafs, Cnut, and Harold Hardrede to England, the forays of jarls in the British Isles, and the account of the battle of Stamford Bridge.

An excellent survey of the saga literature is to be found in the prolegomena of G. Vigfússon's edition of Sturlunga Saga, 2 vols., Oxford, 1878. See also the preliminary matter in Richard Cleasby's Icelandic Dictionary, Oxford, 1874; the preliminary dissertation in Laing's Heimskringla (No. 1384): F. W. Anderson, with a bibliography of books in English, Chicago, 1884; Eugen Mogk, in Hermann Paul's Grundriss der Germanischen Philologie, 2nd edition, ii. pt. i. 730-923; F. York Powell, Saga-Growth, in Folk-Lore, 1894, v. 97-106; Finnur Jónsson, Den Oldnorske og Oldislandske Litteraturs Historie, 3 vols. in 4 pts., Copenhagen, 1804-1902 (vol. ii. pts. i.-ii. deals especially with sagas), and his Den Islandske Litteraturs Historie, Copenhagen, 1907. Two bibliographies by Theodor Möbius are of great value: Catalogus Librorum Islandicorum et Norvegicorum, Leipsic, 1856; and Verzeichniss der Altnordischen Sprache und Literatur von 1855 bis 1879, Leipsic, 1880. See also Halldór Hermannsson's bibliographies of Icelandic sagas, sagas of the kings of Norway, and mythical-heroic sagas (vols. i., iii., and v. of Islandica. an annual edited by G. W. Harris, at Ithaca, New York, 1908, etc.). #### a. COLLECTIONS.

Many of the kings' sagas in their more complete form are found in old vellums of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, such as Fagrskinna, ed. C. R. Unger, Christiania, 1847; Flateyjarbók, ed. Unger, 3 vols., 1860-68; Morinskinna, ed. Unger, 1867.

- 1381. Altnordische Saga-Bibliothek, ed. G. Cederschiöld, H. Gering, and E. Mogk. Vols. i.-xiv. Halle, 1892-1909.
- 1382. Antiquitates Celto-Scandicæ sive series rerum gestarum inter nationes Britannicarum insularum et gentes septentrionales: ex Snorrone, Landnamaboc, Egilli Scallagrimi-saga, Niala-saga, O. Tryggvasonar-saga, Orkneyinga-saga, Knytlinga-saga, etc., ed. James Johnstone. Copenhagen, 1786.

A collection of extracts, with a Latin translation. Better texts of these sagas are now easily accessible.

1383. *Fornmanna Sögur. 12 vols. Copenhagen, 1825–37. —Latin translation: Scripta historica Islandorum. 12 vols. Copenhagen, 1828–46.

A series of kings' lives, fuller than those in the Heimskringla. Vols. i.-vi., x.-xi., include lives of Olaf Tryggvason, St. Olaf, Magnus the Good, and Harold Hardrede (to ro66); also Knytlinga saga (to 1187).

✓ 1384. *Heimskringla af Snorre Sturlasson, ed. C. R. Unger. Christiania, [1863]–68.—Another edition, by N. Linder and K. A. Haggson (mainly a reprint of Unger's), 3 vols., Upsala, 1870–72.—Latest edition, by Finnur Jónsson, 4 vols. (9 pts.), Copenhagen, 1893–1901.—Extracts, with a Latin translation, by F. Jónsson, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxix. 329–49. Hanover, 1892.—Translated by Samuel Laing: The Heimskringla, or chronicle of the kings of Norway. 3 vols. London, 1844; 2nd edition, by R. B. Anderson, 4 vols., 1889; new edition, 3 vols., 1906. ✓ A better translation: The stories of the kings of Norway, called the Round World (Heimskringla), done into English by William Morris and Eiríkr Magnússon. 4 vols. London, 1893–1905.—Codex Frisianus, or Fris-bók [written about 1270; contains a MS. of the Heimskringla], ed. C. R. Unger. Christiania, 1871.

Snorri Sturlason (1178-1241), the great historian and poet, was an Icelander of good family who was prominent in the public affairs of his country. His Heimskringla—the Earth's Circle, so called from the first words in one of the manuscripts of the work—was written about 1230. It comprises abbreviated kings' sagas, interwoven with facts derived from the Kings' Book of Ari the Historian (d. 1148). The sagas of Harold Fair-Hair, the two great Olafs, Magnus the Good, and Harold Hardrede contain many references to English affairs in the 10th and 11th centuries. See Potthast, Bibliotheca, ii. 1024-6, 1385. Islendinga Sögur. [Kongelige Nordiske Oldskrift-Selskab.] 2 vols. Copenhagen, 1829–30.—Another series, 4 vols., 1843–89.

The collection of Islendinga Sögur edited by Valdimar Asmundarson, Finnur Jónsson, and Thorlei'r Jónsson (41 pts. in 17 vols., Reykjavík, 1891–1907) is uncritical.

√ 1385a. Origines Islandicæ: a collection of the more important sagas and other native writings relating to the settlement and early history of Iceland. Edited and translated by Gudbrand Vigfússon and F. York Powell. 2 vols. Oxford, 1905.

Does not contain much about England.

b. PARTICULAR SAGAS.

The five works mentioned below were written in the thirteenth century. For the editions and literature, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 393, 699, ii. 845, 876, 882.

1386. Egil's saga, ed. Finnur Jónsson. Copenhagen, 1886–88. —Also in Altnordische Saga-Bibliothek (No. 1381), vol. iii. Halle, 1894.—Translated by W. C. Green: The story of Egil Skallagrimsson, an Icelandic family history of the ninth and tenth centuries. London, 1893.

The story of a deadly fend between a noble Icelandic family and Harold Fair-Hair and his descendants, circa A.D. 870-980. Egil was a guest at the court of King Athelstan. The saga has many interesting notices of the Northmen in England, but too much credence should not be placed in them.

1387. Knytlinga saga, in Fornmanna Sögur (No. 1383), xi. 179–402. Copenhagen, 1828.—Copious extracts, with a Latin translation, by F. Jónsson, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxix. 271–322. Hanover, 1892.

Contains the lives of the kings of Denmark from Cnut the Great to 1187a See Finnur Jónsson, Knytlingasaga, dens Kilder og Historiske Værd, Copenhagen, 1900, pp. 41 (extract from Mémoires de l'Académie Royale des Sciences et des Lettres de Danemark, 6th series, section des Lettres, vol. vi. no. 1).

✓ 1388. Njal's saga, in Islendinga Sögur (No. 1385), vols. iii.—iv. Copenhagen, 1875–89.—Latest edition, by Finnur Jónsson, in Altnordische Saga-Bibliothek (No. 1381), vol. xiii. Halle, 1908.—Translated by G. W. Dasent: The story of Burnt Njal, or life in Iceland at the end of the tenth century. 2 vols. Edinburgh, 1861; other editions, I vol., London, etc., 1900, 1906, and 1911 (Everyman's Library).✓

Covers the years 970-1014, or thereabouts. Contains some valuable details regarding the battle of Clontarf and the Irish king Brian Born (d. 1014).

1389. Olaf's saga, in Fornmanna Sögur (No. 1383), vols. i.-iii. Copenhagen, 1825-27.—Extracts, with a Latin translation, by F. Jónsson, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxix. 381-94. Hanover, 1892.—Translated by John Sephton: The saga of Olaf Tryggwason, who reigned in Norway A.D. 995-1000. London, 1895.

Contains many notices of English affairs, circa 918-1035.

× 1390. Orkneyinga saga. Edited by Gudbrand Vigfússon, with an English translation by G. W. Dasent, in Icelandic Sagas and other Historical Documents relating to the Settlements and Descents of the Northmen on the British Isles, vols. i. and iii. Rolls Series. 4 vols. London, 1887–94. [Vols. ii. and iv. contain the Hakonar saga, A.D. 1203–64.]—The Orkneyinga saga. Translated by J. A. Hjaltalin and G. Goudie, edited by Joseph Anderson. Edinburgh, 1873.

Gives an account of the conquest of the Orkneys and their subsequent history under the Norse jarls, A.D. 872-1222.

§ 36. LAWS.

- a. Collective Editions, Nos. 1391-6.
- b. Private Compilations (England), Nos. 1397-1409.

When the Saxons and Angles settled in England all their law was probably preserved in the form of oral tradition or customs. Owing to the development of civilisation and the influence of the church, some of these customs were altered and reduced to writing. The earliest written laws appeared soon after the coming of St. Augustine. The enactments or dooms, recorded then and later. were made by the king and witan. They do not form an exhaustive statement or complete codification of law, but comprise those portions that were changed, amended, or newly enforced: the greater part of the law remained unwritten. The dooms relate mainly to crime, to specific offences against the peace; no attempt is made to enunciate general legal principles. Compared with the continental folk-laws and capitularies, they are noted for their purely Germanic character or lack of intermixture with foreign law, and for the use of the vernacular language instead of Latin (the 'vetus versio,' No. 1409, which is usually printed with the Anglo-Saxon text, is a Latin translation of the twelfth century). They also cover a longer period of time, for new dooms continued to be made long after the Carolingian capitularies came to an end; and after authentic legislation ceases in Cnut's reign the gulf between Cnut and Glanvill is bridged by law-books, the counterparts of which were unknown to England's continental neighbours until the thirteenth century. In fact, no other Germanic nation has bequeathed to us so rich a treasure of early legal sources.

The existing series of Anglo-Saxon laws extends from the reign of Ethelbert of Kent to that of Cnut (circa 601-1020), with a gap of about two centuries (circa 695-890), and with various additions contained in private compilations, chiefly of the eleventh and twelfth centuries. The material may be grouped as follows:—

r. The dooms of Kent: those of Ethelbert, circa 601; Hlothære and Eadric, circa 685; Wihtred, circa 695; in all, one hundred and thirty-four short chapters, comprising mainly tables of penalties for crimes.

- 2. The dooms of Ine of Wessex, 688-695. These are more important than the early laws of Kent, because they are more numerous and wider in scope, and because they are the earliest laws of Wessex, 'quæ caput regni est et legum' (Leges Henrici Primi, ch. lxxxvii.). They were reissued by King Alfred, and in existing MSS. form an appendix to his laws. Alfred's dooms also refer to enactments made by Offa of Mercia (A.D. 757-796), which are not now extant.
- 3. The dooms of consolidated England, with Wessex as the nucleus, circa 890–1020; promulgated by Alfred, Edward the Elder, Athelstan, Edmund, Edgar, Ethelred, and Cnut; comprising about five-sixths of all the authentic Anglo-Saxon laws.
- 4. Private compilations, most of them printed in the appendix of Schmid's edition (No. 1392). They preserve fragments of Anglo-Saxon law of which traces are not found elsewhere. Most of the isolated pieces regarding wergelds, ranks, oaths, ordeals, gerefa, etc., and the more extensive Rectitudines Singularum Personarum (No. 1401), seem to be unofficial customals based upon authentic laws and compiled mainly in the eleventh century. In the twelfth century, especially in the time of Henry I., various Latin law-books were written in England, most of them by men of French birth, in order to expound the 'laga Edwardi,' i.e. the Anglo-Saxon legal system, which, as amended by William I. and Henry I., was still regarded as valid. These compilations are the so-called Leges Henrici Primi (the most valuable of the series), Leges Edwardi Confessoris, Leges Willelmi Conquestoris or the bilingual code, the Quadripartitus (which contains a Latin translation of the old dooms, with those of Cnut in the foreground), and two other translations of Cnut's laws, namely, the Consiliatio Cnuti and the Instituta Cnuti. To these should be added Pseudo-Cnut's Constitutiones de Foresta, a forgery of Henry II.'s time, and the untrustworthy Leges Anglorum of John's reign. Prominence is given to the name of Cnut in the first half of the twelfth century, because he was the last great Anglo-Saxon legislator, and because his dooms were regarded as the latest and best statement of English law. The compilations of the twelfth century add something to our knowledge of Anglo-Saxon institutions, but they must be cautiously exploited.

The authentic laws, from Ethelbert to Cnut, form our most valuable category of sources for the study of the old English constitution; they throw light upon many features of government and society.

The chief repositories of the MSS. are the British Museum (Cottonian and Harleian collections), Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, and the Bodleian library. The MSS. are preserved in the form, not of originals, but of later copies of the eleventh and subsequent centuries; the laws of Ine and Alfred are, however, extant in a MS. of the tenth century. The editions are: William Lambard, Archaionomia, 1568, 2nd edition by Abraham Wheloc, 1644 (appended to his edition of Bede's Ecclesiastical History); David Wilkins, Leges Anglo-Saxonicæ, 1721; Thorpe, Ancient Laws, 1840 (No. 1393); Schmid, Gesetze, 1858 (No. 1392); Liebermann, Gesetze, 1898, etc. (No. 1391).

The best account of the Anglo-Saxon dooms will be found in the introduction to Schmid's Gesetze. See also Liebermann, Zu den Gesetzen der Angelsachsen, in Zeitschrift für Rechtsgeschichte, 1884, xviii., Germ. Abth., 198-226; Pollock and Maitland, English Law, 2nd edition, i. 25-28, 97-107; Palgrave, English Commonwealth, i. 42-61; Brunner, Geschichte (No. 36), 1-19; Pauli, König Ælfred (Berlin, 1851), 164-76; Freeman, Norman Conquest, vol. i. app. KKK (Cnut's Leges Castrenses), vol. v. app. KK (Leges Willelmi and Leges Henrici Primi). Much light has been thrown upon the law-books of the twelfth century by Liebermann's scholarly brochures, which are mentioned below; and the whole subject will be treated in the introduction to his Gesetze (No. 1391).

For ecclesiastical laws, see § 38.

a. COLLECTIVE EDITIONS.

Anglo-Saxon Laws.

Thorpe, Schmid, and Liebermann print the dooms of the Anglo-Saxon kings, together with most of the private compilations. All three editions contain the Latin 'vetus versio' of the twelfth century (No. 1409), and either a German or an English translation of the Anglo-Saxon.

See also The Legal Code of Ælfred the Great, ed. M. H. Turk. Boston, 1893; F. Liebermann, Einleitung zum Statut der Londoner Friedensgilde unter Æthelstan, in Mélanges Fitting (Montpellier, 1908), ii. 77-103; R. Pauli, Ein Erlass Knuts des Grossen, in Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte, 1874, xiv. 300-06: Cnut's Leges Castrenses or Witherlags Ret (i.e. regulations regarding housecarls), by Sveno Aggonis, in Langebek's Scriptores (No. 585), iii. 139-64; Leonhard Wroblewski, Ueber die Altenglischen Gesetze des Königs Knut, Berlin, 1901; and No. 2446.

1301. *LIEBERMANN, FELIX. Die Gesetze der Angelsachsen, herausgegeben im Auftrage der Savigny-Stiftung. Vols. i.-ii. Halle, 1898-1912.

Vol. i. contains all the texts in Schmid's edition, with some new pieces; the three Latin translations of Cnut's dooms found in Quadripartitus, Instituta Cnuti, and Consiliatio Cnuti; and the framework of these Anglo-Norman law-books. Vol. ii. pt. i. is a dictionary and concordance, pt. ii. a glossary; vol. iii. will contain an introduction and a commentary. When completed, this will be by far the best edition. For reviews, see F. W. Maitland, Collected Papers (No. 656a), iii. 447-73; and H. W. C. Davis, The Anglo-Saxon Laws, in English Historical Review, 1913, xxviii. 417-30.

1302. *Schmid, Reinhold. Die Gesetze der Angelsachsen. Leipsic, 1832; 2nd edition, much enlarged, 1858.

Superior to Thorpe's edition. Schmid's glossary, a valuable contribution to legal and constitutional history, is now replaced by Liebermann's.

1303. [THORPE, BENJAMIN.] Ancient laws and institutes of England, with an English translation of the Saxon; also monumenta ecclesiastica. Record Com. 2 vols., 8vo. [London], 1840. -Also published in I vol., fo., 1840.

Much better than the older editions of the laws.

Irish and Welsh Laws.

1394. [HANCOCK, W. N., and RICHEY, A. G.] Ancient laws of Ireland, published under the direction of the commissioners for publishing the ancient laws and institutes of Ireland.

[Irish text with an English translation. Vols. v.-vi. by Robert Atkinson; vol. vi., glossary.] 6 vols. Dublin, etc., 1865-1901.

The Senchus Mor is in vols. i.-iii., the Book of Aicill in vol. iii., and various Brehon law-tracts of uncertain date in vols. iv.-v. Mor, or Great Book of the Ancient Law, professes to be a code of old legal usages which was drawn up by a committee of nine persons under the direction of St. Patrick, circa A.D. 438-441; but the truth of this has been doubted by writers like D'Arbois de Jubainville, Maine, and Whitley Stokes, who believe that the greater part of the work was compiled in the 9th or 10th century. It is concerned chiefly with the civil law (distress, suretyship, fosterage, contract, tenures, etc.), and contains many interesting facts regarding the early life and habits of the Irish people. The Book of Aicill, a survey of the criminal law, is avowedly composed of the decisions and opinions of two eminent jurists, Cormac MacAirt, who reigned A.D. 227-266, and Kennfaela the Learned, who flourished in the 7th century; the latter seems to have enlarged the work of the former. Although there may be much uncertainty regarding the actual time when the Senchus Mor and the Book of Aicill assumed their present shape (no MSS. are of older date than the 14th century), they doubtless contain many archaic rules of great antiquity. The glosses and commentary which accompany the texts are evidently later additions made by various generations of commentators.

The old legal system embodied in these two great codes and in the minor Irish law-tracts continued in use in Ireland outside the Pale till the beginning of the 17th century. According to Maine, these Brehon laws 'were not a legislative structure, but the creation of a class of professional lawyers, the Brehons, whose occupation became hereditary.' Besides the following works, the elaborate introductions in the edition of Hancock and Richey should be consulted. See also Whitley Stokes, A Criticism to Dr. Atkinson's Glossary to Volumes I.-V. of the Ancient Laws of Ireland, London, 1903, pp. 49.

1394a. Cáin Adamnáin: an old-Irish treatise on the law of Adamnan. Edited and translated by Kuno Meyer. Oxford, 1905.

This 'law of the innocents,' which seems to have been promulgated in 697, aims to protect women, clerics, and innocent children against violence. Adamnan is best known by his life of St. Columba (No. 1454).

1395. O'Donovan, John. Leabhar na g-Ceart: the book of rights, with a translation. Celtic Soc. Dublin, 1847.—Also ed. Robert Atkinson, The Book of Ballymote, 267–81 [photolithographed facsimile of the Book of Rights]. Royal Irish Academy. Dublin, 1887.

A series of Irish poems, each preceded by a prose summary. The compilation used to be ascribed to St. Benen or Benignus, an Irish bishop who died A.D. 468. Perhaps he wrote a Book of Rights, which was enlarged toward the beginning of the 10th century by Cormac Mac Cuileannain, king of Munster. Cormac's work 'gives an account of the monarchs of all Ireland, and the revenues payable to them by the principal kings of the several provinces, and of the stipends paid by the monarchs to the inferior kings for their services. It also treats of the rights of each of the provincial kings, and the revenues payable to them from the inferior kings of the districts or tribes subsidiary to them, and of the stipends paid by the superior to the inferior provincial kings for their services.' Prefixed to O'Donovan's edition is a tract on the Restrictions and Prerogatives of the Kings of Ireland, written by Cuan O'Leochan, 'archpoet of Ireland,' who died in 1024.

1396. [OWEN, ANEURIN.] Ancient laws and institutes of Wales: comprising laws supposed to be enacted by Howel the Good, modified by subsequent regulations under the native princes prior to the conquest by Edward I.; and anomalous laws; with an English translation of the Welsh text; to which are added a few Latin transcripts containing digests of the Welsh laws, principally of the Dimetian code. Record Com. 2 vols., 8vo. [London], 1841; also published in 1 vol., fo., 1841.—This superseded the imperfect editions in William Wotton's Leges Wallicæ, 1730, and Myvyrian Archaiology, 1807, vol. iii. (new edition, 1870, pp. 964–1070, text and translation).—Welsh medieval law: being a text of the laws of Howel the Good [with a translation].

By A. W. Wade-Evans. Oxford, 1909. Laws of Howell Dda: a facsimile reprint of Llanstephan MS. 116, ed. T. Lewis. London, 1913.—The ancient laws of Cambria [a translation of the triads, the laws of Howel the Good, etc.]. By William Probert. London, etc., 1823.

According to the oldest MS. of the Welsh laws, Howel Dda, or Howel the Good, king of Wales (d. 950), summoned the magnates of his principality and six men from each commot to the 'White House on the Tav' (probably Whitland in Carmarthenshire), and from this assembly he selected thirteen men to examine and amend the old laws. The code which they drew up was afterwards promulgated by Howel, probably about A.D. 943-50. It has come down to us in three recensions, containing Howel's enactments with the amendments made in the three principal divisions of Wales during the 11th and 12th centuries: the Venedotian code adapted to the usages of north Wales (oldest MS. at Peniarth, circa 1200), the Dimetian or south Welsh code (oldest MS. in British Museum, sæc. xiii.), and the Gwentian code for southeast Wales (oldest MS. in British Museum, sæc. xiv.). All three are printed in Owen's edition, together with Latin versions of them, and with various 'anomalous laws,' i.e. legal dicta, decisions, pleadings, triads, and other miscellaneous documents of uncertain date. The Welsh adhered to the legal system embodied in these codes until the time of Edward I. See F. Walter, Das alte Wales (Bonn, 1859), 354-69; T. F. Tout, Howel Dda, in Dictionary of National Biography, 1891, xxviii. 106-7; and Brynmor-Jones (No. 1394). On the MSS., see Historical MSS. Commission, Report on MSS. in the Welsh Language (below, app. B), passim.

b. PRIVATE COMPILATIONS (ENGLAND).

Isolated Pieces.

This category comprises about twenty pieces of uncertain date, but mainly of the eleventh century, each relating to a particular subject. Most of them are written in Anglo-Saxon, and are private compilations based on custom or on authentic legislation. All except Nos. 1398-9 are printed by Schmid and Thorpe (Nos. 1392-3); all of them are included in Liebermann's edition of the laws (No. 1391).

1397. De institutis Lundoniæ, ed. Schmid, 218-21; Thorpe, i. 300-303; Liebermann, i. 232-7; K. Höhlbaum, Hansisches Urkundenbuch (No. 2799), iii. 379-81.

According to Schmid, Thorpe, and Liebermann, this belongs to the time of Ethelred II.; but Höhlbaum believes that it was compiled after 1066. It contains enactments regarding the tolls collected at the gates of London, and in regard to counterfeiting and house-breaking.

1398. Dema, or Judex, ed. Liebermann, Zeitschrift für Rechtsgeschichte, 1884, xviii., Germ. Abth., 207–13; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 474–6.

Compiled circa 1000. Deals with the duties of a judge.

1399. Gerefa, ed. Liebermann, Anglia, 1886, ix. 251-66; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 453-5; W. Cunningham, Growth of English Commerce and Industry, 5th edition, 1910, i. 571-6.

Compiled early in the 11th century; seemingly a continuation of the Rectitudines (No. 1401). Expounds the duties of a reeve and the management of a great estate.

1400. Ordinance concerning the Dunsæte, ed. Schmid, 358-63; Thorpe, 352-7; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 374-9.

This law or ordinance was issued by King Edgar, A.D. 924-40, for a people in Herefordshire. See Liebermann, Die Angelsächsische Verordnung über die Dunsæte, in Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen, etc., 1899, cii. 267-96.

1401. Rectitudines singularum personarum, ed. Schmid, 370-83; Thorpe, i. 432-41; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 444-53; Heinrich Leo, Rectitudines Singularum Personarum, Halle, 1842.

Compiled between 960 and 1060. A valuable exposition of the services rendered to the lord by the various classes of persons on a manor. See Liebermann, Die Abfassungszeit von 'Rectitudines Singularum Personarum,' in Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen, etc., 1902, cix. 73–82.

Latin Law-Books.

All except No. 1404 are of the twelfth century; and most of them were written in England by men of French birth, in order to set forth or expound the 'laga Edwardi,' the old Anglo-Saxon legal system, which had been confirmed by William I. and Henry I.

1402. Consiliatio Cnuti, ed. Liebermann. Halle, 1893. pp. 29. —Liebermann also prints a part in his Gesetze, i. 618–19.

So called by the editor because the text begins, 'Hec est consiliatio quam Cnutus . . . consiliatus est.' It is a glossed translation of Cnut's laws (based on a lost Anglo-Saxon MS.), made in south England soon after 1ro2, probably by a cleric of French birth.

1403. Instituta Cnuti, ed. J. L. A. Kolderup-Rosenvinge, under the title, Legum regis Canuti Magni versio antiqua Latina ex codice Colbertino, cum textu Anglo-Saxonico. Copenhagen, 1826.—Schmid, pp. 425–32, prints a part of the Latin version, under the misleading title, Pseudoleges Canuti.—See also Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 612–17.

A glossed translation of Cnut's laws, with some chapters taken from other collections, including about a dozen enactments of which no Anglo-Saxon text survives. Probably written in 1110 in Mercia by a cleric of French birth. See Liebermann, On the Instituta Cnuti, Royal Hist. Soc., Trans., new series, 1893, ix. 77–107.

1404. Leges Anglorum. See Liebermann, Ueber die Leges Anglorum sæculo xiii. ineunte Londoniis collectæ. Halle, 1894. pp. 105.—Also Liebermann, English Hist. Review, 1913, xxviii. 732–45.

A large collection of laws, compiled by a citizen of London in the latter part of John's reign. It comprises extracts from pt. i. of the Quadripartitus (i.e. many dooms of Ine, Alfred, Athelstan, and Cnut), portions of the Articuli Willelmi (below, p. 443) and of the Leges Edwardi Confessoris, together with many of the compiler's own inventions and interpolations. He seems to have been a layman, and he favours the baronial movement against King John.

1405. Leges Edwardi Confessoris, ed. Schmid, 491–519; Thorpe, i. 442–62; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 627–72; Stubbs, in his edition of Hoveden's Chronica (No. 1800), ii. 219–41.

So called since the 17th century. Compiled in Warwickshire by a cleric of French birth, probably between 1130 and 1135. He describes English institutions as they were before 1066 and in Henry I.'s time. Although the tract shows a lack of knowledge of English law and history, Liebermann believes that it ranks next to the Leges Henrici Primi among the law-books of the 12th century. See Liebermann, Ueber die Leges Edwardi Confessoris, Halle, 1896.

1406. *Leges Henrici Primi, ed. Schmid, 432–90; Thorpe, i. 497–631; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 547–611; Liebermann, Ein ungedrucktes Vorwort zu den Leges Henrici Primi, Zeitschrift für Rechtsgeschichte, 1882, xvi., Germ. Abth., 127–36.

Probably written between 1110 and 1118 by the author of Quadripartitus (No. 1409). Contains the coronation charter of Henry I., from which the title of the whole work is derived; the charter granted by Henry I. to London, which seems to be a later interpolation; and a badly arranged statement of the Anglo-Saxon law as amended by William I. and Henry I., with brief extracts from decretals, the Codex Theodosianus,

'leges barharorum,' and Frankish capitularies. The author gets much of his material from Cnut's dooms, and makes some use of the older Anglo-Saxon laws. It is a less mechanical piece of work than the contemporary Consiliatio Cnuti, Instituta Cnuti, and Quadripartitus, and may be regarded as the earliest legal text-book of medieval Europe. See Liebermann, Die Abfassungszeit der Leges Henrici Primi, in Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte, 1876, xvi. 581-6; Liebermann, Ueber das Englische Rechtsbuch Leges Henrici, Halle, 1901, pp. 59; George Phillips, Englische Reichs- und Rechtsgeschichte (No. 2824), i. 202-22.

1407. Leges Willelmi Conquestoris, ed. Schmid, 322-51; Thorpe, i. 466-87; Robert Kelham, The Laws of William the Conqueror, London, 1779; Palgrave, English Commonwealth, ii. 88-140; J. E. Matzke, Lois de Guillaume le Conquérant, Paris, 1899.—Best edition, giving both Latin and French texts, by Liebermann, 'Leis Willelme,' in his Gesetze, i. 492-520.

Professes to contain the laws observed in the time of Edward the Confessor and newly promulgated by the Conqueror. The text is made up largely of Anglo-Saxon dooms, and is preserved in both Latin and French (hence often called William's bilingual code). Liebermann (Ueber die Leis Willelme, in Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen, etc., 1901, cvi. 113-38) shows that the original text was in French, and that it was written in Mercia before 1150, perhaps between 1100 and 1120.

1408. Pseudo-Cnuts Constitutiones de foresta, ed. Schmid, 318-21; Thorpe, i. 426-30; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 620-6; Liebermann, Ueber Pseudo-Cnuts Constitutiones de Foresta (No. 682), 49-55.

A forgery, compiled about 1184 by a layman, perhaps a forest official of the baronial party who desired that the king should select forest judges from the feudal aristocracy. Gives an account of the administration and judicature of the forests in Henry II.'s time.

1409. Quadripartitus, ein englisches Rechtsbuch von 1114, nachgewiesen und, soweit bisher ungedruckt, herausgegeben von F. Liebermann. Halle, 1892.—Text in Liebermann's Gesetze, i. 529-46.

Compiled circa 1114, perhaps at Winchester, by a cleric of French birth, who wished to make known the 'laga Edwardi' as amended by William I. and Henry I. The prologue gives some account of English institutions, A.D. 1018-1110. Bk. i. contains a glossed translation of most of the Anglo-Saxon laws, those of Cnut being given first; this is the 'vetus versio,' which is printed in the editions of Liebermann, Schmid, and Thorpe (Nos. 1391-3). Some dooms of Athelstan, Edmund, and Ethelred are known only in the form of this Latin version. Bk. ii. is a collection of state papers, comprising the coronation charter of Henry I., his enactment concerning the hundred and shire courts, and various documents regarding the investiture struggle (mainly in defence of Gerard of York). Bk. iii., on legal procedure, and bk. iv., on theft, are not extant, and perhaps were never written as planned by the author.

§ 37. CHARTERS AND OTHER DIPLOMATA.

The diplomata include public and private instruments which often pass under the general name of charters. They were introduced into Anglo-Saxon England by the clergy soon after the coming of St. Augustine, and comprise land-books, or donations of land (chiefly to churches), grants of privileges or immunities, wills, manumissions, acquittances, marriage contracts, minutes of transactions (mainly regarding lands) which took place in witenagemots, synods, and shire courts. They are of great value for the study of the early history of institutions; they throw light upon the law of real property, classes of society, the nature of tenures and services, the functions of the witan and local public courts, the powers of royalty, and the relations of the crown to the church and to the nobles; they often elucidate the royal dooms and supplement the annals. Their importance for the study of English history is well illustrated by the deductions drawn from them by Maitland in his Domesday Book and Beyond (No. 1493).

The chief repositories of these documents are the libraries of the British Museum, the universities, and the various cathedrals. Some of them are extant in their original form; many are later copies which have been preserved in monastic chartularies or episcopal registers (§§ 34, 57); others survive in the form of enrolments and exemplifications in the 'cartæ antiquæ' and confirmation rolls of the Public Record Office (No. 1413). About a quarter of them are written in Anglo-Saxon; the rest are either partly or wholly in Latin. Most of the wills, the earliest of which date from the first half of the ninth century, are in Anglo-Saxon. Kemble, Brunner, Aronius, and Giry (No. 233) contend that the charters and other legal documents were not drawn up by official chancery scribes before the time of Edward the Confessor; but W. H. Stevenson, in the English Historical Review, 1896, xi. 731-44, believes that the Anglo-Saxon kings had an organised body of royal clerks corresponding to the chancery of the continent. Cf. Stevenson (p. 42 above, and No. 1914a); and see Hall's Studies (No. 233a), 163-207.

The systematic study of the Anglo-Saxon diplomata was begun by George Hickes in his Dissertatio Epistolaris, 1703 (No. 234), and he deserves much credit for what he accomplished. The next great investigator in this field was Kemble, whose Codex, with all its defects, still remains the most comprehensive Birch's Cartularium is more nearly complete (to collection. A.D. 975), and in some respects it is superior to Kemble's Codex: but it is far from being an ideal or even a satisfactory edition. The eight volumes of facsimiles issued by the British Museum and the Ordnance Survey (Nos. 257-8) are of considerable value. The useful collections of Earle and Thorpe are largely selections from Kemble. The third volume of Haddan and Stubbs's Councils (No. 1424) contains many charters taken from Kemble's Codex and Dugdale's Monasticon, with valuable notes. Some interesting donations of lands to Welsh monasteries, from the sixth century onward, are printed in chapter vii. of Seebohm's Tribal System in Wales (No. 1116); and many early charters relating to the bishopric of Llandaff will be found in Liber Landavensis (No. 2674).

The best general account of the charters is furnished by Kemble (No. 1419). See also Aronius, Brunner, and Earle (Nos. 1410, 1412, 1416); F. W. Maitland, Domesday Book (No. 1493), 2nd essay; Palgrave, English Commonwealth (No. 1497), ii. 204–26. For early Scottish charters, see No. 2096.

1410. Aronius, Julius. Diplomatische Studien über die älteren angelsächsischen Urkunden [to A.D. 839]. Königsberg, [1883]. pp. 90.

Criticises Kemble's Codex and analyses the structure of the charters. Agrees with Kemble and Brunner in believing that there was no royal chancery in England before the time of Edward the Confessor. Valuable.

1411. *BIRCH, W. DE GRAY. Cartularium Saxonicum: a collection of charters relating to Anglo-Saxon history [A.D. 430-975]. 3 vols. London, 1885 [1883]-93.—Index Saxonicus: an index to the names of persons in Cartularium Saxonicum, 1899.

Contains 1354 documents, many of which are not in Kemble's Codex. Includes pieces not of a strictly diplomatic character, such as professions of obedience made by newly-elected bishops, papal correspondence, etc. The two documents anterior to A.D. 604 are a charter and a letter of St. Patrick. Birch adheres more closely to the text of the MSS, than Kemble does, but his critical apparatus of notes, etc., is very meagre: he does not profess to be 'the critical expositor' of the contents of the charters. See also his paper, The Anglo-Saxon Charters of Worcester Cathedral (a calendar, etc., of the charters), British Archæol. Assoc., Journal, 1882, xxxviii. 24-54.

1412. BRUNNER, HEINRICH. Zur Rechtsgeschichte der römischen und germanischen Urkunde. Vol. i. Berlin, 1880.

Das angelsächsische Landbuch, 149-208. Examines the structure of the charters, etc. Valuable.

1413. Calendar of royal charters which occur in letters of inspeximus, exemplification, or confirmation, and in cartularies, in the public record office. Pt. i., from Ethelbert of Kent to William II. Deputy Keeper's Reports, xxix. 7-48. London, 1868.

Contains an abstract of their contents.

1414. Cartularium Saxonicum Malmesburiense. [By Thomas Phillipps. Middle Hill Press, 1831.] pp. 25.

Twenty-nine Latin charters; most of them are earlier than 1066, and are printed in Kemble's Codex.

1415. DAVIDSON, J. B. On some Anglo-Saxon charters at Exeter. British Archæol. Assoc., Journal, xxxix. 259–303. London, 1883.

Edits fifteen documents, A.D. 938-1069, five of them never before printed; only four of the fifteen are in Kemble's Codex. See also his paper, On the Charters of King Ine, Somersetsh. Archæol. and Nat. Hist. Soc., Proceedings, 1885 [1884], xxx. pt. ii. 1-31.

√1416. EARLE, JOHN. A hand-book to the land-charters and other Saxonic documents. Oxford, 1888.

A selection of about 250 well-edited documents, some of which are not printed by Kemble or Birch. An elaborate introduction deals with the structure and language of the charters, and with the origin of the manor; much attention is devoted to gesiths and lænland. Earle believes that at the time of the Conquest the military chiefs or captains were placed over the conquered villages, thus becoming manorial lords with police and military functions; he identifies them with the gesiths. See W. H. Stevenson's criticism in English Historical Review, 1889, iv. 353-9.

1417. Heming. Hemingi Chartularium ecclesiæ Wigorniensis, ed. Thomas Hearne. 2 vols. Oxford, 1723.

Heming was sub-prior of Worcester while Wulfstan (d. 1095), at whose command he compiled this precious chartulary, was bishop. Most of the charters are royal grants of the 9th and 10th centuries; they are reprinted in Kemble's Codex.

1418. HOARE, R. C. Registrum Wiltunense, Saxonicum et Latinum, A.D. 892-1045. London, 1827.

A chartulary of Wilton abbey, in the British Museum. Contains thirtyfour documents, all printed in Kemble's Codex.

1419. * Kemble, J. M. Codex diplomaticus ævi Saxonici. English Hist. Soc. 6 vols. London, 1839-48.

1369 documents, from A.D. 604 to about 1061. Some of them are inaccurately printed, either because they were not collated with the originals or with the oldest copies, or because an attempt was made to construct a composite text based upon various MSS. The elaborate introduction in vol. i. deals with the origin of charters, their structure, and their contents; see also the prefaces in vols. iii. and vi.

1420. Napier, A. S., and Stevenson, W. H. The Crawford collection of early charters and documents now in the Bodleian library. Oxford, 1895. 480

Nineteen documents, A.D. 739-1150, eight of them never before published; with elaborate notes. A model edition.

1421. STEVENSON, W. H., and DUIGNAN, W. H. Anglo-Saxon charters relating to Shropshire [A.D. 664-1004]. Shropshire Archæol, and Nat. Hist. Soc., Trans., 4th series, i. 1-22. Shrewsbury, etc., 1911.

Translations of six or seven charters, etc., already printed by Kemble or others.

1422. THORPE, BENJAMIN. Diplomatarium Anglicum ævi Saxonici: a collection of English charters, from A.D. 605 to William the Conqueror, with a translation of the Anglo-Saxon. London, 1865.

About 325 documents, in large part a selection from Kemble's Codex, arranged under four heads: (1) miscellaneous charters, excluding simple grants of land; (2) wills; (3) gilds; (4) manumissions and acquittances. About twenty pieces in the Diplomatarium (including three of the four collections of gild statutes) were not printed by Kemble,

§ 38. ECCLESIASTICAL SOURCES.

- a, Canons, Penitentials, etc., Nos. 1423-9a.
- b. Homilies, Nos. 1430-33.
- c. Monastic Rules, Nos. 1434-40.
- d. Vitæ et Epistolæ, Nos. 1441-71.

The materials relating to church history may be classified as follows :---

I. The chronicles, laws, and charters included in §§ 34, 36, 37.

Among the chronicles Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica is the most important; Elmham and the monastic histories of Abingdon, Ely, Hyde, and Ramsey are also useful. See C. W. Schoell, De Ecclesiasticæ Britonum Scotorumque Historiæ Fontibus, Berlin, 1851, pp. 80; he treats of Gildas, Bede, Nennius, Annales Cambriæ, Tigernach, etc., especially as sources for the history of the Celtic church. Among the dooms of the Anglo-Saxon kings (§ 36) are many ecclesiastical laws, and separate collections of these were made by the witan under Edmund, Edgar, Ethelred, and Cnut. They are printed in the editions of the Anglo-Saxon laws mentioned in § 36. Most of the charters (§ 37) are grants of lands to churches.

- 2. Various lists of bishops which accompany the royal genealogies. See No. 1368.
- 3. The four categories of sources considered below, in this section. Of these the most valuable for historical purposes are the canons and the 'vitæ et epistolæ.'

By far the most important collection of materials to A.D. 870 is that of Haddan and Stubbs (No. 1424). For other general collections of records, see § 16c. The modern literature relating to the Anglo-Saxon church will be found in § 47.

a. CANONS, PENITENTIALS, ETC.

The canons and other records of the transactions of church councils to A.D. 870 are set forth by Haddan and Stubbs (No. 1424), and those from 870 to 1066 by Johnson, Wilkins, and Thorpe (Nos. 621, 631, 1427). The penitential books are collections of Latin penitential canons issued under the authority of some eminent prelate for the purpose of establishing the uniform administration of discipline in the church; they prescribe specific penances for certain sins, such as drunkenness, perjury, avarice, homicide, fornication, etc. The earliest penitentials, those of Ireland and Wales, belong to the fifth and sixth centuries. and are printed by Haddan and Stubbs and Wasserschleben, who also edit the penitential books of Theodore of Tarsus, Bede. and Egbert, archbishop of York (d. 766). See Haddan and Stubbs, i. 117-20, iii. 173-213, 326-34, 413-31. Theodore's book was compiled under his direction by one of his disciples. There is a good short account of penitentials in Smith and Cheetham's Dictionary of Christian Antiquities (No. 755), іі. т608-т6.

The Regula Canonicorum of Chrodegang, bishop of Metz, A.D. 742-66, is printed in Luc d'Achery's Spicilegium, 1723, i. 565-83, and in Migne's Patrologia, 1850, lxxxix. 1057-1120; it is also edited by Wilhelm Schmitz, Hanover, 1891. It was based on the Benedictine rule, and was adopted by some churches in England.

1423. [Greenwell, William.] The pontifical of Egbert, archbishop of York, A.D. 732-766. Surtees Soc. Durham, etc., 1853.

A pontifical is a service-book containing the offices performed by a bishop, such as those for the consecration of bishops and churches, the coronation of kings, etc. The coronation services are on pp. roo-ro5 of Greenwell's edition; for lists of MS. pontificals, see ibid., pp. vii.-xi., and No. 2215.

1424. *HADDAN, A. W., and STUBBS, WILLIAM. Councils and ecclesiastical documents relating to Great Britain and Ireland. 3 vols. Oxford, 1869-78.

A new edition of a part of Wilkins's Concilia (No. 631), and one of the most important collections of materials on early English history. Vol. i. deals with the British church, A.D. 200-681, and the church of Wales, A.D. 68r-1295; vol. ii., with Cumbria and Scotland to 1188, and Ireland to 665; vol. iii., with Anglo-Saxon England to 870. The work contains canons, penitentials, records of synods, dooms of Anglo-Saxon kings, extracts from chronicles, letters of popes and prelates, charters, and other documents of general interest for the study of ecclesiastical history, including the relations of church and state.

1425. Kunstmann, Friedrich. Die lateinischen Pönitentialbücher der Angelsachsen. Mainz, 1844.

Edits the penitentials of Theodore and Bede (spurious texts), with some supplementary matter.

1426. Mone, F. J. Quellen und Forschungen der teutschen Literatur. Aix-la-Chapelle, 1830.

Zur Kritik der angelsächsischen Gesetze, pp. 482-548. Treats mainly of penitentials.

1427. [THORPE, BENJAMIN.] Ancient laws and institutes of England; also monumenta ecclesiastica. Record Com. 2 vols. [London], 1840. See No. 1393.

Penitentials of Theodore and Egbert, ii. 1-62, 170-239.

Canons enacted under King Edgar, anons enacted under King Edgar, ii. 244–89. Institutes of polity, ii. 304-41.

Canons and epistles of Ælfric, A.D. 998-1016, ii. 342-93.
Ecclesiastical institutes, ii. 394-443.

This collection is valuable, but some of the records are not well edited. Thorpe does not print the genuine texts of the penitentials, and the document called Ecclesiastical Institutes is the translation of a work written by Bishop Theodulf of Orleans, who flourished about A.D. 797. See Walther von Hörmann, Ueber die Entstehungsverhältnisse des sogen. Poenitentiale Pseudo-Theodori, in Mélanges Fitting (Montpellier, 1908), ii. 1-21.

1428. Wasserschleben, F. W. H. Die Bussordnungen der abendländischen Kirche. Halle, 1851.

Old British, Irish, and Anglo-Saxon penitentials, pp. 101-352. A valuable collection, well edited. See also H. J. Schmitz, Die Bussbücher und die Bussdisciplin der Kirche, 2 vols., Mainz, etc., 1883-98 (die Bussbücher der Angelsachsen, i. 490-587, ii. 645-701).

1429. — Die irische Kanonensammlung, ed. Hermann Wasserschleben. Giessen, 1874; 2nd edition, Leipsic, 1885.

This Latin collection of canons was probably compiled in Ireland early in the 8th century. It contains usages of the Irish church intermingled with those of the Roman church. See Henry Bradshaw, The Early Collection of Canons known as the Hibernensis, Cambridge, 1893; Paul Fournier, De l'Influence de la Collection Irlandaise sur la Formation des Collections Canoniques, in Nouvelle Revue Historique de Droit Français et Etranger, 1899, xxiii. 27-78.

1429a. WILSON, H. A. The benedictional of archbishop Robert [of Rouen]. Henry Bradshaw Soc. London, 1903.

A pontifical, which was written late in the 10th century at Winchester, and passed into Normandy, probably before the middle of the 11th century.

b. HOMILIES.

These interesting monuments of English literature exhibit the doctrines of the Anglo-Saxon church; and some of them, notably the Sermo Lupi ad Anglos (No. 1433), throw light upon the social life of England in this period. Besides the Latin sermons of Bede there are three series written in Anglo-Saxon, covering a period of about one hundred and fifty years, from the latter part of the ninth century to the early part of the eleventh: the Blickling homilies, those of Ælfric, and those of Wulfstan. See R. P. Wülker, Grundriss zur Geschichte der Angelsächsischen Litteratur (Leipsic, 1885), chs. xii.-xiii.; John Earle, Anglo-Saxon Literature (London, 1884), ch. x.

1430. ÆLFRIC. The homilies of the Anglo-Saxon church: homilies of Ælfric, in the original Anglo-Saxon, with an English version, ed. Benjamin Thorpe. Ælfric Soc. 2 vols. London, 1844 [1843]—46.—Ælfric's Lives of saints, being a set of sermons on saints' days [with a modern English version], ed. W. W. Skeat. Early English Text Soc. 2 vols. in 4 pts. London, 1881–1900.—Angelsächsische Homilien und Heiligenleben, ed. Bruno Assmann, in C. W. M. Grein's Bibliothek der Angelsächsischen Prosa, vol. iii. Cassel, 1889.

The two main collections, by Thorpe and Skeat, contain 122 homilies; Thorpe's is more valuable than Skeat's. Assmann prints nine additional homilies of Ælfric, and ten others of unknown authorship. Ælfric derived his sermons in large part from the Latin works of Gregory the Great and other church fathers; most of them were written A.D. 990-998, but some of them are of later date. Ælfric is now usually identified with the person who became abbot of Ensham in 1005 and who died about 1020-25. He was the greatest Anglo-Saxon prose-writer of his age, and one of the champions of the monastic revival of the roth century. For his other writings, see Nos. 1427, 1435, 1437, 1462, 1480-81; and for modern accounts of his life and works, Nos. 1621-2.

- 1431. BEDE. Venerabilis Bedæ Opera, ed. J. A. Giles. Vol. v.: Homiliæ. London, 1843.
- 1432. The Blickling homilies of the tenth century. Edited, with a modern English translation, by Richard Morris. Early English Text Soc. London, [1874]—80.

'A motley collection of sermons of various age and quality.' The date of the MS., which is in the library of Blickling hall, Norfolk, is 97r; but many of the homilies seem to belong to the 9th century.

1433. Wulfstan: Sammlung der ihm zugeschriebenen Homilien, ed. Arthur [S.] Napier. Pt. i. Berlin, 1883.

See also Arthur Napier, Ueber die Werke des Erzbischofs Wulfstan, Weimar, 1882, pp. 71; J. P. Kinard, A Study of Wulfstan's Homilies, Baltimore, 1897, pp. 60; Felix Liebermann, Wulfstan und Cnut, in Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen, etc., 1899, ciii. 47-54. Liebermann contends that Wulfstan's homilies were used in the Leges Cnuti. Wulfstan was archbishop of York, A.D. 1003-23. His best-known homily is the Sermo Lupi ad Anglos, an address to the English nation, written about 1014, giving a vivid picture of the wretchedness and corruption due to the ravages of the Danes. This piece is printed in Napier's Sammlung, 156-67, and in Henry Sweet's Anglo-Saxon Reader, 8th edition, 1908, pp. 88-97; there is a Latin translation in Hickes's Dissertatio (No. 234), 99-106, and in Langebek's Scriptores (No. 585), ii. 463-71. For the date, see E. A. Freeman, Norman Conquest, vol. i. app. RR.

c. MONASTIC RULES.

The great monastic revival which started in France early in the tenth century spread in the reign of Edgar to England, where the chief leaders of the reform movement were Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester, and Oswald, bishop of Worcester. As the main object of the reform was to enforce the strict observance of St. Benedict's rule, it was necessary to publish regulations that should secure uniformity of practice in monastic life. The MSS. which have come down to us contain:—

- r. An English translation of St. Benedict's rule, probably made by Ethelwold about 970 (Nos. 1436, 1439).
- 2. The Regularis Concordia, or De Consuetudine Monachorum (No. 1438): a Latin compilation of regulations, based upon the precepts of St. Benedict's rule and upon monastic customs of England and the continent. It also contains an account of the English monastic revival. This document is often ascribed to Dunstan, but it was mainly the work of Ethelwold, about A.D. 966-969.
- 3. A Latin abridgment or digest of the Regularis Concordia; this is in the form of an epistle written by Ælfric, abbot of Ensham, for his monastery, about 1005 (No. 1437).

4. Fragments of the Regularis Concordia translated into English; one of these has been ascribed to Ælfric (No. 1435).

For other records relating to monasticism in the Anglo-Saxon period, see the collections in §§ 16c, 38a, especially Dugdale's Monasticon, Haddan and Stubbs's Councils, and Thorpe's Ancient Laws; there is also some material in William of Malmesbury's De Gestis Pontificum (No. 1444). For the records and early history of particular religious houses, see §§ 34, 37, 57; for the modern literature, §§ 23d, 47c.

1434. BATESON, MARY. Rules for monks and secular canons after the revival under king Edgar. English Hist. Review, ix. 690-708. London, 1894.

An account of the MS, material.

1436. Edgar's establishment of monasteries, ed. Oswald Cockayne, Leechdoms, iii. 406–18, 432–45. Rolls Series. London, 1866.

An Anglo-Saxon fragment of a postscript to Ethelwold's translation of St. Benedict's rule (No. 1439), containing a contemporary statement of the reform measures.

1437. Excerpta ex institutionibus monasticis Æthelwoldi [No. 1438], compilata ad usum fratrum Egneshamnensium per Ælfricum abbatem [circa 1005], ed. Mary Bateson, in G. W. Kitchin's Compotus Rolls of the Obedientiaries of St. Swithun's Priory, Winchester, 171-98. Hampshire Record Soc. London, etc., 1892.

See English Historical Review, 1894, ix. 702-7; C. L. White, Ælfric (No. 1622), ch. xii.

1438. Regularis concordia, ed. Dugdale, Monasticon, vol. i. pp. xxvii.-xlv.; Migne, Patrologia, cxxxvii. 475-502; W. S. Logeman, Anglia, 1891-93, xiii. 365-454, xv. 20-40.

This is Ethelwold's Latin compilation of monastic regulations; it is also called De Consuetudine Monachorum. Logeman's edition has an interlinear Anglo-Saxon translation. See No. 793.

1439. The rule of St. Benet, Latin and Anglo-Saxon interlinear version, ed. Henri Logeman. Early English Text Soc. London, 1888. —Angelsächsische Prosabearbeitungen der Benedictinerregel, ed. ### d. VITÆ ET EPISTOLÆ.

The most extensive collections of 'acta sanctorum' are those of Mabillon and the Bollandists (Nos. 601, 603), which include most of the lives of saints mentioned below (Nos. 1445-71) and many others. The biographies in these collections throw light upon the social life of Britain and upon the history of the church, and add some information regarding public events. 'For the history of England in the latter half of the tenth century we have, except the very meagre notices of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicles, no contemporary materials, unless we admit the lives of the saints': Stubbs, Memorials of Dunstan, p. ix. Alcuin's Carmen, Bede's Cuthbert, Adamnan's Columba, the anonymous Vita Oswaldi, Eddi's Wilfrid, and the letters of Alcuin, Boniface, and Gregory the Great are especially interesting. Some of the most valuable 'epistolæ' will be found in Haddan and Stubbs's Councils (No. 1424), vol. iii.

For further information regarding the lives of particular saints, see Potthast's Bibliotheca and Hardy's Catalogue of Materials (Nos. 25, 45). Some of the articles in Smith and Wace's Dictionary of Christian Biography (No. 304) are also useful. The modern biographies of the saints and prelates of this period are in § 47d.

For other editions of the works mentioned in Nos. 1445-71, see Manitius, Geschichte (No. 23a); Potthast, Bibliotheca (No. 25).

General.

1441. Historians of the church of York and its archbishops, ed. James Raine. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1879-94.

This valuable collection contains Alcuin's Carmen (below, p. 278); several lives of bishops Oswald and Wilfrid (Nos. 1465, 1471); lives of Bishop John of Beverley, who died in 721; Chronica Pontificum Ecclesiæ Eboracensis, A.D. 601-1140, written in the first half of the 12th century; vol. iii., documents relating to the church of York, only three of them before A.D. 1066. See also No. 2222.

1442. Miscellanea biographica [ed. James Raine]. Surtees Soc. London, etc., [1838].

Contains a life of Oswin, king of Deira (d. 651), two lives of Cuthbert (below, p. 282), and a life of Eata, bishop of Hexham (d. 686). These biographies are of little historical value.

1442a. Plummer, Charles. Vitæ sanctorum Hiberniæ partim hactenus ineditæ. 2 vols. Oxford, 1910.

Contains thirty-two lives, chiefly from Dublin and Oxford MSS.

1443. Vita quorundam [Vitae quorundam] Anglo-Saxonum: original lives of Anglo-Saxons and others who lived before the conquest, ed. J. A. Giles. Caxton Soc. London, 1854.

1444. Willelmi Malmesbiriensis De gestis pontificum Anglorum libri quinque, ed. N. E. S. A. Hamilton. Rolls Series. London, 1870.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, clxxix. 1441-1680. Paris, 1855.—An imperfect text of bks. i.—iv. is printed in Savile's Scriptores (No. 595), 111-68. London, 1596.—Extracts, ed. Waitz, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), x. 454-7, notes; ed. Pauli, ibid., xiii. 136-9. Hanover, 1852-81.

Completed A.D. 1125; contains a valuable account of the bishops and abbots of England, A.D. 601 to the writer's own time. Bk. v. (which is also printed in Gale's Scriptores XV., 337–81, and in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, ii. 1–49) is devoted to the life of Aldhelm.

Alcuin (d. 804).

For historical purposes the most valuable of Alcuin's works are :—

- 1. Epistolæ: Frobenius, i. 4–302; better editions in Monumenta Alcuiniana, 132–897, and Epistolæ Karolini Ævi (ed. Ernst Dümmler, in Pertz's Monumenta Germ. Hist., Epistolæ, vol. vi., Berlin, 1895), ii. 1–493. Those which relate to England (the affairs of Northumbria, devastations of the Danes, etc.) are indicated in Hardy's Catalogue of Materials, i. 505, and in Smith and Wace's Dictionary of Christian Biography, i. 75. Alcuin's letters are of great value 'as illustrating the intellectual, social, moral, and religious condition of Europe at the period at which they were written.'
- 2. De Pontificibus et Sanctis Ecclesiæ Eboracensis Carmen: Frobenius, ii. 24x-58; Monumenta Alcuiniana, 80-131; Raine, Historians of the Church of York (No. 1441), i. 349-98; latest edition by Ernst Dümmler, in Pertz's Monumenta Germ. Hist., Poetæ Latini (Berlin, 1881), i. 169-206. The earlier portion of the poem is based on Bede; but the account of the archbishops

Wilfrid II., Egbert, and Ethelbert throws light upon the history of the church of York, A.D. 718-780, and contains interesting notices of the schools and library of York in the eighth century.

See Molinier, Sources (No. 30a), i. no. 634. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1624-30.

- 1445. Alcuini Opera, cura Frobenii [Frobenius Forster]. 2 vols. in 4. [Ratisbon], 1777.—Reprinted in Migne's Patrologia, vols. c.-ci. Paris, 1851.
- 1446. * Monumenta Alcuiniana, ed. Wilhelm Wattenbach and Ernst Dümmler, in Philipp Jaffé's Bibliotheca Rerum Germanicarum, vol. vi. Berlin, 1873.

Vita Alcuini auctore anonymo, De pontificibus Ebor. carmen, 80-1-34. Alcuini Vita S. Willibrordi, 35-79. Epistolæ, 132-897.

The Vita Alcuini was compiled A.D. 823-829; it is also printed by Frobenius, vol. i. pp. lix.-lxix., and in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xv, 182-97. It does not contain much information concerning England.

Aldhelm (d. 709).

Aldhelm, bishop of Sherborne, was one of the most learned men of his time, but his letters and other works are of little historical value. His biography was written by Faricius, abbot of Abingdon (d. 1117), and also by William of Malmesbury in his De Gestis Pontificum (No. 1444). See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 389–96. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1631–2a.

1447. Sancti Aldhelmi Opera, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). Oxford, 1844.—Reprinted in Migne's Patrologia, vol. lxxxix. Paris, 1850.

Contains about fourteen letters, Faricius's Vita Aldhelmi, etc.

Bede (d. 735).

Bede wrote theological, scientific, and historical works. The following are of particular interest to students of English history:

- I. Historia Ecclesiastica (No. 1355).
- 2. The prose biography of Cuthbert, written about 720: Giles, iv. 202-357; Stevenson, 45-137. See No. 1457.
- 3. Vita Abbatum Benedicti, Ceolfridi, Eosterwini, Sigfridi, atque Hwætberhti, written after 716: Giles, iv. 358-401;

Stevenson, 139-62; Plummer, i. 365-87. Contains a valuable account of the history of the monasteries of Wearmouth and Jarrow to Bede's own time. Cf. the translation of an eighth-century life of Ceolfrid, by D. S. Boutflower, Sunderland, 1912.

4. Epistolæ: Giles, i. 106–216; Migne, Patrologia, xciv. 655–710. The most important of these letters is the Epistola ad Egbertum, written in 734: Stevenson, 207–26; Plummer, i. 405–23; Haddan and Stubbs, Councils (No. 1424), iii. 314–25. It is a long lament over the degenerated condition of the church,—the ignorance and corruption of the clergy, the relaxation of monastic discipline, etc.

There is no good medieval life of Bede: see Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 450-56; and No. 1443.

1448. Complete works of Bede, with a translation, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 12 vols. London, 1843-44.
—See also No. 582.

Vol. i. Letters, etc.

Vols. ii.-iii. Historia ecclesiastica.

Vol. iv. Historical tracts.

Vol. v. Homilies.

Vol. vi. Scientific tracts.

Vols. vii.—xii. Commentaries on Scriptures.

1449. Venerabilis Bedæ Opera, in Migne's Patrologia, vols. xc.-xcv. Paris, 1850-51.

1450. *Venerabilis Bædæ [Opera historica], ed. Charles Plummer. 2 vols. Oxford, 1896.

Vol. i. contains Historia Ecclesiastica, Vita Abbatum, Epistola ad Egbertum; vol. ii., notes. Well edited.

1451. Venerabilis Bedæ Opera historica minora, ed. Joseph Stevenson. English Hist. Soc. London, 1841.

Contains Bede's metrical and prose lives of Cuthbert, his Vita Abbatum, Chronicon, and Epistola ad Egbertum.

The best editions of Bede's Chronica Majora ad annum 725 and Chronica Minora ad annum 703, are by Theodor Mommsen, in Monumenta Germ. Hist., Auctores Antiq. (No. 594), 1895, xiii. 223-354.

Boniface (d. 755).

Boniface, or Winfrid, archbishop of Mainz, the apostle of Germany, was one of the most active of the missionaries who went from England to the continent. His letters, some of which are addressed to English kings and prelates, throw much light on the manners and opinions of the eighth century. The best edition is S. Bonifatii et Lulli Epistolæ, ed. Ernst Dümmler, in Pertz's Monumenta Germ. Hist., Epistolæ (Berlin, 1892), iii. 215-433; selections, translated and annotated by Michael Tangl, Die Briefe des Heiligen Bonifatius, Leipsic, [1912]. Lull was Boniface's successor in the see of Mainz. See No. 1642.

The most valuable life of Boniface was written by Willibald (d. 786), an Englishman, who aided him in his missionary work. The latest edition is by Wilhelm Levison: Vitæ Sancti Bonifatii Archiepiscopi Moguntini, Hanover, 1905. See Molinier, Sources (No. 30a), i. no. 633. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1639-48.

- 1452. Monumenta Moguntina, in Philipp Jaffé's Bibliotheca Rerum Germanicarum, vol. iii. Berlin, 1866.
- S. Bonifatii et Lulli Epistolæ, 8-315. | Willibaldi Vita S. Bonifatii, 429-71.
- 1453. Sancti Bonifacii Opera omnia, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 2 vols. London, 1844.

Vol. i. Epistolæ. Vol. ii. Homilies, Willibald's Vita, etc.
The works of Boniface are also printed in Migne's Patrologia, lxxxix.

Columba (d. 597).

The life of St. Columba, by Adamnan, abbot of Iona (d. 704), is 'one of the most important pieces of hagiology in existence.' Reeves's edition contains much material illustrating early Irish church history and the introduction of Christianity into Scotland. Krusch's is the only critical edition. There is a translation of a tenth-century Irish life of Columba in W. F. Skene's Celtic Scotland (No. 1269), vol. ii. app.

1454. * Vita S. Columbæ auctore Adamnano, ed. William Reeves. Irish Archæol. and Celtic Soc. [Also issued by the Bannatyne Club.] Dublin, 1857.—The same, somewhat abridged and rearranged by W. F. Skene, with a translation, in Historians of Scotland, vol. vi. Edinburgh, 1874.—Adamnani Vita S. Columbæ. Edited from Reeves's text by J. T. Fowler. Oxford, 1894.—Vitæ Columbani abbatis discipulorumque eius libri duo auctore Jona, ed. Bruno Krusch, Passiones Vitaeque Sanctorum Ævi Merovingici, in Pertz's Monumenta Germ. Hist., Scriptores Rerum Merovingicarum, iv. 1–108. Hanover, etc., 1902; also issued in an octavo edition, 1905. [The best edition.]—Translated by J. T. Fowler, Prophecies, miracles, and visions of St. Columba, London, 1895; by D. C. Munro, The life of St. Columban by the monk Jonas, Philadelphia, 1895, pp. 36; and by Wentworth Huyshe, The life of St. Columba by St. Adamnan, London, [1906].

For the 'law of Adamnan,' see No. 1394a.

1454a. LAWLOR, H. J. The MSS. of the Vita S. Columbani [by Jonas]. Royal Irish Academy, Trans., xxxii., section C, 1-132. Dublin, etc., 1903.

A description of the MSS., accompanied by eighteen illustrative plates; useful as a 'preliminary study' for a critical edition of the Vita, such as Krusch had just brought out (No. 1454).

Cuthbert (d. 687).

Bede's prose Vita S. Cuthberti (No. 1457) is one of the best pieces of medieval biography which we possess. It is based in part on an older anonymous life of Cuthbert (No. 1456). The Historia Translationum S. Cuthberti (No. 1455) deals with the translations of his body and with the history of the church of Durham.

The following two works are valuable for the ecclesiastical history of Durham, but contain little information concerning Cuthbert's life:—

I. Historia de S. Cuthberto, ed. J. H. Hinde, Symeonis Dunelmensis Opera (Surtees Soc., 1868), i. 138–52; ed. Thomas Arnold, Symeonis Monachi Opera (Rolls Series, 1882), i. 196–214. Compiled seemingly in the first quarter of the twelfth century.

2. Reginaldi Monachi Dunelmensis Libellus de Admirandis Beati Cuthberti Virtutibus, ed. James Raine, Surtees Soc., 1835. Written in the second half of the twelfth century by Reginald of Coldingham. It contains some interesting notices of manners and public affairs, especially in the time of King Stephen and Henry II.

Three other lives of Cuthbert, of little historical value, were published by the Surtees Society: two in Miscellanea Biographica, ed. James Raine, 1838 (No. 1442); and The Life of St. Cuthbert in English Verse, circa 1450, ed. J. T. Fowler, 1891. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1649-51 1455. Historia translationum S. Cuthberti, ed. J. H. Hinde, Symeonis Dunelmensis Opera, i. 158–201. Surtees Soc. Durham, 1868.—Stevenson's text in Bede's Opera (No. 1451), 285–317, is imperfect.

Probably written early in the 12th century, Contains some interesting facts concerning the history of the church of Durham, A.D. 875-1080.

Used by Bede (No. 1457).

1457. *Vita S. Cuthberti auctore Beda, ed. Giles (No. 1448), iv. 202-357; Stevenson (No. 1451), 45-137.

The best biography of Cuthbert; it embodies Bede's metrical life of this saint, ed. Stevenson (No. 1451), 1-43.

Dunstan (d. 988).

No letters or other literary remains of the great archbishop survive. The most valuable biography was written by a contemporary priest who calls himself B. Stubbs's collection of materials (No. 1458) contains:—

- 1. Vita S. Dunstani auctore B. Written circa 1000 by a Saxon priest, perhaps at Canterbury.
- 2. Epistola Adelardi ad Elfegum archiepiscopum de Vita S. Dunstani. Written 1006-11 by a monk of Blandinium.
- 3. Vita S. Dunstani auctore Osberno. Written circa 1090; relates miracles of Dunstan, with many mistakes and fabrications. The author was precentor of Christ church, Canterbury.
  - 4. Vita S. Dunstani auctore Eadmero. Written 1109-22.
- 5. Vita S. Dunstani auctore Willelmo Malmesberiensi. Written circa 1126; criticises Osbern's Vita.
- 6. Vita S. Dunstani. Compiled early in the fifteenth century by John Capgrave; of little value.
  - 7. Epistolæ ad Dunstanum, etc.
  - 8. Fragmenta Ritualia de Dunstano.

Stubbs in his valuable introduction gives a full account of the various biographers and an excellent sketch of Dunstan's career. This collection is supplemented by the Dunstan Saga, edited by G. Vigfússon, with a translation by G. W. Dasent, in Icelandic Sagas (Rolls Series, 1887-94), ii. 385-408, iv. 397-420; it was written early in the fourteenth century by Arne Lawrence's son, a monk of Thingore.

1458. *Memorials of St. Dunstan, ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. London, 1874.

Edith (d. 984).

1459. Chronicon Vilodunense sive De vita et miraculis S. Edithæ, regis Edgari filiæ, carmen vetus Anglicum, cura W. H. Black, sumptibus R. C. Hoare. London, 1830.—S. Editha sive Chronicon Vilodunense, ed. Carl Horstmann. Heilbronn, 1883.

Written circa 1420. Contains an account of the history of Wilton abbey, where Edith was educated, notices of English kings down to Edgar, and the miracles of St. Edith. Horstmann, pp. 113-16, also prints Vita S. Edithæ, dedicated to Archbishop Lanfranc by Goscelin, a monk of Glastonbury. These two biographies are of little historical value.

Edmund (d. 870).

The oldest life of Edmund, the martyred king of East Anglia, was written in England by Abbo of Fleury about 985. For this and several other biographies of Edmund, see Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, i. 526–38; most of them are printed in Arnold's Memorials (No. 1460). J. R. Thompson's Records of St. Edmund (Bury St. Edmunds, 1890) contains extracts from various sources relating to the king and to Bury abbey; these extracts are taken mainly from Battely's work (No. 1090). See also Corolla S. Eadmundi: the Garland of St. Edmund, King and Martyr, ed. Lord Francis Hervey, London, 1907 (extracts from chroniclers, lives of Edmund, and other sources, with translations).

1460. Memorials of St. Edmund's abbey, ed. Thomas Arnold. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1890-96.

Contains the work of Abbo of Fleury, i. 3-25; miracles of St. Edmund, by Herman the Archdeacon, i. 26-92; and lives of Edmund by Galfridus de Fontibus, Abbot Samson, and Denis Piramus, i. 93-208, ii. 135-250. There is also a good edition of Herman's Miracles in Liebermann's Ungedruckte Anglo-Normannische Geschichtsquellen (No. 586), 203-81. For a recent edition of the life by Piramus, see La Vie Seint Edmund le Rei, an Anglo-Norman Poem of the Twelfth Century, by Florence L. Ravenel, Philadelphia, 1906. See No. 2628.

Elphege, or Ælfheah (d. 1012).

1461. Vita S. Elphegi archiepiscopi Cantuariensis auctore Osberno monacho Cantuariensi, ed. Wharton, Anglia Sacra, 1691, ii. 122-42; Langebek, Scriptores, 1773, ii. 439-63; Migne, Patrologia, 1853, cxlix. 371-94.

Written about 1080. Contains some particulars regarding the Danes in England.

Ethelwold (d. 984).

1462. Vita S. Æthelwoldi episcopi Wintoniensis auctore Ælfrico, ed. Joseph Stevenson, Chronicon Monasterii de Abingdon, ii. 253-66. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

Written about 1005 by Ælfric, abbot of Ensham (No. 1430). Expanded soon after 1005 by Wulfstan, precentor of Winchester: Migne, Patrologia, 1853, cxxxvii. 79–108.

Gregory the Great (d. 604).

1462a. A life of pope St. Gregory the Great, written by a monk of Whitby [probably about A.D. 713], ed. F. A. Gasquet. Westminster, 1904. pp. 46.

The Latin text of the earliest extant life of Gregory, now for the first time printed in full. An account of the MS., with extracts from it, was, however, published by Paul Ewald, Die älteste Biographie Gregors I., in Historische Aufsätze dem Andenken an Georg Waitz gewidmet (Hanover, 1886), 17-54. For other lives of Gregory, see Potthast, Bibliotheca (No. 25), ii. 1349.

1463. Gregorii Magni Registrum epistolarum [A.D. 590-604], in Migne's Patrologia, lxxvii. 441-1460. Paris, 1849.—A better edition, by Paul Ewald and L. M. Hartmann, in Pertz's Monumenta Germ. Hist., Epistolæ, vols. i.-ii. 2 vols. in 3 pts. Berlin, 1887-99.

For the older editions, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 539-40. The letters written to Augustine, Mellitus, King Ethelbert, and others, A.D. 596-601, are of great value for the study of the introduction of Christianity into England. They are printed in Haddan and Stubbs's Councils (No. 1424), iii. 5-38, and in Stevenson's Bedæ Opera (No. 1451), 230-52; see also Bede, Historia Ecclesiastica, bk. i. chs. xxiii.-xxxii. A. J. Mason's Mission of St. Augustine (No. 1638) contains the text of those which relate to Augustine's mission, with a translation.

Guthlac (d. 714).

1464. Vita S. Guthlaci auctore Felice, ed. W. de Gray Birch, Memorials of St. Guthlac of Croyland. Wisbech, 1881.—The Anglo-Saxon version of the life of St. Guthlac, originally written by Felix of Crowland [circa 730], with a translation, ed. C. W. Goodwin. London, 1848.—Das angelsächsische Prosa-Leben des hl. Guthlac, ed. Paul Gonser. Heidelberg, 1909.

There is also an Anglo-Saxon poem on Guthlac. See R. P. Wülker, Grundriss zur Geschichte der Angelsächsischen Litteratur (Leipsic, 1885), 179-83, 491-3.

Oswald (d. 992).

1465. *Vita Oswaldi archiepiscopi Eboracensis auctore anonymo, ed. James Raine, Historians of the Church of York, i. 399-475. Rolls Series. London, 1879.

Written by a monk of Ramsey between 995 and 1005. By far the best account of Oswald's life; of great value for the reigns of Edgar and Ethelred; contains notices of public affairs, and throws light on the monastic reformation. This work also gives the best account of Odo, archbishop of Canterbury (d. 958). Raine, in his Historians of the Church of York, vol. ii., also prints lives of Oswald by Eadmer, Prior Senatus of Worcester, and Capgrave. The last two are of little value, and Eadmer derives much of his material from the monk of Ramsey.

Patrick (d. 461).

Some authorities believe that Patrick died about 493. The materials for his life are:—

- 1. The writings attributed to him, namely, the Confessio, the Epistola ad Coroticum, and the Lorica. The Confessio is in large part autobiographical. The Epistola is a remonstrance addressed to the Christian subjects of Coroticus, a Welsh or a Scotch prince, who seems to have invaded Ireland and slain many Christians; it gives some particulars regarding Patrick's life. His Lorica, or religious armour, is a hymn written in Irish. Some information regarding him is also found in a Latin hymn composed in his praise by his coadjutor, St. Sechnall. All these pieces, together with certain canons attributed to Patrick, were edited in 1878 by Haddan and Stubbs, Councils (No. 1424), vol. ii. pt. ii., and more recently by Stokes, Tripartite Life (No. 1470). The best edition of the Confessio and the Epistola is by White (No. 1468).
- 2. The two earliest biographies of Patrick, namely, Bishop Tirechán's notes, which purport to have been obtained from Bishop Ultan (d. 657) and were put together in the second half of the seventh century, and the memoirs compiled by Muirchu Maccu-Machtheni toward the end of the seventh century. Both works are in Latin. They are found, with the oldest copy of the Confessio, in the Book of Armagh, a volume written about 807, which contains the most important sources for the life of St. Patrick. This book was edited by John Gwynn of Dublin in 1913; some of the documents in it are printed by Hogan and by Stokes (Nos. 1466, 1470). See J. B. Bury, Tirechán's Memoir of St. Patrick, in English Historical Review, 1902, xvii. 235-67, 700-704; also his Sources of the Early Patrician Documents, ibid., 1904, xix. 493-503, which shows that the works of Tirechán and Muirchu drew on older Patrician literature in Irish; and his Life of St. Patrick (No. 1651a), app. A.

3. Seven later lives, in Colgan's Acta Sanctorum (No. 605), vol. ii. The first life is an Irish hymn, which mentions the principal events in Patrick's career; it is attributed to Fiacc, bishop of Sletty, a disciple of Patrick, but it was probably composed in the eighth century. It is also printed in Haddan and Stubbs's Councils, vol. ii., and in Stokes's Tripartite Life. The second, third, and fourth of Colgan's lives are anonymous, and belong to the ninth, tenth, or eleventh century. The third, which was probably compiled in the second half of the ninth century, is edited by J. B. Bury in the Transactions of the Royal Irish Academy, 1903, xxxii. 199-262. The fifth is by Probus, tenth century; the sixth, by Jocelin of Furness, was compiled between 1183 and 1185 (translated into English by E. L. Swift, Dublin, 1809). All these lives of Patrick, except the first, are in Latin. The last and most important biography in Colgan's collection is a Latin translation of the Irish Tripartite Life, probably of the ninth century.

Stokes's edition of the Tripartite Life (No. 1470) is a valuable repertory of materials regarding the apostle of Ireland. On the Patrician literature, see also Todd, St. Patrick (No. 1657); and Bury, St. Patrick (No. 1651a), app. A. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1651a-7.

1466. Documenta de S. Patricio Hibernorum apostolo ex libro Armachano, ed. Edmund Hogan. 2 pts. Brussels, 1884 [1882]-89.

Pt. i. has a second title-page: Vita S. Patricii auctore Muirchu Mac cumachtheni et Tirechani Collectanea de S. Patricio: Excerptum ex Analectis Bollandianis [No. 608].

1467. FERGUSON, SAMUEL. On the Patrician documents. Royal Irish Academy, Trans., xxvii. 67-134. Dublin, 1885.

Contains translations of the Confessio, the Epistola, Fiacc's hymn, etc.

1468. Libri S. Patricii: the Latin writings of St. Patrick [the Confessio and the Epistola]. Edited, with a translation, by N. J. D. White. Royal Irish Academy, Proceedings, xxv. 201–326. Dublin, etc., 1905. [The best edition; seven earlier editions are noted on pp. 233–4.]—The writings of Patrick, the apostle of Ireland: a revised translation, with notes. By C. H. H. Wright. London, [1889].

A translation of his writings will also be found in M. F. Cusack's Life of St. Patrick (No. 1652); in Thomas Olden's Epistles and Hymn of St. Patrick, 3rd edition, London, 1894; and in Healy's St. Patrick (No. 1653a). For a critical account of them, see Bury (No. 1651a), app. A.

1469. Life of St. Patrick, by Muirchu Maccu Machtheni. Translated by Albert Barry. Dublin, 1895, pp. 74; 2nd edition, 1902, pp. 67.

Translation only. See J. B. Bury, The Tradition of Muirchu's Text, in Hermathena, Dublin, etc., 1903 [1902], xii. 172-207; also his Life of St. Patrick (No. 1651a), app. A, 255-63.

1470. * The tripartite life of Patrick, with other documents relating to that saint. Edited, with translations, by Whitley Stokes. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1887.

Vol. i. contains the Irish Tripartite Life, with a valuable introduction; vol. ii., Patrick's writings, Muirchu's memoirs, Tirechán's notes, Fiacc's hymn, etc. The Tripartite Life is so called from its division into three parts. Stokes believes that it was probably compiled in the 11th century; but Bury (No. 1651a) thinks that it may have taken shape in the latter part of the 9th. See also No. 1652.

Wilfrid (d. 709).

Besides Eddi's work (No. 1471), the only lives of Wilfrid worthy of mention are the metrical Vita Wilfridi by Frithegode of Canterbury, written about the middle of the tenth century and derived mainly from Eddi; and Vita Wilfridi by Eadmer of Canterbury (d. 1124), who used the works of Eddi and Frithegode. These three, together with three later lives of Wilfrid, are printed by Raine, Historians of the Church of York (No. 1441), vol. i. For modern biographies, see Nos. 1659-62.

1471. *Vita Wilfridi episcopi Eboracensis auctore Eddio Stephano, ed. Gale, Scriptores XV. (No. 581), 40–90; Giles, Vitæ Saxonum (No. 1443), 198–277.—Best edition, by James Raine, Historians of the Church of York, i. 1–103. Rolls Series. London, 1879.

Written at Ripon soon after 710. Displays much partisan zeal in favour of Wilfrid, but the work is of considerable interest because it was used by Bede and because it is one of the earliest literary productions of England. See B. W. Wells, Eddi's Life of Wilfrid, in English Historical Review, 1891, vi. 535-50. Wells tries to show that Eddi 'was not a conscientious historian.'

§ 39. MISCELLANEOUS: POETRY, ETC.

- a. Poetry, Nos. 1472-9.
- b. Glossaries, Inscriptions, etc., Nos. 1480-89.

A detailed account of early poetry does not fall within the scope of a bibliography of English history, but the poetical literature cannot be entirely ignored. The information regarding institutions and social life gleaned from poems like those of Cynewulf is meagre: see No. 1476. The scene of popular epics like Beowulf, the Battle of Finnsburg, and Waldhere lies in foreign lands, and their material is in large part legendary; therefore they add little to our stock of knowledge regarding Britain, although they help to illustrate some of the social and governmental principles of our Germanic ancestors. Of much greater value are the purely historical poems of the tenth and eleventh centuries, namely, the Battle of Maldon (No. 1473) and the national songs embodied in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. Of the latter the Battle of Brunanburh, A.D. 937, is the most important. Other poetical pieces in the Chronicle relate to the conquest of Mercia, A.D. 942; Edgar's reign, coronation, and death, 959, 973, 975; the death of Edward the Martyr, 979; Alfred the Etheling, 1036; the son of Edmund Ironside, 1057; and the death of Edward the Confessor, 1065.

The best collection of Anglo-Saxon poetry is Grein's (No. 1474). A good account of the various poems, with much bibliographical information, is furnished by R. P. Wülker in his Grundriss zur Geschichte der Angelsäcksischen Litteratur, Leipsic, 1885. Later bibliographical information will be found in Jahresbericht über die Erscheinungen auf dem Gebiete der Germanischen Philologie, herausgegeben von der Gesellschaft für Deutsche Philologie in Berlin, published annually since 1879. See also John Earle, Anglo-Saxon Literature, London, 1884; Henry Morley, English Writers, London, 1887–88, vols. i.-ii.; S. A. Brooke, History of Early English Literature, 2 vols., London, 1892; the Cambridge History of English Literature (No. 37a), vol. i.; Alois Brandl, Englische Literatur, in Hermann Paul's Grundriss der Germanischen Philologie, 2nd edition, ii. pt. i. 941–1134; and Ten Brink (No. 35).

The following lists include only those works which are of special interest to students of history. Metrical biographical poems are in §§ 34, 38d.

a. POETRY.

Anglo-Saxon Poems.

1472. ABEGG, DANIEL. Zur Entwicklung der historischen Dichtung bei den Angelsachsen. Strasburg, 1894.

1473. Battle of Maldon, or Byrhtnoth's death, ed. Benjamin Thorpe, Analecta Anglo-Saxonica, new edition, London, 1868, pp. 131-41; Henry Sweet, Anglo-Saxon Reader, 8th edition, Oxford, 1908, pp. 120-30; J. W. Bright, Anglo-Saxon Reader, 3rd edition, New York, 1894, pp. 149-59; W. J. Sedgefield, The battle of Maldon and short poems from the Saxon Chronicle, Boston, etc., 1904, pp. 96 (Anglo-Saxon text only; contains a useful bibliography, pp. 45-50).—Translated by J. M. Garnett, Boston, 1889; and by W. R. Sims, Modern Language Notes, Baltimore, 1892, vii. 275-86.

This fragment of a contemporary Anglo-Saxon epic gives a vivid account of Byrhtnoth's battle with the Danes, A.D. 991. See Unic Zernial, Das Lied von Byrhtnoths Fall, Berlin, 1882, pp. 24; and No. 1529.

1474. Bibliothek der angelsächsischen Poesie, ed. C. W. M. Grein. 4 vols. Göttingen, 1857–64.—New edition, by R. P. Wülker, 3 vols., 4 pts., Cassel, 1883–98.

Vol. i. is of most interest to students of history; it contains Beowulf, Battle of Maldon, Battle of Brunanburh, etc. Beowulf seems to be 'an Anglian or Northumbrian recension of a story founded upon Scandinavian tradition and designed for use or recital at some 8th century royal court': Frederic Seebohm, Tribal Custom in Anglo-Saxon Law (No. 1553a), 57. The scene appears to lie chiefly in the Baltic. For the literature relating to Beowulf, see Wülker, Grundriss, 244-307. Recent editions of Beowulf: by A. J. Wyatt, Cambridge, 1894 (2nd edition, 1898); Alfred Holder, 3 pts., Freiburg, 1895-96; M. Trautmann, Bonn, 1904; F. Holthausen, 2 vols., Heidelberg, etc., [1905]-06 (2nd edition, 1908-09): Moritz Heyne, 9th edition, Paderborn, 1910; W. J. Sedgefield, Manchester, 1910, 1913; Hubert Pierquin, Paris, 1912. Recent translations; by /John Earle, Oxford, 1892; J. L. Hall, Boston, 1892; William Morris and A. J. Wyatt, London, 1895 (new editions, 1898, 1900); J. R. C. Hall, London, 1901 (new ed. 1910), 1914; Wentworth Huyshe, London, 1907; F. B. Gummere, The Oldest English Epic, New York, 1909. See also Bernhard ten Brink, Beowulf Untersuchungen, Strasburg, 1888; Karl Müllenhoff, Beowulf Untersuchungen, Berlin, 1889; Thomas Arnold, Notes on Beowulf, London, 1898; Henrik Schück, Studier i Beowulfsagan, Uppsala Universitets Arsskrift, Upsala, 1909, pp. 50. For lists of editions, translations, etc., see Holthausen's edition of Beowulf, ii. pp. x.-xiv.; the Cambridge History of English Literature (No. 37a), i. 421-2; and Alois Brandl, Englische Literatur, in Paul's Grundriss der Germanischen Philologie, 2nd edition, ii. pt. i. 1015-24. Some light is thrown on the historical background of the poem by Knut Stjerna's Essays on Questions connected with the Old English Poem of Beowulf, translated and edited by J. R. C. Hall, Coventry, 1912.

1476. Kent, C. W. Teutonic antiquities in Andreas and Elene. Halle, 1887. pp. 64.

Attempts to form from these two poems a picture of the customs and manners of the Anglo-Saxons; some of the topics examined are religious conceptions, governmental and social relations, and war. See also M. B. Price, Teutonic Antiquities in the Generally Acknowledged Cynewulfian Poetry, Leipsic, 1896.

Norse, Welsh, and Irish Poems.

1476a. Circuit (The) of Ireland by Muircheartach MacNeill, prince of Aileach: a poem written in the year 942 by Cormacan Eigeas, chief poet of the north of Ireland [Irish text, with a translation], ed. John O'Donovan. Irish Archæol. Soc., Tracts relating to Ireland, vol. i. no. 2. Dublin, 1841. pp. 68.

MacNeill made this circuit in 941 for the purpose of exacting hostages from various kings and sub-kings of Ireland.

1477. Corpus poeticum boreale: the poetry of the old northern tongue, to the thirteenth century. Edited and translated by Gudbrand Vigfússon and F. York Powell. 2 vols. Oxford, 1883.

This valuable collection of Norse poetry contains some interesting allusions to English affairs: see especially the court poetry of the 11th century in bk. viii. A better edition of some of these poems will be found in Theodor Wisén's Carmina Norræna, 2 vols., Lund, 1886-89.

1478. Four ancient books (The) of Wales, containing the Cymric poems attributed to the bards of the sixth century, ed. W. F. Skene. 2 vols. Edinburgh, 1868.

Among the Welsh poems edited with translations in this volume, there are seventy containing allusions to historical events. Skene believes that 'they are the literature of the Cymric inhabitants of Cumbria before that kingdom was subjugated by the Saxon king in 946,' and that many of these pieces took definite shape in the 7th century and are of some historical value. See also Sharon Turner, Vindication of the Ancient British Poems, London, 1803; and D. W. Nash, Taliesin, or the Bards and Druids of Britain (London, 1858), ch. iii. The best of the poems were previously printed in the Myvyrian Archaiology of Wales (No. 584a). See also the Series of Welsh Texts edited by Rhys and Evans (p. 45, above).

1479. Gilla Coemgin's chronological poem. Edited, with a translation of the Irish, by Whitley Stokes, Tripartite Life of Patrick, 530-41. Rolls Series. London, 1887.

Extends from the world's beginning to 1072, in which year the verses were written. The poem deals briefly with Irish kings and their battles. For other early historical poems of Ireland, see Nos. 1367, 1395; Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on the MS. Materials of Irish History (Dublin, 1861), chs. xi.-xiii.; and the Irish version of Nennius, edited by J. H. Todd (No. 1375).

b. GLOSSARIES, INSCRIPTIONS, ETC.

The historical information contained in the following sources, though meagre, is helpful. The glossaries, the Colloquy of Ælfric, and Leechdoms throw some gleams of light on institutions, culture, and social life, while the inscriptions afford some scanty biographical details. For other Latin-English glossaries besides those mentioned below, see R. P. Wülker, Grundriss, 100–101. For archæological remains, see R. A. Smith's chapters on Anglo-Saxon Remains, in the Victoria county histories (No. 839); and § 11.

England.

1480. Anglo-Saxon and old English vocabularies, ed. Thomas Wright; 2nd edition, by R. P. Wülker. 2 vols. London, 1884. For the 1st edition, see No. 215.

Contains various Latin-English vocabularies and glossaries from the 8th century onward. One of these, vol. i. pp. 304-36 (not pp. 104-67), was compiled by Abbot Ælfric about the end of the 10th century. The best edition is in Ælfric's Grammatik und Glossar (ed. Julius Zupitza, Berlin, 1880), 297–322. On Ælfric, see No. 1430.

1481. Colloquium Ælfrici, ed. Benjamin Thorpe, Analecta Anglo-Saxonica, new edition, London, 1868, pp. 18–36; Wülker, Vocabularies, 1884, i. 89–103.

A Latin dialogue, with an interlinear Anglo-Saxon translation, written probably between 995 and 1000 by Abbot Ælfric to serve as an exercise for learning Latin. It was enlarged by his pupil Ælfric Bata. The conversation relates to the daily life of a monk, a merchant, a shepherd, a smith, and of persons engaged in various other trades or occupations, and presents an interesting picture of manners and monastic life.

1482. Eighth-century Latin-Anglo-Saxon glossary, preserved in the library of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, ed. J. H. Hessels. Cambridge, 1890.

The editor believes that it belongs to the beginning of the 8th century, and that it is older than the Epinal glossary.

- 1482a. A late eighth-century Latin-Anglo-Saxon glossary, preserved in the library of the Leiden university, ed. J. H. Hessels. Cambridge, 1906.
- 1483. Epinal glossary (The), Latin and old English, of the eighth century, photolithographed, ed. Henry Sweet. London, 1883. Also ed. Henry Sweet, Oldest English Texts, 35–110. Early English Text Soc. London, 1885.
- 1484. Inscriptiones Britanniæ Christianæ, ed. Emil Hübner. Berlin, etc., 1876.

Most of them seem to belong to the Anglo-Saxon period. For scattered corrections and additions, by John Rhys and others, see Archæologia Cambrensis, passim. Some English inscriptions of the 7th and 8th centuries are printed in Sweet's Oldest English Texts,  $124-30\epsilon$

- 1485. Leechdoms, wortcunning, and starcraft of early England: documents illustrating the history of science, ed. Oswald Cockayne. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1864-66.
- J. F. Payne's English Medicine in Anglo-Saxon Times, London, 1904, is based mainly on Cockayne's work.
  - 1485a. Old English glosses, ed. A. S. Napier. Oxford, 1900.

Ireland and Wales.

For Welsh inscriptions, see Westwood, Lapidarium (No. 417).

1486. Christian inscriptions in the Irish language. Collected by George Petrie, edited by Margaret Stokes. Royal Hist. and Archæol. Assoc. of Ireland. 2 vols. Dublin, 1872-78. 128 plates.

They seem to extend from the 7th to the 14th century; most of them are anterior to the 12th.

1487. Cormac's Glossary, or Sanas Cormaic, ed. Whitley Stokes, Three Irish Glossaries, 1-46. London, 1862.—Cormac's Glossary. Translated by John O'Donovan, edited by Whitley Stokes. Irish Archæol. and Celtic Soc. Calcutta, 1868.

This glossary is attributed to Cormac, king of Cashel (d. 908); it is the earliest Irish dictionary, and 'the oldest attempt at a comparative vernacular dictionary made in any language of modern Europe.'

1488. Ogam inscribed monuments of the Gaedhil in the British islands. By R. R. Brash, ed. G. M. Atkinson. London, 1879.

For many of the inscriptions in this collection, see also R. A. S. Macalister, Studies in Irish Epigraphy, 3 pts., London, 1897–1907.

1489. Welsh triads. Translated by J. Loth, in Henri d'Arbois de Jubainville's Cours de Littérature Celtique, iv. 201-301. Paris, 1889.

For their value, and for editions of the Welsh texts, etc., see ibid., iii. 22-24, 358; F. Walter, Das alte Wales (Bonn, 1859), 8-16, 36-41, 338-44, 487-521; Thomas Stephens, The Literature of the Cymry (2nd edition, London, 1876), 427-9, 493-4. The practice of arranging facts in threes doubtless dates from a very early period, but the collections of triads which we possess are of the 12th and later centuries. Some of them are historical, but they are of very doubtful authority.

CHAPTER II

§ 40. GENERAL.

THE political history of the Anglo-Saxon period is examined by the authors mentioned in § 17a, supplemented by Green, Making of England and Conquest of England (Nos. 1510, 1526). Skene's Celtic Scotland (No. 1269) contains many notices of the history of northern England.

Kemble and Palgrave (Nos. 1492, 1497) deal in greatest detail with the constitutional and legal history, but many of their conclusions have been corrected by Stubbs, Schmid, Maitland, and Maurer (Nos. 643, 1392, 1493-4), and by Essays in Anglo-Saxon Law (No. 1491). See also Pollock's paper on English Law before the Norman Conquest, in Law Quarterly Review, 1898, xiv. 291-306 (reprinted as ch. i. of the 2nd edition of Pollock and Maitland's History of English Law). Freeman, Norman Conquest (No. 2812), vol. i. ch. iii., gives a short account of the English constitution in the tenth and eleventh centuries. Liebermann's monograph on the Laws of Edward the Confessor (No. 1405) contains a scholarly survey of institutions in the eleventh century. Brunner and Waitz (Nos. 1326, 1346) deal incidentally with some of the early English institutions. See also Vinogradoff (No. 1240a).

✓ 1489a. *CHADWICK, H. M. Studies on Anglo-Saxon institutions. Cambridge, 1905.

Deals with the coinage, the administrative system, territorial divisions, the national council, the nobility, royalty, etc. Believes that royalty was not under any ordered control, and reduces the ceorl to a position of great dependence.

1490. DAVOUD-OGHLOU, G. A. Histoire de la législation des anciens Germains. 2 vols. Berlin, 1845.

Anglo-Saxons, ii. 271-765. Of little value.

√ 1491. Essays in Anglo-Saxon law. Boston, etc., 1876.

Courts of law, by Henry Adams.

Land-law, by H. C. Lodge.

Valuable.

Family law, by Ernest Young.

Legal procedure, by J. L. Laughlin,

1491a. HODGKIN, THOMAS. The history of England from the earliest times to the Norman conquest. London, etc., 1906. See No. 632a.

1492. *Kemble, J. M. The Saxons in England. 2 vols. London, 1849.—New edition, by W. de Gray Birch, 1876.

Deals especially with institutions. Chs. ii.-iii., ix., in vol. i. (the mark, shire, hundred, etc.), and ch. vii. in vol. ii. (the towns), should be used with caution. Kemble was the first to make much use of the Anglo-Saxon charters.

- 1493. *MAITLAND, F. W. Domesday book and beyond: three essays on the early history of England. Cambridge, 1897; reprinted, 1907.
  - I. Domesday Book.

III. The hide.

II. England before the Conquest.

Throws much light on the early history of the manor, on feudalism, classes of society, land tenures, Domesday Book, etc. Advances strong arguments against Seebohm's view (below, § 44). Presents a new theory regarding the origin of boroughs, and holds that the hide usually contained 120 acres. See Tait's review, in English Historical Review, 1897, xii. 768-77, and J. H. Round, ibid., 1900, xv. 293-302; F. Baring, The Hidation of some Southern Counties, ibid., 1899, xiv. 290-99; Corbett, Tribal Hidage (No. 1544).

1494. *MAURER, KONRAD. Angelsächsische Rechtsverhältnisse. Kritische Ueberschau der Deutschen Gesetzgebung, i. 47–120, 405–31; ii. 30–68, 388–440; iii. 26–61. Munich, 1853–56.

Deals with the family, mark, hundred, tithing, shire, mutual suretyship, land-laws, classes of society, feud, and wergeld. Corrects many of Kemble's errors.

✓ 1495. OMAN, CHARLES [W. C.]. England before the Norman conquest. London, [1910].

See No. 634a,

1496. OWEN, T. M. A history of England and Wales, from the Roman to the Norman conquest. 1st and 2nd editions. London, etc., [1882].

A brief account.

× 1497. *PALGRAVE, FRANCIS. The rise and progress of the English commonwealth: Anglo-Saxon period. 2 pts. London, 1832. 90/-

Lays stress on the development of legal institutions. Badly arranged and discursive. Palgrave also wrote a popular account of the same subject, entitled History of England, Anglo-Saxon Period (London, 1831; new editions, History of Anglo-Saxons, 1867, 1869, 1876, 1887, etc.); and an essay on the materials of Anglo-Saxon history, in Quarterly Review, 1826, xxxiv. 248-98.

1498. PHILLIPS, GEORGE. Versuch einer Darstellung des angelsächsischen Rechts. Göttingen, 1825.

The earliest attempt to deal critically with this subject. The book is now in large part antiquated.

1499. ROBERTSON, E.W. Historical essays. Edinburgh, 1872.

The hide, 92-102. The shire, 112-33. The king's kin, 177-89. Dunstan, 189-203. Edgar's coronation, 203-15.

297

1500. SEARLE, W. G. Anglo-Saxon bishops, kings, and nobles: the succession of the bishops and the pedigrees of the kings and nobles. Cambridge, 1899.

Valuable. 5 00

1501. STEARNS, J. M. The germs and developments of the laws of England. New York, etc., 1889.

Consists in large part of a reprint of Thorpe's translation of the Anglo-Saxon laws (No. 1393), with brief notes; contains also a translation of the laws of Edward the Confessor and of Magna Carta.

1502. TURNER, SHARON. History of the Anglo-Saxons. 4 vols. London, 1799–1805; 7th edition, 3 vols., 1852.

Vol. iv. of the 1st edition (vol. iii. of the 7th) deals with manners, institutions, literature, etc. The account of King Alfred in bk. v. is still valuable.

- 1503. WINKELMANN, EDUARD. Geschichte der Angelsachsen bis zum Tode König Ælfreds. Berlin, 1883.
- 1504. ZÉZAS, S. G. Essai historique sur la législation d'Angleterre jusqu'au xii. siècle. Paris, 1863.

§ 41. FROM THE CONQUEST TO EGBERT'S SUPREMACY.

The authority of the old standard works of Guest and Green (Nos. 1263, 1510) has been severely shaken by Stevenson's criticism (No. 1263). Elton, Hodgkin, and Oman (Nos. 1247, 1491a, 1495 deal with the period incidentally. Various recent works: V. H. Friedel, L'Arrivée des Saxons en Angleterre, in Beiträge zur Philologie, Festgabe für Wendelin Foerster (Halle, 1902), 280-96; Henry Housman, The Story of Saint Ethelbert of Hereford, King and Martyr, Hereford, [1901]; A. Schiber, Germanische Siedlungen in Lothringen und in England, in Jahrbuch der Gesellschaft für Lothringische Geschichte, etc. (Metz, 1900), xii. 148-87; T. W. # § 43. THE MÆGTH, LAND-LAWS, AND CLASSES OF SOCIETY.

Young's essay on family law (No. 1491) contains the best general account of the mægth, and is supplemented by the works of Von Amira and Roeder (Nos. 1541, 1553). Pollock and Maitland (No. 657), bk. ii. ch. vi. § 1, contend that there was no system of mutually exclusive clans, and no permanent organisation of the blood-feud group. Owing to the meagreness of the sources, much obscurity still overhangs such questions as the limits of a mægth and the rules of inheritance. Most writers believe that in the inheritance of lands preference was shown to the sons; but Opet (No. 1552) contends that the daughters inherited lands on equal terms with the sons. There is a valuable account of the kindred in Wales in Seebohm's Tribal System (No. 1116).

On the Anglo-Saxon land-laws, see also §§ 22, 40, especially Nos. 1491; 1493. Vinogradoff's view regarding the nature of folkland (No. 1555) has been accepted by the best authorities.

Brunner (No. 1412) deals in detail with bookland, and Earle (No. 1416) with lænland. Maitland's Domesday Book (No. 1493) throws much light on the land-laws, and contains the best account of early feudalism. On this latter subject Round's essay on knights' service (No. 2827) and Zinkeisen's work (No. 1584) should also be consulted. The most scholarly discussion of the hide is furnished by Maitland (No. 1493) see also Nos. 1544, 1554.

On the classes of society, see also § 22. The works of Heywood and Maurer (Nos. 1548, 1551) are still useful. Allen (No. 719) advances some plausible arguments in favour of the view that throughout the Anglo-Saxon period the eorl was an officer of state, and was never in England a noble by birth. Earle (No. 1416) presents some novel ideas regarding gesiths; and Jastrow (No. 1549) gives a scholarly account of the condition of the slaves. On the status of the freemen and the dependent classes, see the authors mentioned in § 44a.

Allen, in his Growth of the Royal Prerogative (No. 661), pp. 125-55, introduced the view that folkland was the land owned by the folk or nation; and this remained the prevalent doctrine until Vinogradoff's essay was published. The latter shows that folkland is the proper name for what Kemble and other writers have called ethel; that folkland was land held by folklaw or custom, as distinguished from hookland, which was land held by a charter or 'book.' See also Vinogradoff's Transfer of Land in Old English Law, in Harvard Law Review, 1907, xx. 532-48; his Romanistische Einflüsse im Angelsächsischen Recht, das Buchland, in Mélanges Fitting (Montpellier, 1908), ii. 499-522; and his English Society in the Eleventh Century (No. 1240a).

§ 44. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

- a. The Vill and the Manor, Nos. 1555a-62.
- b. Borough, Hundred, Shire, etc., Nos. 1563-73.

a. THE VILL AND THE MANOR.

Kemble (No. 1492) was the first to emphasise the influence of the so-called 'mark' community in England. Nasse (No. 1219) made use of the results attained by G. L. von Maurer, and showed that in England, as in Germany, the open-field system was the shell of the village community. Like Kemble, he lays stress upon the communalism of the early village. Maine (No. 1559) tries to confirm the views of Kemble and Nasse by the study of modern analogies in India. Seebohm (No. 1561) contends that all these writers are wrong in assuming the existence of the 'mark' system in England; he holds that the English village community was derived from the Roman villa, and was manorial or servile throughout the Anglo-Saxon period. Earle (No. 1416) believes that the nucleus of the manor was the settlement of Anglo-Saxon warriors under military chiefs, who soon became manorial lords; and Andrews (No. 1556) emphasises the clan chieftain as the most potent element in the origin of manors. Meitzen, Maitland, and Vinogradoff (Nos. 1217, 1493, 3054) present some strong arguments against Seebohm's theory. Maitland's work is particularly valuable; he believes that the early English village had little communalism, but was inhabited by freemen who owned land in severalty.

For some account of the literature of this subject, see Bryan, The Mark (No. 1327); and Vinogradoff, Villainage (No. 3054), 1–39. See also § 33, and Nos. 719, 826a, 834, 839a, 1197a, 1240a, 1401, 1584, 1586, 2826a.

The Surnames tries to show that the township was originally identical with the hundred, and that the latter gradually resolved itself into various townships. The Survival argues against the antiquity of communal ownership of land. For a valuable account of the manor, see his Domesday Book (No. 1493), essay ii.

b. BOROUGH, HUNDRED, SHIRE, ETC.

For the general treatises on boroughs and gilds, see § 24. The best account of early municipal history is Maitland's (No. 1567). Kemble (No. 1492) deals with the subject in detail, but is misled by continental analogies. Coote (No. 1298), 342–413, and Wright (No. 420), ch. xvi., advocate the Roman origin of boroughs and gilds, but their arguments are not convincing. On the early history of the shire, see the essays of Freeman, Robertson, and Taylor (Nos. 823, 1499, 1572). On the hundred, besides the works mentioned below, see No. 1560, and on the tithing, § 45 and No. 719. This essay is expanded in his Domesday Book (No. 1493), 172-219. He contends that the special royal peace conferred upon fortified places is the original principle which serves to mark off the borough from the village. See Tait's criticism, in English Historical Review, 1897, xii. 772-7; and cf. Maitland's Township and Borough (No. 831).

Scholarly; the best account of this subject.

1573. TAYLOR, ISAAC. Wapentakes and hundreds, in P. E. Dove's Domesday Studies, i. 67–76. London, etc., 1888.

Contends that the wapentake was not identical with the hundred, but was formed out of an association of three hundreds. This theory is supported by insufficient evidence,

§ 45. JUSTICE AND POLICE.

See the general treatises in § 20; also § 17c, especially Brunner's Forschungen (No. 647).

The best account of the courts is furnished by Adams and Zinkeisen (Nos. 1491, 1585). Cox, Parliamentary Elections (No. 2929), devotes a chapter to the county court, and Stubbs (No. 768a) deals with the church tribunals. The best authority on the early history of feudal justice is Maitland, Domesday Book, 258-92; see also Nos. 1584, 1586. The most detailed account of legal procedure is Laughlin's (No. 1491).

The question whether groups of sureties, i.e. the frankpledge system, existed before 1066 has evoked much discussion. Marquardsen and Waitz (Nos. 1577, 1582) believe that it was introduced soon after the Norman Conquest, and this is the view of Gneist and Stubbs (Nos. 639, 643). Liebermann and Schmid (Nos. 1405, 1581), like Kemble and Palgrave (Nos. 1492, 1497), assert that the frankpledge system already existed in the tenth century. See now Morris (No. 696a).

Berlin, 1896.—Die Friedlosigkeit bei den Angelsachsen, in Festschrift Heinrich Brunner zum Siebzigsten Geburtstag dargebracht, 17–37. Weimar, 1910.

The Kesselfang shows that 'ceace' (kettle) should be read for 'ceape' in Ine's laws, cc. 37, 62; hence that the ordeal was well known in Ine's time, and was not introduced into England in the 9th or 10th century, as most writers assert.

He believes that each group of four vills formed a judicial district, which had a 'mark-court,' or leet, and that the jury was derived from these 'leet-districts.' He gives much information regarding the vills down to the close of the 13th century, but his main conclusions are untenable.

a. GENERAL.

For the original sources, see §§ 16, 38; the notes in Haddan and Stubbs's Councils (No. 1424) are very valuable. For the general modern treatises, see §§ 23, 24, 40. Of the works mentioned below, the most elaborate are those of Bright and Lingard; the best general survey is Hunt's. See also Fernand Cabrol, L'Angleterre Chrétienne avant les Normands, Paris, 1909 (bibliography at pp. ix.-xxiii.).

*BRIGHT, WILLIAM. Chapters of early English church history. Oxford, 1878; 3rd edition, 1897.

Ch. i. is devoted to the ancient Celtic church; the other chapters deal with the period 597-709. The best work on early English church history.

- 1598. The Latin church during Anglo-Saxon times. London, 1848.

Written in reply to Lingard's work (No. 1595), which assailed the conclusions in Soames's Anglo-Saxon Church (No. 1596).

1599. USSHER, JAMES. Britannicarum ecclesiarum antiquitates. Dublin, 1639.—Also printed in his Whole Works (17 vols., Dublin, 1847-64), vols. v.-vi.

b. THE CELTIC CHURCH.

The chief materials for the history of the Celtic church are in Haddan and Stubbs's Councils and Reeves's edition of the Life of Columba (Nos. 1424, 1454); the introduction, notes, etc., in these two works, and in Skene's Celtic Scotland (No. 1269), vol. ii., are valuable. See also the church histories of Ireland and Wales in § 24.

1600. Bellesheim, Alphons. Geschichte der katholischen Kirche in Schottland. 2 vols. Mainz, 1883.—Translated by O. H. Blair: History of the Catholic church of Scotland. 4 vols. Edinburgh, etc., 1887-90.

PART IV

FROM THE NORMAN CONQUEST TO ABOUT 1485

ORIGINAL SOURCES

Most of our information regarding the political history of this period is derived from the chroniclers (§ 48); and the law-writers (§ 49) throw much light on legal and other institutions.

The public records are very valuable for the study of legal and constitutional history. They are examined in §§ 50-55, where they are placed under the headings to which they primarily relate; but the contents of each record or series of records are usually of a miscellaneous character, throwing light on various kinds of institutions. For example, Domesday Book and the pipe rolls illustrate many subjects besides finance, and the plea rolls illustrate many besides the judiciary.

The language of most of the records in this period is Latin, which was not entirely dislodged by English until 1731 (statute 4 George II. c. 26). In the statutes and rolls of parliament French begins to be prominent in the second half of the thirteenth century, and during the next two centuries predominates over Latin; but English begins to be freely used in these two series of records during the fifteenth century. See Pollock and Maitland, English Law (No. 657), 2nd edition, i. 80–87; Giry, Manuel de Diplomatique (No. 233), 472–3; Luders, Use of the French Language in our Laws (No. 206).

For books giving accounts of the public records, including some series of documents not mentioned in this chapter, see § 12, especially Scargill Bird's Guide (No. 459) and the works of Cooper and Thomas (Nos. 461, 496). See also Rye (No. 310); and below, app. D.

§ 48. CHRONICLES AND ROYAL BIOGRAPHIES.

a. General Collections, Nos. 1664-72.b. Alphabetical Table, Nos. 1673-1869.

The most tangible effect of the Norman Conquest upon the chroniclers of England was to widen their horizon, to make their treatment of history less insular and more cosmopolitan; this was an inevitable result of the closer contact of England with the continent. The superior elegance of the Normans and their faculty of organisation, 'their orderly, systematic tendencies,' also soon left their impress upon the historiography of England. For these and other results of the Norman Conquest, see Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, vol. ii. preface; and Freeman, Norman Conquest, vol. v. ch. xxv. § 3.

Some advance in the art of writing history is visible in Eadmer (d. circa 1124), but his work is circumscribed in scope. William of Malmesbury (d. circa 1142) was the first writer after Bede who attempted a systematic general history of England, as distinguished from an arid compilation of facts presented in chronological sequence. As a true historian who looks beneath the surface of events, he is far superior to Florence of Worcester, Simeon of Durham, Henry of Huntingdon, and other chroniclers of the period 1066-1154. There is a remarkable dearth of contemporary histories for the later years of Stephen and for the early part of the reign of Henry II. A marked feature of the historiography of England in the last quarter of the twelfth century is the prominence of certain non-monastic writers, notably 'Benedict of Peterborough,' Hoveden, Diceto, and Giraldus Cambrensis. The first three of these, who seem to have been in close touch with the courts of Henry II. and Richard I., embellished their narratives with many valuable state papers. Stubbs, in the preface to his edition of Hoveden, vol. i., gives us an account of the northern or Northumbrian school of history, which began with Bede, included his northern continuators (the lost Northumbrian annals, Simeon of Durham, and John and Richard of Hexham), and culminated in Hoveden, whose work is grafted on the Historia post Bedam. In Hoveden's time the cloisters of northern England produced William of Newburgh, a genuine historian of the type of Bede and Malmesbury, who looked upon history as something more than a record of dry facts. Newburgh displays a spirit of critical research far in advance of his age.

In the thirteenth century the historical literature of England is almost wholly confined to the monasteries. Secular clerics, like Geoffrey of Monmouth, Henry of Huntingdon, Giraldus Cambrensis, Hoveden, and Diceto, are no longer prominent among the chroniclers. In the fourteenth century, however, the monastic chroniclers decrease in value, and some of the best histories are written by secular clerks, like Robert of Avesbury. Geoffrey le Baker, Adam of Murimuth, Adam of Usk, and the author of the Annales Paulini (Nos. 1697, 1716, 1717, 1822, 1853). The annals composed in the medieval cloisters are of three kinds: those dealing mainly or wholly with the history of the writer's monastery, which are examined in § 57; those dealing partly with local monastic history and partly with general history; and those dealing mainly with general history. The annals of the second kind are of great importance in the thirteenth century; some of the best of them have been printed in Luard's Annales Monastici (No. 1664), and some of the shorter ones in Liebermann's Geschichtsquellen (No. 586). To the third group belong the writers of the St. Albans school of history, a school which produced Wendover, Wallingford, and Paris in the thirteenth century, Rishanger, Trokelowe, Blaneford, the Chronicon Angliæ, the Annales Ricardi II. et Henrici IV., Walsingham, Amundesham, and the Register of Whethamstede in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. This series of annals, written in large part by official chroniclers of the abbey, furnishes us with the fullest account of the general history of England from about 1200 to 1422, and also gives some information concerning the period 1423-61. Matthew Paris is the greatest writer of the St. Albans school and the most eminent chronicler of the thirteenth century. The pre-eminence of St. Albans in the historiography of England, which is much greater than that of St. Denis in the historiography of France, was due partly to its proximity to London and to its position on one of the great highways of England. On the St. Albans school, see James Gairdner, Early Chroniclers of England, ch. vi.; T.D. Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, vol. iii. preface; and Augustus Jessopp, Studies by a Recluse, ch. i. Many other abbeys, such as those of Bury St. Edmunds, Canterbury, Durham, Malmesbury, Peterborough, Westminster, Winchester, and Worcester, were also more or less active in the production of chronicles during the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth centuries; and, like St. Albans, most of them were old Benedictine houses. The Cluniacs. Cistercians. Carthusians, and other reformed orders did not accomplish much in England: the most eminent of the Cistercian writers was Ralph of Coggeshall; among the friars the only prominent chroniclers were Capgrave, Trevet, and Eccleston (Nos. 1731, 1849, 2201). The best historians of the fourteenth century, those of the St. Albans school, like Rishanger and Trokelowe, or such writers as Hemingburgh, Murimuth, and Knighton, are distinctly inferior to the best historians of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. On the other hand, the number of chronicles multiplied so fast that many of the smaller ones still remain unpublished. Among those which have recently appeared are the town chronicles edited by Kingsford and Flenley (Nos. 1665a, 1671a), and the chronicles of John of Reading and an anonymous writer of Canterbury, of the reign of Edward III., edited by James Tait (No. 1832a).

In the fifteenth century there was a still further decline in historical literature. Walsingham (d. circa 1422) is the most eminent chronicler of this period, and with the completion of his work the regular series of St. Albans chronicles closes. There was also a dearth of literary activity in other monasteries. valuable monastic chronicle in the second half of the fifteenth century is the Crowland continuation of 'Ingulf' (No. 1798). Laymen in the cities, men like William of Worcester, Hardyng, and Fabyan, were displacing the monks; and in the last quarter of the century the scriptorium was beginning to make way for the printing-press: the first chronicle was printed by Caxton in 1480 (No. 1733). Among these city histories there is an interesting group of mayors' chronicles, the extant medieval examples of which, with the exception of Ricart's Bristol Calendar (No. 2375) and the meagre chronicle of Lynn (No. 1671a), relate only to London. The oldest are Fitz-Thedmar's Chronica Majorum, compiled in 1274; the Annales Londonienses, compiled in the first half of the fourteenth century; the French Croniques de London, compiled not far from the middle of the fourteenth century; and the English Chronicle of London, compiled about 1442: Nos. 1690, 1739, 1763, 1773. These chronicles contain the names of the chief civic officers, together with notices of the municipal and national events which occurred during each mayoralty. Owing to the important part that London played in the history of the kingdom, the civic annalists were not inclined to ignore national affairs. On this subject, see the excellent introduction to Flenley's Six Town Chronicles (No. 1671a); and Gross's Bibliography of Municipal History, pp. xviii.-xxiii. On the literature of this century, see G. G. Smith, The Transition Period, Edinburgh, etc., 1900; and C. L. Kingsford, English Historical Literature in the Fifteenth Century, Oxford, 1913.

For information concerning the lives and works of the chroniclers of the period 1066-1485, see the literature in § 2. especially Hardy's Catalogue of Materials, vols. ii.-iii., Potthast's Bibliotheca, Gairdner's Early Chroniclers of England, and the Cambridge History of English Literature, vols. i.-ii.; the Dictionary of National Biography (No. 305); the prefaces or introductions to the editions in the Rolls Series and in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594); and the appendixes on authorities in the Political History of England (No. 632a). For the French chroniclers of this period, and for English chroniclers who treat of French affairs, see Molinier, Les Sources de l'Histoire de France (No. 30a). The texts of the chief French chronicles for the period are in Bouquet's Recueil des Historiens de la France (No. 575). For a chronological table of the chronicles, see below, app. D. The following regnal table gives the names of the principal chroniclers, or primary authorities, for each reign, an account of whose works will, with a few exceptions, be found in the alphabetical table, § 48b, under the names here briefly listed; the dates refer to the more valuable portions of the works.

a. GENERAL COLLECTIONS OF CHRONICLERS.

The larger collections of chroniclers will be found in § 16. The particular chronicles mentioned below are described in the alphabetical table, § 48b.

1664. *Annales monastici [A.D. 1-1432], ed. H. R. Luard. Rolls Series. 5 vols. London, 1864-69.

Vol. i. Annals of Margam, Tewkesbury, and Burton.

Vol. ii. Annals of Winchester and Waverley.

Vol. iii. Annals of Dunstable and Bermondsey.

Vol. iv. Annals of Osney and Worcester; and Wykes's Chronicle.

Vol. v. Index and glossary.

This collection comprises the most important monastic annals (of the second type described above, p. 327) written in the 13th century. Each work contains the annals of a monastery interwoven with general history. The collection is of great value for the political history of the 13th century, especially for the relations of the barons to Henry III.

1665. Chronica monasterii S. Albani [A.D. 793-1488], ed. H. T. Riley. Rolls Series. 12 vols. London, 1863-76.

Contains Walsingham's Historia Anglicana, 2 vols., his Ypodigma Neustriæ, 1 vol., and his Gesta Abbatum, 3 vols.; Rishanger and two anonymous chronicles (Nos. 1681, 1699), 1 vol.; Trokelowe, Blaneford, the Opus Chronicorum, and Annales Ricardi II. et Henrici IV., 1 vol.; Amundesham's Annales and an anonymous chronicle (No. 1679), 2 vols.; and Registra Abbatum (No. 2405), 2 vols. This collection comprises the principal chroniclers of St. Albans, except Wendover and Paris, and the Chronicon Angliæ (No. 1745).

1665a. Chronicles of London, ed. C. L. Kingsford. Oxford, 1905. 4<sup>20</sup>

Three English chronicles, 1189-1432, 1415-43, 1440-1516. Meagre down to the reign of Richard II. Contains some valuable notices of events in the 15th century. See also his Historical Literature (Oxford, 1913), 70-112, 292-8; and his paper in the English Historical Review, 1914, xxix. 505-15.

1666. Chronicles of the reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1882-83.

Vol. i. Annales Londonienses and Annales Paulini.

Vol. ii. Commendatio lamentabilis Edwardi I.; Gesta Edwardi de Carnarvan; the anonymous Vita Edwardi II.; and 'More's' Vita et mors Edwardi II.

1667. Chronicles of the reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., ed. Richard Howlett. Rolls Series. 4 vols. London, 1884-89.

Vol. i. William of Newburgh's history, bks. i.-iv.

Vol. ii. The same, bk. v., with a continuation to 1298; and the Draco Normannicus of Etienne de Rouen.
Vol. iii. Gesta Stephani; the chron-ron- Vol. iv. Robert of Torigni.

icle of Richard of Hexham; Aelred of Rievaulx's Relatio de standardo; the chronicles of Jordan Fantosme and Richard of Devizes. 1668. Chronicles of the white rose of York: a series of fragments, proclamations, letters, and other contemporary documents relating to the reign of Edward IV. [ed. J. A. Giles]. London, 1845.

Fragment of an old English chronicle, 1-30.

History of the arrival of Edward IV., 31-96.

Warkworth's Chronicle, 97-142. Proclamations, etc., of Richard III. (1483), 269-82.

The three English chronicles in this collection, which are here presented in modern orthography, were written by eye-witnesses of the events narrated. They are not well edited.

1669. Historical collections of a citizen of London in the fifteenth century, ed. James Gairdner. Camden Soc. London, [1876].

Page's poem on the siege of Rouen, 1-46.

England, 47-54. Gregory's Chronicle, 55-239.

Lydgate's verses on the kings of These three pieces are taken from a fifteenth-century commonplace-book of a citizen of London; perhaps it was made by William Gregory, skinner, who was mayor of London in 1451.

1670. Memorials of Henry V., ed. C. A. Cole. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

Redman's Vita, 1-59. Versus in laudem regis, 61-75. Elmham's Liber metricus, 77-165.

1671. Scriptores rerum gestarum Willelmi Conquestoris, ed. J. A. Giles. Caxton Soc. London, 1845.

Brevis relatio, 1-23. Guy of Amiens, 27-51. William of Poitiers, 77-159. Annalis historia brevis, 161-74. Chrestien de Troyes, 179-269. Le dit de Guillaume, 270-97.

1671a. Six town chronicles of England, ed. Ralph Flenley. Oxford, 1911.

Portions of five chronicles of London and one of Lynn, 15th century. At pp. 96-98 Flenley prints a list of the London chronicles: Cf. a supplementary note by G. Baskerville, in English Historical Review, 1913, xxviii. 124-7.

1672. Three fifteenth-century chronicles, ed. James Gairdner. Camden Soc. [London], 1880.

A short English chronicle, 1-80: No. 1738.

Historical memoranda (Cade's proclamation, list of lords serving under Edward III. at the siege of Calais, 1346-47, etc.), 81-147. Brief notes (a Latin chronicle, 1422-62), 148-63: No. 1825. A brief Latin chronicle, 1429-71,

b. ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF CHRONICLERS.

In the following list, when two or more editions of a chronicle are given, the best edition is usually mentioned first. The chronicles are Latin, unless otherwise stated. For various brief 'Annales' not included in this list, see No. 586. For other French chroniclers besides those mentioned below, see Potthast and Monod (Nos. 25, 31), and especially Molinier (No. 30a).

1673. Abbreviata cronica, 1377–1469, ed. J. J. Smith. Cambridge Antiq. Soc. Cambridge, etc., 1840. pp. 21.

Brief historical notes, seemingly written by John Herrison, who was chancellor of the university of Cambridge in 1465.

1674. Abbreviatio chronicorum Angliæ [1000–1255], ed. Frederic Madden, Matthæi Parisiensis Historia Anglorum, iii. 151–348. Rolls Series. London, 1869.—Excerpts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 443–55. Hanover, 1888.

Written at St. Albans, and ascribed by Madden to Matthew Paris. Probably it was not his work, but the anonymous author borrowed much from Paris. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, iii. 140-41.

1675. Account of the first battle of St. Albans [1455], from a contemporary manuscript, ed. John Bayley. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xx. 519-23. London, 1824.

Written in English.

1676. AGNELLUS, THOMAS (fl. 1183). De morte et sepultura Henrici regis junioris [1183], ed. Joseph Stevenson, Radulphi de Coggeshall Chronicon Anglicanum, 263-73. Rolls Series. London, 1875.

Stevenson calls it 'a contemporary account of an event which deeply moved the feelings of England and France at the time when it occurred, and exercised no trifling influence upon the history of these two kingdoms.' The tract eulogises the young king. The author was archdeacon of Wells.

1677. AMBROSE (fl. 1195). L'estoire de la guerre sainte 1190-92 [with a translation], ed. Gaston Paris. Documents Inédits. Paris, 1897.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 532-46. Hanover, 1885.

A history of the third crusade, written in French verse in 1195 or 1196 by Ambrose, who seems to have been a jongleur of Evreux. He took part in the crusade. The Itinerarium Regis Ricardi is closely connected with this poem: see No. 1803. See also Gaston Paris, Le Roman de Richard Cœur de Lion, in Romania, 1897, xxvi. 353-93.

1678. AMIENS, GUY OF (d. circa 1075). De bello Hastingensi carmen auctore W[idone], in Petrie's Monumenta, 856-72. London, 1848.—Reprinted in app. C to the Report on Rymer's Fœdera (No. 2099), 73-86.—Other editions: in Michel's Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, iii. 1-38, Rouen, 1840; Giles's Scriptores (No. 1671), 27-51, London, 1845.

This anonymous poem, probably written by Guy, bishop of Amiens, and completed about 1068, affords valuable information concerning the battle of Hastings and concerning events in England for about four months after the battle.

1679. AMUNDESHAM, JOHN. Annales monasterii S. Albani, 1421-40, quibus præfigitur Chronicon rerum gestarum in monasterio S. Albani, 1422-31, a quodam auctore ignoto compilatum, ed. H. T. Riley. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1870-71.

These annals, probably written before 1452, give some information concerning the current events of the day, but are devoted mainly to the affairs of the abbey. Amundesham was a monk of St. Albans concerning whose life little is known.

✓ 1680. Anglo-Saxon chronicle, to 1154. See No. 1349. Valuable for the years 1066-1154.

1681. Annales Angliæ et Scotiæ [1292-1300], ed. H. T. Riley, Willelmi Rishanger Chronica, etc. (No. 1836), 371-408. Rolls Series. London, 1865.—Brief extract, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 525-6. Hanover, 1888.

These annals, written at St. Albans, were used in the compilation of Rishanger's chronicle. Bale probably erred in asserting that Rishanger wrote them; they were perhaps penned by the same hand as the Opus Chronicorum (No. 1826), and were probably intended as a continuation of the Annales Regni Scotiæ (No. 1699).

- 1682. Annales Cambriæ, to 1288. See No. 1351.
- 1683. Annales Cestrienses, or chronicle of the abbey of S. Werburg at Chester [A.D. 1-1297, with a translation], ed. R. C. Christie. Record Soc. for Lanc. and Chesh. [London], 1887.

Probably written at Chester under the direction of Abbot Simon of Whitchurch (d. 1290) and completed after his death. The work deals mainly with the affairs of the kingdom. Much seems to be derived from Matthew Paris, but most of the entries from 1250 onward are original. The author favours the cause of Simon de Montfort. For a collation of Christie's text with the Lichfield MS., see Reports of the Historical MSS. Commission, 1895, xiv. pt. viii. 206-11. On St. Werburgh's, see No. 2290.

1684. Annales de Margan sive Chronica abbreviata [1066–1232], ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, i. 1–40. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Another edition (bad), in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 1–19. Oxford, 1687.—Extracts, 1084–1229, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 428–30. Hanover, 1885.

Written in the 13th century. Contain many notices of public events relating to England and Wales. The portion 1066-1147 is meagre, and is derived mainly from William of Malmesbury.

1685. Annales de Monte Fernandi: annals of Multifernan, A.D. 45-1274, ed. Aquilla Smith. Irish Archæol. Soc., Tracts relating to Ireland, vol. ii. [no. 2] 1-26. Dublin, 1843 [1842].

Although these annals record few facts relating to the history of Ireland which are not found elsewhere, 'they claim some degree of attention from their antiquity, and are perhaps the most ancient annals of this country written exclusively in the Latin language.' It is not certain that they were compiled in the monastery of Multifernan. Ware conjectured that the author was Stephen of Exeter (b. 1246).

1686. Annales Dorenses [A.D. I-1283, with a continuation to 1362], ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 514-31. Hanover, 1885.

Pauli edits only extracts, A.D. 687-1362. These annals of the abbey of Dore, Herefordshire, deal with the general history of England. The chief sources of the original work, to 1283, are Robert of Torigni, the Annals of Margam, and the Annals of Tewkesbury.

1687. Annales Furnesienses [1199–1298], ed. Richard Howlett, Willelmi de Novoburgo Historia Rerum Anglicarum, ii. 501–83. Rolls Series. London, 1885.—Extracts, 1252–98, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 557–9. Hanover, 1888.

A continuation of William of Newburgh's history, written in Furness abbey late in the 13th century. From 1202 to 1271 it is derived mainly from the Annales Stanleienses (No. 1703).

1688. Annales Hiberniæ, 1162-1370, ed. J. T. Gilbert, Chartularies of St. Mary's Abbey, Dublin, ii. 303-98. Rolls Series. London, 1884.—First printed in Camden's Britannia, 794-832. London, 1607.—For a translation, see No. 343.

This work has been ascribed to Christopher Pembridge of Dublin  $(\beta, 1370)$ , but the author and the time of compilation are unknown. Gilbert calls it 'the chief authority on the affairs of the English settlement in Ireland to the year 1370.' These annals agree in substance with the corresponding years of James Grace's Annales Hiberniæ, edited, with a translation, by Richard Butler for the Irish Archæological Society, Dublin, 1842. Both works may have been taken from a common original. Grace compiled his annals between 1537 and 1539; from 1370 to 1536 they consist mainly of obits of the Lacys, Burkes, Butlers, and Fitzgeralds.

1689. Annales Hiberniæ ex libro Rossensi, ed. Richard Butler, The Annals of Ireland, by John Clyn and Thady Dowling, 41–46. Irish Archæol. Soc. Dublin, 1849.

This fragment of the Annals of Ross contains brief notices relating to the history of Ireland, 1265-1480.

1690. Annales Londonienses [1194-1330], ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., i. 1-251. Rolls Series. London, 1882.—Extracts, 1195-1301, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 552-4. Hanover, 1888.

In large part an abridgment of the Flores Historiarum (No. 1774) to 1301. The account of the general history of England, 1301-16, is valuable. The narrative from 1316 to 1330 relates mainly to the civil history of London. The work was written by a citizen of London who had easy access to the records of the corporation, perhaps by Andrew Horne, chamberlain of the city (d. 1328).

1691. Annales monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042-1432, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, iii. 421-87. Rolls Series. London, 1866.

This work, compiled circa 1433, deals mainly with the affairs of the priory of Bermondsey, but it devotes some attention to general history, and is of some value for the reigns of Henry IV. and Henry V. The chief source of the earlier portion is the Flores Historiarum (No. 1774).

1692. Annales monasterii de Burton, 1004–1263, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, i. 181–510. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Another edition (bad), in Fulman's Scriptores, 246–448. Oxford, 1684.—Extracts, 1211–62, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 473–84. Hanover, 1885.

Written in the 13th century. The entries to 1188 are brief, and those from 1189 to 1201 are taken mainly from Hoveden. The part from 1211 to 1263 (chiefly a collection of documents connected by short notices of events concerning Burton and the kingdom) is particularly valuable. Luard calls it 'one of the most valuable collections of materials for the history of the time that we possess.' The most important part is that which relates to the Provisions of Oxford and to the barons' war, 1258-63.

1693. Annales monasterii de Oseneia, 1016–1347, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, iv. 1–352. Rolls Series. London, 1869.—Another edition of the years 1289–1307, in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 118–28. Oxford, 1687.—Extracts, 1133–1293, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 484–503. Hanover, 1885.

These annals, to 1258, have much in common with those of Thomas Wykes; from that year onward the former favour the barons, while Wykes is a strong royalist. Luard believes that Wykes used the early portion of the Osney annals, that this portion was compiled at Osney about 1233 mainly from Diceto and Florence of Worcester, and that thereafter the events were entered from year to year, as they occurred, until 1277. The bulk of the chronicle is an original authority for the general history of England from 1233 to 1293. The part 1293-1347 is taken from Higden and his continuator.

1694. Annales monasterii de Theokesberia, 1066–1263, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, i. 41–180. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Extracts, 1147–1258, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 464–70. Hanover, 1885.

Written in the 13th century. Meagre to the year 1200. Entries concerning general history are intermingled with notices of monastic affairs. There is a valuable account of the war between Henry III. and the barons, pp. 163-80; the chronicler favours the baronial cause.

1695. Annales monasterii de Waverleia, A.D. 1–1291, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, ii. 127–411. Rolls Series. London, 1865.—Another edition of the years 1066–1291 (bad), in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 129–243. Oxford, 1687.—Extracts, 1122–1291, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 458–64. Hanover, 1885.

The portion to 1157 is derived mainly from Sigebert of Gemblours, the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, and Robert of Torigni. After 1157 the annals are original, and from 1219 to 1266 they were written contemporaneously with the events described. Probably the entries for the years 1266-75 were taken from the Annals of Winchester (No. 1696). The Waverley chronicle forms one of the chief authorities for the reign of Henry III., especially for the events preceding and following the battle of Evesham. Much attention is also devoted to John's reign and to the history of the abbey.

1696. Annales monasterii de Wintonia, A.D. 519-1277, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, ii. 1-125. Rolls Series. London, 1865.—Extracts, in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, i. 288-314, London, 1691; and, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 452-8, Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 347-84. London, 1856.

The portion A.D. 519-1066 is derived from an unpublished chronicle, probably written by Richard of Devizes, preserved at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, the earlier part of which is taken from Geoffrey of Monmouth. From 1066 to 1266 the Winchester annalist obtains much of his material from William of Malmesbury and Matthew Paris. The full account of the events following the battle of Evesham, 1267-77, from the pen of a contemporary writer, is very valuable. The work also contains much information concerning the bishops of Winchester. Extracts from other Winchester annals, continued at Canterbury, 741-1179, are edited by Liebermann, Ungedruckte Anglo-Normannische Geschichtsquellen (No. 586), 56-83.

1697. Annales Paulini, ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., i. 253-370. Rolls Series. London, 1882.

An abridgment of the Flores Historiarum (No. 1774) to 1307, with a valuable continuation to 1341; compiled by some one connected with St. Paul's. Stubbs edits the continuation only. The work contains notices of public events and details concerning the history of London.

1698. Annales prioratus de Wigornia, A.D. I-1377, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, iv. 353-564. Rolls Series. London, 1869.—Extracts relating to the years 680-1308, in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, i. 467-530, London, 1691; and to 1165-1346, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 464-73, Hanover, 1885.

Down to 1303 these annals were written by a monk of Worcester early in the 14th century, and the work originally ended with the year 1308. The continuation to 1377 comprises only a few meagre entries. The Annals of Worcester contain notices of public events, and are also rich in material illustrating the history of the priory and diocese of Worcester. Luard believes that they 'will always rank very high as an authority for the latter years of the thirteenth century.'

1699. Annales regni Scotiæ [with a translation], ed. H. T. Riley, Willelmi Rishanger Chronica, etc., 233-368. Rolls Series. London, 1865.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 521-4. Hanover, 1888.

Deals with the disputes concerning the succession to the Scottish crown, 1291-92. This work, attributed to Rishanger by Bale and others, was probably compiled by Jean Erturi [i.e. son of Arthur] of Caen, a contemporary notary public. Most of it is written in French. For a continuation, see No. 1681.

1700. Annales Ricardi Secundi et Henrici Quarti regum Angliæ [1392-1406], ed. H. T. Riley, Johannis de Trokelowe Annales, 153-420. Rolls Series. London, 1866.

Perhaps compiled by William Wintershill, a monk of St. Albans, who died about 1424. Riley calls this work 'the most valuable memorial of the period that we possess.' The writer's sympathies are with the house of Lancaster.

1701. Annales S. Edmundi, A.D. 1–1212, ed. Felix Liebermann, Ungedruckte Anglo-Normannische Geschichtsquellen, 97–155. Strasburg, 1879.—Extracts, 1065–1212, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 426–7. Hanover, 1885.—See also No. 2628.

The part 1200-1212 (a contemporary record) is valuable for the general history of England.

1702. Annales S. Pauli Londoniensis [1064-1274], ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 548-51. Hanover, 1888.

These annals, from which Liebermann edits extracts, 1194-1274, give an accurate account of the barons' war in the reign of Henry III. The author, a member of the cathedral chapter, seems to have been an eye-witness of many of the events narrated from 1250 onward.

1703. Annales Stanleienses [from Brutus to 1271], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., ii. 506-58. Rolls Series. London, 1885.—Extracts, 1207-71, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 555-7. Hanover, 1888.

Howlett edits only the part 1202-71. The work seems to have been begun in Stanley about the middle of the 13th century. The author, who sympathises with the barons in their conflicts with John and Henry III., made use of Geoffrey of Monmouth, Coggeshall, and a lost chronicle of some value for the years 1204-14.

1704. Annalis historia brevis sive Chronica monasterii S. Stephani Cadomensis [A.D. 633-1293], ed. André Duchesne, Historiæ Normannorum Scriptores, 1015-21. Paris, 1619.— Reprinted in Maseres's Selecta Monumenta, 355-66, London, 1807; and in Giles's Scriptores (No. 1671), 161-74, London, 1845.

The chronicle of Caen contains brief notices of Norman and English affairs, especially from 1066 onward.

1705. Annals from the Book of Leinster, A.D. 457-1189, with a translation of the Irish, ed. Whitley Stokes, Tripartite Life of Patrick, 512-29. Rolls Series. London, 1887.

Written in the 12th century.

1706. [Annals of Boyle.] Annales Buelliani [from the creation to 1253 or 1257], ed. Charles O'Conor, Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores, ii. [pt. iv.] 1–48. Buckingham, 1825.

O'Conor edits only the part A.D. 420-1245, which deals mainly with the history of Ireland. The text is Irish interspersed with Latin. The time of compilation is unknown. O'Curry says that, 'as far as the annals themselves can show,' there is nothing to indicate that they are annals of Boyle except the words 'Annales Monasterii in Buellio in Hibernia,' written in the MS. by a modern hand. See Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials (No. 50), 81, 105-13.

1707. Annals of Clonmacnoise, to 1408, translated into English, ed. Denis Murphy. Royal Soc. of Antiq. of Ireland. Dublin, 1896.

This translation (completed in 1627) was made by Connell Mac Geoghegan of Lismoyne, in Westmeath. No extant copy of the Irish text is known. 'The records contained in it are brief, but they sometimes preserve details of singular interest, not to be found in any of our other annals': Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials, 131.

1708. [Annals of Innisfallen.] Annales Inisfalenses [from the creation to 1319], ed. Charles O'Conor, Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores, ii. [pt. ii.] 1-156, [pt. iii.] 1-83. Buckingham, 1825.

O'Conor edits only the part A.D. 428-1196. The text is Irish interspersed with Latin. The composition of a large portion of this valuable account of Irish history is usually ascribed to the year 1215, but it was probably begun two centuries earlier. See Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials, 75-81.

1709. Annals of Ireland, 1308-10, 1316-17, ed. J. T. Gilbert, Chartularies of St. Mary's Abbey, Dublin, ii. 293-302. Rolls Series. London, 1884.

A valuable fragment.

1710. Annals of Ireland, 1443-68. Translated from the Irish by Dudley Firbisse, or Duald MacFirbis, for Sir James Ware in 1666. [Edited by John O'Donovan.] Irish Archæol. Soc., Miscellany, i. 198-302. Dublin, 1846.

It is difficult to ascertain from what compilation MacFirbis made this translation.

1711. Annals of Loch Cé: a chronicle of Irish affairs, 1014-1590 [Irish text, with a translation], ed. W. M. Hennessy. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1871.

To 1220 the contents of this work and the Annals of Ulster are similar. 'In chronology as well as the general character, the Annals of Loch Cé resemble the Annals of Tigernach, the Annals of Ulster, and the Chronicon Scotorum; but they are much more copious in details of the affairs of Connacht than any of our other annals': Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials, 101; cf. ibid., 93-104.

1712. *Annals of the kingdom of Ireland, by the four masters, from the earliest period to 1616 [Irish text, with a translation], ed. John O'Donovan. 7 vols. Dublin, 1851. [Vols. iii.—v. of this edition were first published in 1848; vol. vii. is an index.]—Another edition of the part to 1171 (inaccurate), in O'Conor's Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores, vol. iii. Buckingham, 1824.

A digest of various old annals of Ireland, many of which have been lost. It was compiled in 1632-36, in the Franciscan monastery of Donegal, by Michael, Conary, and Cucogry O'Clery, and Ferfeasa O'Mulconry. Michael O'Clery was the most active of the compilers. Colgan first called them the Four Masters. O'Curry says that 'this magnificent compilation' will ever be regarded 'as affording a safe and solid foundation for the labours of future historians'; and Joyce, in his Short History of Ireland (No. 939), p. 31, calls O'Donovan's edition' the greatest and most important work on Ireland ever issued by any Irish publisher.' See Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials, 140-61.

1713. Annals of Ulster, otherwise Annals of Senat: a chronicle of Irish affairs, A.D. 431–1541 [Irish text, with a translation], ed. W. M. Hennessy (vols. ii.—iv. by B. MacCarthy). Published by the authority of the lords commissioners of her majesty's treasury. 4 vols. (vol. iv., introduction and index). Dublin, 1887–1901.— Another edition of the part to 1131 (very inaccurate), in O'Conor's Rerum Hibernicarum Scriptores, vol. iv. Buckingham, 1826.

Compiled on the island of Senait Mac Manus, now called Belle Isle, in Loch Erne, by Cathal Maguire, who died in 1498; continued to 1540 by Rory O'Cassidy, and afterwards by an unknown writer to 1604. The work relates more to the history of Ulster than to that of any of the other provinces of Ireland. For a severe criticism of the new edition, see Whitley Stokes, The Annals of Ulster, in Revue Celtique, 1897, xviii. 74-86. He says that 'the volumes here noticed are worse than worthless, as their existence will for years, perhaps for ever, preclude the publication of an accurate edition of one of the best documentary sources of the history of Ireland.'

See also Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials, 83-92. The language of the Annals is discussed by Tomás Ó Máille, in the Celtic series of the publications of the university of Manchester, 1910.

1714. Anominalle cronicle (Oute of an) belonginge to the abbey of St. Maries in Yorke, ed. G. M. Trevelyan. English Hist. Review, xiii. 509-22. London, 1898.—The 'anonimal chronicle of St. Mary's, York.' Translated by Charles [W. C.] Oman, The Great Revolt of 1381, pp. 186-205. Oxford, 1906.

An account of the rising of 1381, written in French in north England, as was at first supposed. From internal evidence, however, George Kriehn, in his paper in the American Historical Review, 1902, vii. 266-8, believes that it was written near London, by some one in the following of the king, not long after 1382. 'It contains a great deal of new matter, especially as regards the beginning of the rising in Essex and Kent.'

1715. ARNOLD, RICHARD (d. 1521). The customs of London, otherwise called Arnold's Chronicle. Reprinted from the first edition [circa 1502], with the additions included in the second [circa 1520]. [Edited by Francis Douce.] London, 1811.

Contains a list of mayors and sheriffs, with brief historical notes, 1189-1520. The bulk of the work is a collection of charters, municipal regulations, and other documents relating chiefly to London in the 14th and 15th centuries. It was first called Arnold's 'Chronicle' by Thomas Hearne. Arnold was a citizen of London.

1716. AVESBURY, ROBERT OF (d. before 1359). De gestis mirabilibus regis Edwardi Tertii [to 1356], ed. E. M. Thompson. Rolls Series. London, 1889.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, Oxford, 1720.

Deals especially with the military history of Edward III.'s reign, 1339-56; contains many valuable documents. Avesbury was registrar of the court of the archbishop of Canterbury. Particulars of his life are not known, save that his will was enrolled in 1359.

1717. BAKER, GEOFFREY LE (d. 1358-60). Chronicon Galfridi le Baker de Swynebroke [1303-56], ed. E. M. Thompson. Oxford, 1889.—Another edition, by J. A. Giles, Caxton Soc., London, 1847.

Relies mainly on Adam of Murimuth down to 1341, but gives much information not found elsewhere. The life of Edward II. ascribed to Thomas de la More (No. 1820) is an extract from Baker's Chronicon. In 1347 Baker also wrote a worthless Chroniculum, extending from the creation to 1336, which Thompson edits with the Chronicon, pp. 156-75. Swinbroke, Oxfordshire, seems to have been Baker's native place, and he was a secular clerk.

1718. BARBOUR, JOHN (d. 1395). The Bruce, or the book of Robert de Broyss, king of Scots [1286-1332], ed. W. W. Skeat. Scottish Text Soc. 2 vols. Edinburgh, etc., 1894. [This is mainly a reprint of the edition prepared by Skeat for the Early English Text Society, 1870-89.]—The Bruce, ed. W. M. Mackenzie. London, 1909.—For other editions, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 133, and Skeat's edition of 1894, vol. i. preface.

This English poem, completed, as Neilson points out, in 1376, is a national epic, which gives an account of the Scotch war of independence and narrates the deeds of King Robert I. of Scotland. Barbour was archdeacon of Aberdeen and an auditor of the exchequer of Scotland. See J. T. T. Brown, The Wallace and the Bruce Restudied (Bonner Beiträge zur Anglistik, no. vi.), Bonn, 1900; George Neilson, John Barbour, Poet and Translator, London, 1900, pp. 57.

1719. BERRY, Hérault du Roy (d. circa 1457). Le recouvrement de Normendie [French text, with a translation], ed. Joseph Stevenson, Narratives of the Expulsion of the English from Normandy, 1449–50, pp. 239–376. Rolls Series. London, 1863.—Translation [by Joseph Stevenson]: The recovery of Normandy from the English in 1449, ed. Edmund Goldsmid, Collectanea Adamantæa, vol. xx. 2 vols. in 1. Edinburgh, 1887. pp. 54+38.

Berry's real name was Gilles le Bouvier. He was king-at-arms of Charles VII. for the district of Berry. For his other works, see Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 4134.

1720. BEVERLEY, ALURED [or ALFRED] OF. Annales sive Historia de gestis regum Britanniæ [from Brutus to 1129], ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1716.

A worthless compilation, taken mainly from Geoffrey of Monmouth and Simeon of Durham; written seemingly soon after 1143. The author was sacristan of the church of Beverley. The time of his death is unknown.

1721. BLAKMAN, JOHN. De virtutibus et miraculis Henrici VI., ed. Thomas Hearne, in his edition of Otterbourne (No. 1827), 285-307. Oxford, 1732.

An interesting characterisation of Henry VI., written by a Carthusian who flourished during that king's reign.

Another edition, with Trokelowe's Annals, by Thomas Hearne, Oxford, 1729.

A fragment of a larger chronicle, written soon after 1330 and probably intended as a continuation of Trokelowe's Annals. It is important for the reign of Edward II. The author was a monk of St. Albans of whose life we have no particulars.

1723. BLONDEL, ROBERT (d. circa 1461). De reductione Normanniæ, ed. Joseph Stevenson, Narratives of the Expulsion of the English from Normandy, 1449–50, pp. 1–238. Rolls Series. London, 1863.—Another edition, by Alexandre Héron, Œuvres de Robert Blondel, vol. ii. Société de l'Histoire de Normandie. Rouen, 1893.

A trustworthy account of the expulsion of the English from Normandy, in 1449-50. The author, a native of Normandy, was an ardent adherent of Charles VII. See Auguste Vallet de Viriville, Notice sur Robert Blondel, in Mémoires de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie, 1851, xix. 161-226.

1724. Book of Howth, ed. J. S. Brewer and William Bullen, Calendar of Carew MSS., [v.] 1–260. Rolls Series. London, 1871.

Called the Book of Howth because it used to be in the possession of the family of Howth. It was compiled by various unknown writers, one of whom was perhaps Richard Howth (d. 1554). It is a chronicle of Irish affairs, circa A.D. 330-1579, written in English. The authorities used were Bede, Giraldus Cambrensis, Higden, Fabyan, etc.; the part dealing with the conquest of Ireland seems to be taken mainly from an early translation of the Expugnatio of Giraldus Cambrensis. The work is chiefly valuable for 'the traditional anecdotes and personal notices contained in it.' See J. H. Round, Commune of London (No. 2826a), 146-9.

1725. Bray, Thomas. The English conquest of Ireland, 1166-85: a parallel text, ed. F. J. Furnivall. Pt. i.: Text. Early English Text Soc. London, 1896.—Another edition, by J. S. Brewer and William Bullen, Calendar of Carew MSS., [v.] 261-317. Rolls Series. London, 1871.

Probably copied, in large part, from an early English translation of the Expugnatio Hibernica of Giraldus Cambrensis. Bray seems to have lived in the 15th century: Tanner, Bibliotheca (No. 52), 122.

1726. Brevis relatio de origine Willelmi, ed. J. A. Giles, Scriptores Rerum Gestarum Willelmi Conquestoris, 1–23. Caxton Soc. London, 1845.—Another edition, by Silas Taylor, History of Gavelkind, 185–209. London, 1663.

'This account, though brief, is apparently truthful.' It seems to have been written in the reign of Henry I.

1727. BROMPTON, JOHN (fl. 1437). Chronicon, A.D. 588–1198 [1199], ed. Roger Twysden, Scriptores X., 721–1284. London, 1652.

An untrustworthy chronicle, made up of extracts from Bede, Henry of Huntingdon, Higden, and other well-known sources. It is not certain that Brompton wrote it. He was elected abbot of Jervaulx in 1437. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 539-41.

1727a. Brut (The), or Chronicles of England. See No. 1733.

1728. *Brut y tywysogion [Welsh text, A.D. 660-1282], ed. Owen Jones. Myvyrian Archaiology of Wales, ii. 391-582, London, 1801; 2nd edition, pp. 602-51, 685-715, Denbigh, 1870.—The part A.D. 681-1066, with a translation [ed. Aneurin Owen], in Petrie's Monumenta, 841-55. London, 1848.—Brut y tywysogion, or the chronicle of the princes [A.D. 681-1282, with a translation], ed. John Williams ab Ithel. Rolls Series. London, 1860. [Badly edited.]—Extracts, with Latin translation, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 444-8. Hanover, 1885.—Brut y tywysogion: the Gwentian chronicle of Caradoc of Llancarvan, with a translation [A.D. 660-1196], ed. Aneurin Owen. Cambrian Archæol. Assoc. London, 1863.—Best edition of the Welsh text, A.D. 680-1282, ed. John Rhys and J. G. Evans, in The Red Book of Hergest, vol. ii.: The Text of the Bruts from the Red Book, 257-384. Oxford, 1890.

One of the chief authorities for Welsh history. Down to 1120 it may be a Welsh translation of the lost Latin chronicle compiled by Caradoc of Llancarvan, who died about the middle of the 12th century. The earlier portion, to 954, was probably based on the Annales Cambriæ (No. 1351). The various MSS. end at different periods. From about A.D. 1100 onward the work seems to be contemporary with the events narrated. It was perhaps compiled in the abbey of Strata Florida. The Gwentian Brut is a quite different document from the Bruts in the Rolls Series and the Red Book. It is fuller, of later date, and entirely unauthentic. For a valuable paper on the Brut y Tywysogion, see Egerton Phillimore's Publication of Welsh Historical Records, Soc. of Cymmrodorion, Y Cymmrodor, 1892, xi. 133-75. For notes on the MSS., and for a continuation to 1332, see Historical MSS. Commission, Report on MSS. in the Welsh Language, 1899, i. pt. ii. 341-6.

The Brut y Saeson, or Chronicle of the Saxons, A.D. 800-1382, is a summary or corrupted version of the Brut y Tywysogion. It is printed in The Text of the Bruts, ed. Rhys and Evans, ii. 385-403; also in No. 584a.

1729. Burton, Thomas of (d. 1437). Chronica monasterii de Melsa [1150–1396, with a continuation to 1406], ed. E. A. Bond. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1866–68.

'A faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, its progress . . . and its relations to the governing institutions of the country'; compiled after 1399. In his account of each abbot's rule, Burton treats of the affairs of the abbey of Melsa, or Meaux, and then reviews the leading events of English history. Much of this general history is taken from Higden's Polychronicon. With the reign of Edward I. the narrative of public affairs expands, and the portions concerning the relations of England to Scotland are of some value. Burton was abbot of Meaux, 1396-99.

1730. CANTERBURY, GERVASE OF (d. circa 1210). The historical works of Gervase of Canterbury, ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1879–80.

Chronica, 1135-99, preceded by a brief account of the years 1100-1135, i. 84-594. Another edition, in Twysden's Scriptores X., 1652, pp. 1289-1628; extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 297-308. The author used Henry of Huntingdon, Benedict of Peterborough, the biographies of Becket, etc. The work is of some value for the reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I. The portion 1170-99 deals mainly with ecclesiastical affairs. The earlier part (ed. Stubbs, i. 29-38) contains the Imaginationes, or statements of the case of each side in the disputes between the archbishop and the monks of St. Augustine, Canterbury, 1178-91.

Gesta regum, from Brutus to 1210, with a continuation to 1328, ii. 3-324. Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores, xxvii. 308-15. Valuable for the reign of John. The part to 1135 is drawn mainly from Geoffrey of Monmouth and William of Malmesbury, and this is followed by an abstract of Gervase's Chronica, 1135-99.

Actus pontificum Cantuariensis ecclesiæ, A.D. 597-1205, ii. 325-414. Another edition, in Twysden's Scriptores X., 1652, pp. 1629-84; extract, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores, xxvii. 315. Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. v. pt. i., London, 1858. A standard authority on the history of the archbishopric.

Mappa mundi, ii. 414-49: a survey of the counties of England (lists of bishoprics, religious houses, castles, etc.). This work is now of little value.

In his writings Gervase exhibits much dislike of the Plantagenet kings. Though of some importance, he is not a chronicler of the first rank. He became a monk of Christ church, Canterbury, in 1163, and he was sacristan of the convent in 1193.

[from the creation to 1417], ed. F. C. Hingeston. Rolls Series. London, 1858.—Liber de illustribus Henricis, ed. F. C. Hingeston.

Rolls Series. London, 1858. Translated by F. C. Hingeston: The book of the illustrious Henries. London, 1858.

Both works are badly edited. The Chronicle of England is written in English; Capgrave was engaged in compiling it at the time of his death. The other work, completed between 1446 and 1453, is a collection of memoirs of German emperors, A.D. 918-1198, English kings, 1100-1446, and other illustrious men who had borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world, 1031-1406. The portion relating to Henry VI. is a contemporary record, but it consists mainly of 'pious ejaculations' in praise of the king. The chapters relating to the other Henries of England are derived from well-known chroniclers (Henry of Huntingdon, Higden, etc.). Capgrave was an Augustinian friar of Lynn.

1732. CASE, THOMAS. Annales monasterii beatæ Mariæ virginis, juxta Dublin [A.D. 1-1405], ed. J. T. Gilbert, Chartularies of St. Mary's Abbey, Dublin, ii. 241-92. Rolls Series. London, 1884.

Completed in 1427. Devotes much attention to the history of England and Ireland. The information is drawn from Henry of Huntingdon, Giraldus Cambrensis, and other chroniclers.

1732a. CASTELFORD, THOMAS. Chronicum Brittanicum versibus anglicis conscriptum ab antiquissimis temporibus usque ad Edwardum II. incl.

This chronicle, though unprinted, is described with considerable fulness by M. L. Perrin, Ueber T. Castelford's Chronik von England, Boston, 1890 (reprinted 1891), pp. 47. It follows Geoffrey of Monmouth, and Wace, and seems to have been finished about 1327. Castelford was a monk of Pontefract. See R. H. Fletcher, The Arthurian Material in the Chronicles, in Studies and Notes in Philology and Literature, 1906, x. 202-3.

1733. CAXTON, WILLIAM (d. 1491). The chronicles of England. London, 1480.—Other editions: London, 1482; St. Albans, [1483]; Antwerp, 1493; London, 1497, 1502, 1504, 1510, 1515, 1520, 1528.—Best edition: The Brut, or the Chronicles of England, ed. F. W. D. Brie. Pts. i.—ii. Early English Text Soc. London, 1906—08.—See No. 1743.

Down to 1333 this chronicle is 'a mere translation of the French Brut d'Engleterre,' and has no historical value. After 1333 there are several original English continuations, some of which are after 1377 quite independent of one another and have a certain value as contemporary accounts. The compilation, which was well known in the 15th century under the title Chronicle of Brute (because it began with Brutus), is also called the Chronicles of St. Albans, and Caxton's Chronicle, having been printed by Caxton from a copy in which the narrative is continued to 1460. Caxton was a mercer of London who introduced the printing-press into England. See William Blades, Life and Typography of Caxton, 2 vols., London, 1861-63, and his Biography and Typography of Caxton, London, 1877 (2nd edition, 1882); E. G. Duff, William Caxton, Chicago, 1905, pp. 118, and his Printers, Stationers, and Bookbinders of London and Westminster in the Fifteenth Century [1476-1500], Aberdeen, 1899, pp. 126 (reprinted, with succeeding lectures that carry the subject to 1535, Cambridge, 1906); Frederic Madden, The Ancient English Romance of Havelok the Dane, pp. xxv.-xxviii., Roxburghe Club, London, 1828; Paul Meyer, De quelques Chroniques Anglo-Normandes qui ont porté le Nom de Brut, in Bulletin de la Société des Anciens Textes Français, 1878, pp. 104-45. On the Chronicle of Brute, see also Hardy's edition of Waurin (No. 1863), vol. i. pp. lxi.-lxxiii.; and particularly Brie's Geschichte und Quellen der Prosachronik 'The Brute of England,' Marburg, 1905 (an abstract of what will appear as the 'final introduction,' or pt. iii., of his edition of The Brut). As Caxton made no addition to the text of the Brut, his 'Chronicle' has nothing to do with his continuation of Higden to 1460 (No. 1793, Lumby's edition, viii. 522-87).

1734. CHANDOS. Life of the Black Prince by the herald of Sir John Chandos. Edited [with a prose translation] by M. K. Pope and E. C. Lodge. Oxford, 1910.—The Black Prince, an historical poem written in French, with a translation, ed. H. O. Coxe. Roxburghe Club. London, 1842.—Le Prince Noir, poème du héraut d'armes Chandos [with a translation], ed. Francisque Michel. London, etc., 1883.

Written about 1386; of special value for the Black Prince's Castilian expedition. The author appears to have been an eye-witness of many of the events which he narrates. He was the herald of Sir John Chandos, constable of Aquitaine. Michel plagiarised from the work of Coxe.

1735. Chronica de Mailros [A.D. 731–1275, ed. Joseph Stevenson]. Bannatyne Club. Edinburgh, 1835.—Another edition, in Fulman's Scriptores, 135–244. Oxford, 1684.—Extracts, 813–1264, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 432–42. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 79–242: Chronicle of Melrose. London, 1856.

The part to 1129, derived mainly from Simeon of Durham, was compiled soon after 1236 by a monk of Melrose, and the work was continued by other monks of that abbey. After the middle of the 12th century it is an original authority, and much of the information is contemporaneous. It is most useful for its notices of Scotland and northern England, especially in the reign of Henry III.

1736. Chronica minor S. Benedicti de Hulmo [from the earliest times to 1294, with a continuation to 1503], ed. Henry Ellis, Chronica Johannis de Oxenedes, 412-39. Rolls Series. London, 1859.

Brief annals of the monastery of St. Benet, Holme, Norfolk; many of the notices relate to general history.

1737. Chronicle (A brief Latin), 1429-71, ed. James Gairdner, Three Fifteenth-Century Chronicles, 164-85. Camden Soc. [London], 1880.

A contemporary record for the reign of Edward IV., especially valuable for the years  $r_46r_{-64}$ .

1738. Chronicle (A short English): Cronycullys of Englonde, ed. James Gairdner, ibid., 1-80. Camden Soc. [London], 1880.

Comprises three short chronicles, written or transcribed by the same pen soon after 1465. The first is a brief abridgment of the Chronicle of Brute (No. 1733) to 1 Henry IV. Then come Lydgate's verses on the kings of England. Finally, we have one of the regular London city chronicles, 1189-1465, the latter part of which (i.e. 1450-65) 'has all the value of an original and independent authority for the reigns of Henry VI. and Edward IV.' A new edition of Lydgate's poems is being edited for the Early English Text Society by H. N. MacCracken (pt. i., 1911).

1739. Chronicle of London, 1089-1483. London, 1827.

According to the Catalogue of the Library of the British Museum, this work was edited by Edward Tyrrell and N. H. Nicolas. The chronicle originally ended in 1442, about which time it was compiled; a later hand continued it to 1483. It is a London city chronicle, written in English, but it deals mainly with the history of the kingdom.

1740. Chronicle of the grey friars of London [1189–1556], ed. J. G. Nichols. Camden Soc. [London], 1852.—A better edition, by Richard Howlett, Monumenta Franciscana, ii. 143–260. Rolls Series. London, 1882.

Forms a part of the register book of the London grey friars; written in English. It is a regular city chronicle, dealing with general and local history, but the names of the mayors of London are omitted in Nichols's edition. The medieval portion is meagre, and was probably compiled early in the 16th century.

1741. Chronicle of the monastery of Abingdon, 1218-1304 [Latin text, with a translation], ed. J. O. Halliwell. Berkshire Ashmolean Soc. Reading, 1844. pp. 69.

Comprises additions made to a copy of Hemingburgh's Chronicle which used to belong to the monastery of Abingdon and which is now in the University library, Cambridge. For a more valuable chronicle of Abingdon, A.D. 201-1189, see No. 1358.

1742. Chronicle of the rebellion in Lincolnshire, 1470, ed. J. G. Nichols. Camden Soc., Camden Miscellany, vol. i. [London], 1847. pp. 28.

Written in English. Nichols says that it 'evidently proceeded from one who wrote under the immediate influence of the royal authority and had consequently the best means of information.'

1743. Chronicle (An English) of the reigns of Richard II., Henry IV., Henry V., and Henry VI. [1377-1461], ed. J. S. Davies. Camden Soc. [London], 1856.

A continuation of the Chronicle of Brute (No. 1733); compiled between 1461 and 1471. Of some value for the reign of Henry VI., especially for Cade's rebellion. The author was an ardent Yorkist.

1744. Chronicon abbatiæ de Parco Ludæ: the chronicle of Louth Park abbey [1066-1413]. Edited by Edmund Venables, with a translation by A. R. Maddison. Lincolnsh. Record Soc. Horncastle, 1891. pp. 85.

Probably compiled in the reign of Henry VI.; deals with general history. The appendix contains a 'compotus' roll (seemingly of the 15th century), charters, and other records, circa 1200-1614.

1745. Chronicon Angliæ, 1328-88, auctore monacho quodam Sancti Albani, ed. E. M. Thompson. Rolls Series. London, 1874.—The part 1376-77, translated by John Stow, ed. Thomas Amyot: Transcript of a chronicle entitled An historical relation of certain passages about the end of Edward III. and of his death. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxii. 204-84. London, 1829.

The account of the years 1376-77 is very detailed and valuable, and was probably written by a contemporary monk of St. Albans. Certain other portions of the chronicle may have been written by Walsingham. The author bitterly assails the duke of Lancaster and the Lollards.

1746. Chronicon Angliæ (Incerti scriptoris) de regnis Henrici IV., Henrici V. et Henrici VI. [1399-1455], ed. J. A. Giles. [Half-title: Chronicon Angliæ temporibus Ricardi II., Henrici IV., Henrici V. et Henrici VI.] London, 1848.

Valuable for the reign of Henry IV. Giles omits pt. i., which is identical with Hearne's edition of Vita Ricardi II. (No. 1797). The part relating to Henry V. is identical with No. 1789. K. H. Vickers, in his Humphrey

Duke of Gloucester (London, 1907, p. 460), says that the most valuable chronicle in the collection is that of Henry VI., which was probably written by a contemporary.

1747. Chronicon Angliæ Petriburgense [A.D. 654-1368], ed. J. A. Giles. Caxton Soc. London, 1845.—Another edition, in Sparke's Scriptores, 1-137. London, 1723.

Compiled in the 14th century. Sparke, without good grounds, ascribes the latter part, circa 1260-1368, to Robert of Boston; and he prints the rest of the work under the name of John of Peterborough, though he seems inclined to attribute it to Abbot John Deeping, who died in 1439. There was no John, abbot of Peterborough, in the 14th century. The author used Hugh Candidus, Swaffham, Huntingdon, 'Ingulf,' and other pre-existing chroniclers. The work is of little historical value. See Felix Liebermann, Ueber Ostenglische Geschichtsquellen, in Neues Archiv der Gesellschaft für ältere Deutsche Geschichtskunde, 1892, xviii. 235-45.

For Peterborough chronicles dealing mainly with local history, see Nos. 2549, 2552.

1748. Chronicon Anglo-Scoticum [B.C. 60-A.D. 1189, with additions to 1355], ed. C. W. Bouterwek. Elberfeld, 1863. pp. 48.—Another edition: Chronicon cœnobii S. Crucis Edinburgensis [B.C. 60-A.D. 1163, by Robert Pitcairn]. Bannatyne Club. Edinburgh, 1828. pp. 34.—The part A.D. 596-1163, in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, i. 152-62. London, 1691.—Very brief extracts, 1084-1181, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 60. Hanover, 1885.—Translated, to 1163, by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 61-75: Chronicle of Holyrood. London, 1856.

The portion to 1189 seems to have been compiled late in the 12th century by an anonymous Scotch monk. To A.D. 731 it is derived from Bede; there is a gap from 735 to 1065, and then Simeon of Durham is abridged to 1129, with some additions. From 1129 to 1189 the notices, though brief, are valuable, and relate chiefly to Scotland and northern England. There are no entries for the years 1190-1285, and only a few scanty notes from 1286 to 1355.

1749. Chronicon de Lanercost, 1201-1346 [ed. Joseph Stevenson]. Bannatyne Club. Edinburgh, 1839.—Translated by Sir Herbert Maxwell: Chronicle of Lanercost [1272-1346]. Scottish Hist. Review, vols. vi.-x. passim. Glasgow, 1908-13. Published separately, with introduction by James Wilson, 1913.

Deals with the general history of England and Scotland, and favours English interests. The greater part of this valuable work seems to have been composed in the time of Edward I.; but, according to Stevenson, it was probably recast and continued by an anonymous Franciscan friar of Carlisle, who obtained much information concerning the reigns of the three Edwards from trustworthy eye-witnesses. Wilson, however, believes this to have been done by a canon of Lanercost. The part 1307-46 is important for the beginning of the Hundred Years' war.

1750. Chronicon (Anonymi) Godstovianum, ed. Thomas Hearne, William Roper's Vita Thomæ Mori, 180–246. Oxford, 1716.

Extends from the creation to 1431. It formerly belonged to the abbey of Godstow, near Oxford.

1751. Chronicon monasterii de Bello [ed. J. S. Brewer]. Anglia Christiana Soc. London, 1846.—Translated by M. A. Lower: The chronicle of Battel abbey, 1066-1176. London, etc., 1851.

Appears to have been written about 1176. Contains a brief account of the Norman Conquest, but the bulk of the chronicle relates to the history of the abbey, 1067-1176. See H. W. C. Davis's paper in English Historical Review, 1914, xxix. 426-34. For the fragment of another Chronicon de Bello, which is of some value for the barons' war (1258-65), see Bémont, Simon de Montfort, 373-80; and Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 554.

1752. Chronicon Scotorum: a chronicle of Irish affairs, from the earliest times to 1135, with [a translation of the Irish text and] a supplement, 1141-50, ed. W. M. Hennessy. Rolls Series. London, 1866.

This chronicle, which was compiled in the monastery of Clonmacnoise, gives many interesting notices not found in other Irish annals. The earlier portion contains much legendary matter; the later part devotes much attention to the invasions of foreigners and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The unknown compiler and Tigernach (No. 1377) seem to have transcribed many passages from a common original. See Eugene O'Curry, Lectures on MS. Materials (No. 50), 120-30; and MacCarthy (No. 1367).

1753. Chronique de la traïson et mort de Richard II., roi d'Engleterre [1397-1400, with a translation of the French text], ed. Benjamin Williams. English Hist. Soc. London, 1846.

The author, a native of France, sympathises with Richard II. The work, which was written before 1412, resembles Le Beau's Chronique de Richard II., and was in part derived from Creton's poem: see Nos. 1762, 1810. See also Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3988.

1753a. Chronique de Merton, 1066-1242, ed. Charles Petit-Dutaillis, Etude sur la Vie et le Règne de Louis VIII., 513-15. Paris, 1894.

Petit-Dutaillis prints only a fragment of this Latin chronicle,—an account, apparently by a contemporary, of Louis's expedition to England in 1216-17. See his introduction, pp. xxv.-xxvi.

1753b. Chronique de Richard Lescot, religieux de Saint-Denis, 1328-44, suivi de la continuation, 1344-64, ed. Jean Lemoine. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1896.

Itinéraires d'Edouard III. pendant ses expéditions en France, 1329-60.

pp. 203-9. The continuation is by another monk of Saint-Denis. For Lescot and his other writings, see Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3097.

1753c. Chronique des quatre premiers Valois, 1327-93, ed. Siméon Luce. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1862.—Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, 1343-1468, ed. Siméon Luce. Société des Anciens Textes Français. 2 vols. Paris, 1879-83.

The first chronicle, written by a Norman clerk who favoured the popular cause, is original for the wars of Normandy after 1350 only. The second one, which appears to consist of notes taken from day to day by various monks of the abbey, is in this edition valuable for English history chiefly by reason of the 300 documents, containing many acts of Henry VI. and his ministers, 1418-63, which Luce prints as an appendix that comprises the greater part of the work: Both chronicles are in French.

1754. Chronique du religieux de Saint-Denys, 1380-1422 [with a French translation of the Latin text], ed. Louis Bellaguet. Documents Inédits. 6 vols. Paris, 1839-52.—Translated by Jean Le Laboureur: Histoire de Charles VI. Paris, 1663.

Written by a contemporary of the events narrated, a secretary of Charles VI., who was in England in 1381. The work is valuable for the relations of England to France. Perhaps the author derived his information concerning Richard II. from Creton's poem (No. 1762). For the literature relating to this chronicle, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 313-14. See also Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3572; and No. 1810.

1754a. Chronique normande du xiv. siècle, ed. Auguste and Emile Molinier. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1882.

Valuable for the history of the Anglo-French wars of the 14th century, especially for 1337-72. Written in French by a noble Norman some time after 1372. It is incorporated, with numerous additions, in Chronique des Pays-Bas, de France, d'Angleterre, et de Tournai, ed. J. J. de Smet, Corpus Chronicorum Flandriæ (Brussels, 1856), iii. 111-570. See Molinier, Sources, iv. nos. 3100, 3949.

1755. CLYN, JOHN (d. circa 1349). Annales Hiberniæ ad annum 1349, ed. Richard Butler, Annals of Ireland, 1–39. Irish Archæol. Soc. Dublin, 1849.

A contemporary authority for the years 1315-49. The brief notes from the creation to 1315 are of little value. Clyn was a Franciscan friar of Kilkenny.

1756. *Coggeshall, Ralph of (d. circa 1227). Chronicon Anglicanum [1066–1223], ed. Joseph Stevenson. Rolls Series. London, 1875.—Other editions: by Edmond Martène and Ursin Durand, Veterum Scriptorum Collectio, v. 801–81, Paris, 1729; A. J. Dunkin, Radulphi Abbatis de Coggeshal Opera, 67–285, Noviomago, 1856.—Nearly the whole chronicle is also printed in Bouquet's Recueil des Historiens, xviii. 59–120, Paris, 1822; and there are extracts, edited by Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 344–58, Hanover, 1885.

The entries to 1186 are brief; from 1187 to 1223 they are fuller, and many of them are very valuable, especially for the reigns of John and Henry III. The part 1066-1154 seems to be compiled chiefly from Florence of Worcester or Henry of Huntingdon; the part 1187-95 was used by Roger of Wendover (No. 1864). Ralph was abbot of the Cistercian abbey of Coggeshall, 1207-18. See Reinhold Pauli, Geschichte von England (Hamburg, 1853), iii. 876-80.

1757. COMINES, PHILIPPE DE (d. 1511?). Mémoires [1464-98], ed. B[ernard] de Mandrot. 2 vols. Paris, 1901-03.—Mémoires, ed. L. M. E. Dupont. Société de l'Histoire de France. 3 vols. Paris, 1840-47.—Translation: The history of Comines, Englished by Thomas Danett anno 1596, ed W. E. Henley, The Tudor Translations, vols. xvii.-xviii. 2 vols. London, 1897.

Bks. iii.—iv. contain details regarding the accession of Edward IV. and his relations to France. The author, one of the greatest historians of France, was a Burgundian who left the service of the duke of Burgundy in 1472 and entered that of Louis XI. For other editions and translations besides those mentioned above, and for the modern literature relating to Comines, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 328–30; and Molinier, Sources, v. no. 4663. See also B. de Mandrot, L'Autorité Historique de Philippe de Commynes, in Revue Historique, 1900, lxxiii. 241–57, lxxiv. 1–38.

1758. Commendatio lamentabilis in transitu magni regis Edwardi, ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ii. 3-21. Rolls Series. London, 1883.

A sort of funeral sermon on the death of Edward I., probably written by John of London soon after July 7, 1307. The author eulogises the King.

1759. Continuatio Beccensis, 1157-60, ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iv. 317-27. Rolls Series. London, 1889.

A contemporary record, dealing mainly with the continental transactions of Henry II. For this and other continuations of Robert of Torigni, see Delisle's edition (No. 1848), ii. 137-80.

1760. *COTTON, BARTHOLOMEW (d. circa 1298). Historia Anglicana, A.D. 449–1298, necnon ejusdem Liber de archiepiscopis et episcopis Angliæ, ed. H. R. Luard. Rolls Series. London, 1859.

The Historia was begun in 1292. Bk. i. (De Regibus Britonum) is copied from Geoffrey of Monmouth, and is not printed by Luard. The part A.D. 449-1066 is mainly an abridgment of Henry of Huntingdon, and the entries from 1066 to 1291 are transcribed from the Annals of Norwich. From 1291 to 1298 the work is original and contemporaneous. Extracts from this part are edited by Liebermann in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 604-21. The above-mentioned Annals of Norwich, to 1263, are based mainly upon Matthew Paris, John of Wallingford, and Tayster; from 1264 onward this chronicle, with Cotton's continuation, is a contemporary authority of much importance, especially for the reign of Edward I. Extracts from it, 1074-1292, are edited by Liebermann, ibid., 600-603. A notable feature of this part of the work is the large number of papal bulls, royal letters, and other documents which it contains. The Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis is mainly an abridgment of William of Malmeshury's De Gestis Pontificum. The portion relating to the bishops of Norwich is also printed in Wharton's Auglia Sacra, i. 403-12. Cotton was a monk of the cathedral church of Norwich.

1761. *COVENTRY, WALTER OF. Memoriale fratris Walteri de Coventria: the historical collections of Walter of Coventry [from Brutus to 1225], ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1872–73.—A portion of the work is printed in Bouquet's Recueil des Historiens, xviii. 164–87, Paris, 1822; and extracts of the part 1202–25 are edited by Liebermann in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 183–90, Hanover, 1885.

Stubbs says that 'the book is one on which its creator has bestowed very, very little more than manual labour.' It was compiled between 1293 and 1307. The part down to the year 1201 is taken chiefly from Geoffrey of Monmouth, Florence of Worcester, Henry of Huntingdon, Benedict of Peterborough, and Hoveden. The entries from 1201 to 1225, which form a continuation of Hoveden and are derived from a chronicle of the monastery of Barnwell, are of great value for the study of John's reign; Stubbs regards them as the best source of information concerning the eventful years 1212-16. The Barnwell annals seem to have been drawn up about the year 1227 (perhaps at Crowland); after the middle of the 13th century they were incorporated in a compilation of historians made at Crowland or Peterborough, and from that compilation were transferred into the Memoriale. Luard, in his edition of Matthew Paris's Chronica Majora, vol. ii. p. xii., plausibly asserts that Walter of Coventry was probably not the author of this work, the title 'Memoriale' meaning simply that he left the book as a memorial to his monastery; but Stubbs believes that 'memoriale' means things worth remembering, or historical collections. Concerning Walter of Coventry almost nothing is known. Perhaps he was a monk of St. Mary's abbey, York, in the reign of Edward I.

1762. *CRETON, JEAN. Histoire du roy d'Angleterre Richard [II.], traictant particulièrement la rebellion de ses subiectz... [1399]; composée par un gentilhomme françois de marque, qui fut à la suite dudict roy [with a translation of the French text], ed. John Webb. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xx. 1-423. London, 1824.—Another edition: Poëme sur la déposition de Richard II., ed. J. A. [C.] Buchon, Collection des Chroniques Françaises, xxiv. 321-466. Paris, 1826.—Translation of a French metrical history of the deposition of Richard II. [a reprint of Webb's translation in Archæologia, vol. xx.]. London, 1899.

Buchon's edition is based on a better MS. than Webb's. Creton was an eye-witness of many of the events which he narrates, and his poem (seemingly written in 1401) is the chief authority for the last few months of Richard's reign. Like the author of the Chronique de la Traïson (No. 1753), Creton sympathises with Richard II., to whom he was warmly attached and whom he accompanied on the expedition to Ireland in 1399. He was a squire in attendance on a French knight who had obtained leave from Charles VI. to visit England. In 1410 he was valet-de-chambre of that king. See J. H. Wylie, History of England under Henry IV. (London, 1884), i. 329-32; and Archæologia, 1840, xxviii. 75-95.

1763. Croniques de London, ed. G. J. Aungier. Camden Soc. London, 1844.—Translated by H. T. Riley: The French chronicle of London, 1259–1343. London, 1863.—Translated by Edmund Goldsmid: The chronicles of London. 3 vols. Edinburgh, 1885–86.

A London city or mayors' chronicle, dealing mainly with the affairs of the kingdom. It seems to have been compiled about the middle of the 14th century.

1764. DEVIZES, RICHARD OF. De rebus gestis Ricardi Primi [1189-92], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iii. 379-454. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Another edition, by Joseph Stevenson, English

Hist. Soc., London, 1838.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 75-80. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by J. A. Giles: Chronicle of Richard of Devizes, London, 1841; reprinted, with emendations, in Chronicles of the Crusades, 1-64, Bohn's Antiquarian Library, London, 1848.—A better translation, by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. v. pt. i. London, 1858.

Probably completed in 1193. Howlett says that it is 'one of the most amusing products of the middle ages,' and that 'in it classical quotations, bombastic speeches, and keen gibes are mixed up with valuable historical facts.' It supplies details nowhere else to be found regarding the condition of affairs in England during the first years of Richard's reign. The author, a monk of St. Swithun's, Winchester, was still alive in 1202.

1765. DICETO, RALPH DE (d. circa 1202). Opera historica, ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1876.

Abbreviationes chronicorum, from the creation to 1147, i. 3-263; also in Twysden's Scriptores X., 429-524, London, 1652; extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 254-60. This work is made up of extracts from pre-existing chroniclers.

Imagines historiarum, 1148-1202, i. 267-440, ii. 3-174; also in Twysden's Scriptores, 525-710; extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores, xxvii. 260-86. These 'Outlines of History,' down to about 1172, are based on Robert of Torigni; after 1172 the work is original, and from 1188 onward it is a valuable contemporary record, which contains many letters, papal bulls, and other documents. The author's chronology is, however, often faulty.

Minor works (of little value), ii. 177-285.

The Annales de Southwark, extracts from which are edited by Pauli in Pertz's Scriptores, xxvii. 430-32, are based mainly on Ralph de Diceto; but they contain some additional entries to 1240.

Ralph de Diceto was elected dean of St. Paul's, London, in 1180, and held that office to the time of his death. His birthplace is sometimes, on insufficient grounds, identified with the parish of Diss in Norfolk.

1766. Dit (Le) de Guillaume d'Angleterre, ed. Francisque Michel, Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, iii. 173-211. Rouen, 1840.—Another edition, in Giles's Scriptores (No. 1671), 270-97. London, 1845.

An Anglo-French poem, concerning the authorship of which nothing is known.

1767. *DURHAM, SIMEON OF (d. after 1129). Opera et collectanea [ed. J. H. Hinde]. Vol. i. Surtees Soc. Durham, etc., 1868.—Opera omnia, ed. Thomas Arnold. Rolls Series.

2 vols. London, 1882-85. [Poorly edited.]—The historical works of Simeon of Durham. Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. iii. pt. ii. London, 1855.

Historia Dunelmensis ecclesiæ, A.D. 635-1096, with two continuations, to 1154: Simeon's Opera, ed. Arnold, i. 1-169; Twysden's Scriptores X., 1-68, London, 1652; ed. Thomas Bedford, London, 1732. Written between 1104 and 1108. Deals mainly with the history of the church of Durham, but also supplies valuable information concerning the secular affairs of northern England, especially in the 9th century. The early portion of the work is derived chiefly from Bede's Ecclesiastical History and his Life of Cuthbert.

Historia regum, or Historia de regibus Anglorum et Dacorum, A.D. 616-1129: Simeon's Opera, ed. Arnold, ii. 1-283; Twysden's Scriptores X., 85-256; to A.D. 957, in Petrie's Monumenta, 645-88; Simeon's Opera, ed. Hinde, 1-131; extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 157-60. This chronicle is in part derived from a Durham compilation which extended from A.D. 731 to 951 and was based on the lost Northumbrian annals (No. 1376) and on Asser. The passages taken from the lost annals are valuable for northern affairs. Simeon also used Florence of Worcester, especially from A.D. 887 onward. For the years 1119-29 the work is an independent authority. It was continued by John of Hexham (No. 1791) to 1154.

Arnold and Hinde edit various other pieces attributed to Simeon. He was a monk and precentor of the church of Durham. He probably died soon after 1129.

1768. *Eadmer (d. circa 1124). Historia novorum in Anglia [circa a.d. 960-1122], ed. Martin Rule. Rolls Series. London, 1884.—Other editions: by John Selden, London, 1623; by Gabriel Gerberon, Paris, 1675, 1721 (reprinted, Venice, 1744); and in Migne's Patrologia, clix. 347-588, Paris, 1854.—Extracts, 1051-1121, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 139-48. Hanover, 1881.

The first recension appeared in 1112, and the work was completed in 1124. The early portion relates mainly to Lanfranc's career; the bulk of the history comprises a minute contemporary account of the relations of Anselm to William II. and Henry I., 1092-1109. It is the best authority on the investiture controversy. The last two books deal with the history of the see of Canterbury, 1110-1122. Liebermann believes that as regards unity of plan and of treatment this work has no equal among the great historians of England in the 12th century. Eadmer was a monk of Christ church, Canterbury, and the confidential adviser of Anselm. See Felix Liebermann, Ueber Eadmer, in Geschichtsquellen (No. 586), 284-302; Father Ragey, Eadmer, Paris, etc., [1892]; and Martin Rule, On Eadmer's Elaboration of the First Four Books of the Historia Novorum, Cambridge Antiq. Soc., Communications, 1888, vi. 195-304. For Eadmer's Life of Anselm, etc., see No. 2225.

1769. ELMHAM, THOMAS OF (d. circa 1428). Liber metricus de Henrico Quinto, ed. C. A. Cole, Memorials of Henry V., 77-166. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

Written in 1418-19; supplements the Gesta Henrici Quinti (No. 1789), also probably the work of Elmham. For the Vita et Gesta Henrici Quinti, ascribed by Hearne to Elmham, see No. 1814. For Elmham's History of the Monastery of St. Augustine, Canterbury, see No. 1364. He was a monk of that abbey in 1407 and prior of Lenton in 1414.

1770. Eulogium historiarum sive temporis: chronicon ab orbe condito usque ad annum domini 1366, a monacho quodam Malmesburiensi exaratum [with a continuation to 1413], ed. F. S. Haydon. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1858–63.

A general survey of English history, probably written by a monk of Malmesbury named Thomas, who completed the work about 1367. The early part is a compilation from Geoffrey of Monmouth, Higden, and other chroniclers. The part 1356-66 is contemporaneous. The continuation to 1413, added by an unknown hand in the first half of the 15th century, is also valuable, especially for the proceedings of parliament in Richard II.'s time.

1771. FABYAN, ROBERT (d. 1513). The new chronicles of England and France [from Brutus to 1485], by Robert Fabyan, named by himself the Concordance of histories, reprinted from Pynson's edition of 1516, the first part collated with the editions of 1533, 1542, and 1559, ed. Henry Ellis. London, 1811.

In his attempt to harmonise the accounts of various chroniclers Fabyan shows little critical power. From 1189 onward the Concordance, which is written in English, has the form of a regular London chronicle, the record of each year being headed by the names of the mayor and sheriffs for that year. The rest of the work is of some value for the history of London and for the affairs of the kingdom, especially during the reigns of Edward IV. and Richard III. Fabyan was made sheriff of the city in 1493.

1772. FANTOSME, JORDAN. Chronique de la guerre entre les Anglois et les Ecossais en 1173 et 1174 [with a translation], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iii. 202-377. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Other editions: by Francisque Michel, Surtees Soc., 1840; and in his edition of the chronicle of Benoît de Sainte-Maure (No. 1840), iii. 531-613, Paris, 1844.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in ertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 53-59. Hanover, 1885.—

Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 246-88: Jordan Fantosme's Chronicle. London, 1856.

This valuable Anglo-French poem was completed before 1183. Fantosme asserts that he saw many of the events which he narrates. He was chancellor of the diocese of Winchester.

1773. FITZ-THEDMAR, ARNOLD (d. 1275). De antiquis legibus liber: cronica majorum et vicecomitum Londoniarum, 1188–1274 [with later additions in French to 20 Edward II.], ed. Thomas Stapleton. Camden Soc. London, 1846.—Extracts, ed. Pauli and Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 527–47. Hanover, 1888.—Translated by H. T. Riley: Chronicles of the mayors and sheriffs of London. London, 1863.

One of the most valuable of the regular London city chronicles. It deals with the history of the city and the kingdom, and seems to have been written in 1274. Probably it was called Liber de Antiquis Legibus because the MS. volume in which the chronicle is found contains various ancient enactments, notably the oldest code of ordinances for the government of the city—the building assize of Henry Fitz-Eylwin, A.D. 1189. The portion 1236-74, which is devoted mainly to the affairs of London, is fuller and more valuable than the part 1183-1235. The appendix (pp. 197-205) contains a chronicle of the years 1135-1223, in which Louis VIII.'s expedition to England in 1216-17 is minutely described. Fitz-Thedmar was an alderman of London, and loyally supported Henry III. against the barons.

√ 1774. *Flores historiarum [from the creation to 1326], ed. H. R. Luard. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1890.—Other editions, to the end of 1306, by Matthew Parker, [London], 1567, 1570; reprinted, Frankfort, 1601.—Extracts, 1154–1307, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 456–504. Hanover, 1888.—Translated by C. D. Yonge: The flowers of history, to 1307. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. 2 vols. London, 1853.

This chronicle was for a long time attributed to Matthew of Westminster, but we now know that he is 'an entirely imaginary person,' and that the work ascribed to him was written by various persons at various times. The earlier portion was taken mainly from the greater chronicle of Matthew Paris, and the oldest manuscript belonged at one time to Westminster abbey; therefore the two names were combined, and the fictitious Matthew of Westminster was spoken of as the author. The oldest manuscript, extending to 1265 and derived mainly from Matthew Paris, was written at St. Albans; it was then continued at Westminster by various hands to the close of 1306, with which year most of the manuscripts end. The continuation to 1325 was compiled by Robert of Reading, a monk of Westminster (d. 1325); and entries for the years 1325-26 were added by another monk of Westminster. The part 1259-1326 is largely a contemporaneous record. The St. Albans writer, in his account of the events of the years 1259-65, favours the barons; but after its removal to Westminster the chronicle becomes royalist in tone. The most valuable notices of the reign of Edward I. are those that relate to the Scottish war. Robert of Reading displays strong feeling against Edward II.

See Luard's prefaces; Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, iii. 313-26, 399-445; Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores, 1888, xxviii. 456-62; Bémont's review of Luard's edition, in Revue Critique d'Histoire, new series, 1891, xxxi. 50-57.

1775. FORDUN, JOHN OF (d. circa 1384). Chronica gentis Scotorum [from Noah to 1383, with a translation], ed. W. F. Skene, in Historians of Scotland, vols. i. and iv. Edinburgh, 1871–72.—Other editions, with the title Scotichronicon: to 1066, in Gale's Scriptores XV., 563–699, Oxford, 1691; with Walter Bower's continuation, to 1437, by Thomas Hearne, 5 vols., Oxford, 1722; to 1437, by Walter Goodall, 2 vols., Edinburgh, 1759.

This was the first attempt to write a complete history of Scotland; and the Scotichronicon, with Bower's continuation, became the groundwork of Scotch annals. Fordun was probably a chantry priest in the cathedral at Aberdeen. Walter Bower, abbot of Inchcolm (d. 1449), really wrote the part 1153–1437, but he made use of Fordun's notes to 1383. The Scotichronicon is valuable for the study of the relations of Scotland to England.

1776. Fragment (A remarkable) of an old English chronicle, or history, of the affairs of Edward IV. [1459-70], ed. Thomas Hearne, Thomæ Sprotti Chronica, 283-306. Oxford, 1719.— The same, with modernised orthography, in Chronicles of the White Rose of York (No. 1668), 1-30. London, 1845.

This valuable fragment seems to be part of a biography of Edward IV., written between 1517 and 1524. The author, who favours the house of York, is well informed concerning the events which he narrates. See Jakob Engel, Kritische Bemerkungen über A Remarkable Fragment of an Old English Chronicle, Berlin, 1875, pp. 63.

√ 1777. FROISSART, JEAN (d. circa 1410). Chroniques [1307–1400], ed. Siméon Luce and Gaston Raynaud. Vols. i.-xi., to 1385. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1869-99.—Older editions, to 1400: by J. A. [C.] Buchon, Collection des Chroniques Françaises, vols. xi.-xxv., 15 vols., Paris, 1824-26; and Kervyn de Lettenhove, 25 vols. in 26, Brussels, 1867-77.—Translated by John Bourchier, Lord Berners: Chronicles of England, France, etc. 2 vols. London, 1523-25; reprinted, 2 vols., 1812, 4 vols., 1814-16, 6 vols., 1901-03; Globe edition, ed. G. C. Macaulay, 1 vol., 1899.—Translated by Thomas Johnes, 5 vols., Hafod, 1803-10; reprinted, 2 vols., 1839, 1848, 1852, 1857, 1874.

One of the most celebrated chronicles of France and one of the principal sources for the study of the Hundred Years' war. It also deals with the internal affairs of England. The part 1307-24 is very brief, and down to 1361 many passages are borrowed from Jean le Bel (No. 1811). Froissart travelled much. He was in England from 1361-66 as secretary to Queen Philippa, in 1367-68 he spent another year there, and in 1394 he made a third visit. In the later redactions of his chronicle his tone is hostile to England. The work is valuable, but contains many errors. It was continued by Monstrelet (No. 1818). For the period not covered by Luce and Raynaud, Lettenhove's edition may be used. His indexes (vols. xx.-xxv.) are useful, and so are some of the documents that he prints: e.g. x. 517-33; xviii. 67-73, 84-86, 202-72; xx. 413-31: See also his articles in Bulletins de l'Académie Royale des Sciences, etc., de Belgique, 2nd series, 1865, xx. 659-83, 1869, xxviii. 367-84. On Froissart, see Mary Darmesteter, Froissart, Paris, 1894 (translated by E. F. Poynter, London, 1895); Salomon Reinach, Le Manuscrit des Chroniques de Froissart à Breslau, in Gazette des Beaux-Arts, 3rd series, 1905, xxxiii. 371-89; and the literature and other editions and translations mentioned in Potthast's Bibliotheca, i. 474-5, and Molinier's Sources, iv. nos. 3094, 3233. There is a severe criticism of the part of the chronicle relating to English history in Pauli's Geschichte von England (Gotha, 1855), iv. 731-2.

1778. GAIMAR, GEOFFREY. Lestorie des Engles solum la translacion maistre Geffrei Gaimar [A.D. 495-1100, with a translation], ed. T. D. Hardy and C. T. Martin. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1888-89.—Other editions: to 1066, in Petrie's Monumenta, 764-829, London, 1848; A.D. 1066-1100, in Michel's Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, i. 1-64, Rouen, 1836; A.D. 495-1100, by Thomas Wright, Caxton Soc., London, 1850.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. ii. pt. ii.: Gaimar. London, 1854.

This rhyming French chronicle was written between 1135 and 1147. For the period before the Norman Conquest its chief sources are Geoffrey of Monmouth and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. For the portion after 1066 the author is indebted to Florence of Worcester or Simeon of Durham. Gaimar was a Norman by birth. Concerning his life little is known; he seems to have resided in Lincolnshire. See [H. T. Riley], Gaimar the Trouvère, in Gentleman's Magazine, 1857, cciii. 21-34; and Max Gross, Geffrei Gaimar, die Komposition seiner Reimchronik und sein Verhältnis zu den Quellen (v. 819-3974) [to A.D. 975], Erlangen, 1902, pp. 136.

1779. Gesta Edwardi de Carnarvan auctore canonico Bridlingtoniensi, cum continuatione [Gesta Edwardi Tertii] ad A.D. 1377, ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ii. 25–151. Rolls Series. London, 1883.

A brief chronicle of the reign of Edward II., written by a canon of the priory of Bridlington. It did not assume its present shape before 1377, although the earlier portion seems to rest on contemporary material. After 1339 the continuation comprises incidental jottings of little value. Stubbs ranks the work 'high among the second rate authorities for the history of a period which is singularly deficient in first rate authorities.'

1780. Gesta Herwardi incliti exulis et militis, ed. T. D. Hardy and C. T. Martin, Gaimar's Lestorie des Engles, i. 339-404. Rolls Series. London, 1888.—De gestis Herwardi Saxonis. Edited [with a translation] by S. H. Miller. Peterborough, 1895. pp. 72. [Appended to vol. iii. of Fenland Notes and Queries: No. 138.]—Other editions (bad): in Michel's Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, ii. 1-98, Rouen, 1836; in Thomas Wright's Chronicle of Gaimar, app. 46-108, Caxton Soc., London, 1850.

Professes to have been compiled from an English life of Hereward written by his priest Leofric; but Liebermann contends that it was written about 1150 by Richard, a monk of Ely, who died before 1189. Freeman says: 'The early part of the story in the Gesta is plainly mere romance, but when we get Hereward in the Isle we are on somewhat surer ground.' See Freeman, Norman Conquest, vol. iv. app. OO; and Liebermann, Ueber Ostenglische Geschichtsquellen, in Neues Archiv der Gesellschaft für ältere Deutsche Geschichtskunde, 1892, xviii. 238-43.

√1781. *Gesta Stephani regis Anglorum [1135-47], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles and Memorials of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iii. 3-136. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Another edition, in Duchesne's Historiæ Normannorum Scriptores, 927-75, Paris, 1619; reprinted by R. C. Sewell, English Hist. Soc., London, 1846.—Brief extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 3-4. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Thomas Forester: The chronicle of Henry of Huntingdon; also The acts of Stephen. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1853.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. v. pt. i.: Acts of king Stephen. London, 1858.

The author was an eye-witness of many of the events which he narrates, and his hook is our chief authority for the history of England during the years 1142-47. Though he was a partisan of Stephen, he is fair and accurate. Normandy seems to have been his native land, and he was probably chaplain to Henry of Blois, bishop of Winchester.

1782. *GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS (GERALD DE BARRI, d. circa 1220). Opera, ed. J. S. Brewer; vols. v.-vii. by J. F. Dimock; vol. viii. by G. F. Warner. Rolls Series. 8 vols. London, 1861-91.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 395-421. Hanover, 1885.—The historical works of Giraldus Cambrensis: The topography of Ireland and The conquest of Ireland, translated by Thomas Forester; The itinerary through Wales and The description of Wales, translated by R. C. Hoare. Revised by Thomas Wright. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1863.—Ist edition of Hoare's translation: The itinerary of archbishop Baldwin through Wales, A.D. 1188 [and The description of Wales]. 2 vols. London, 1806.—The itinerary through Wales and The description of Wales [text of the 1806 translation], ed. W. L. Williams. London, [1908].

Topographia Hibernica: Gerald's Opera, v. 1-204, London, 1867; Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 692-754, Frankfort, 1602 (also 1603). The first recension appeared in 1188. Gerald collected material for this description of Ireland and its inhabitants, and for his Expugnatio, during his two visits to Ireland in 1183 and 1185-86.

Expugnatio Hibernica, 1166-85: Gerald's Opera, v. 205-411; Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 755-813; The Irish Abridgment of the Expugnatio Hibernica, edited, with a translation, by Whitley Stokes, in English Historical Review, 1905, xx. 77-115. This history of Henry II.'s conquest of Ireland was completed about 1188. Hardy calls it the most valuable of Gerald's writings, and believes that as a historical monograph it 'may challenge comparison with any existing work of a similar nature.' Brewer also rates Gerald's two treatises on Ireland high among historical sources. On the other hand, Dimock, while admitting that they 'are in many ways interesting and valuable,' denies that they are 'sober, truthful history.' Gerald's tone is certainly hostile to the Irish, and his works on Ireland must therefore be used with caution.

Itinerarium Cambriæ: Gerald's Opera, vi. 1-152. Other editions: by David Powel, Pontici Virunnii Britanniæ Historiæ Libri Sex, 47-230, London, 1585; in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 815-78; by R. C. Hoare, London, 1804 (also 1806); by W. L. Williams, London, 1908. This itinerary gives an account of Archbishop Baldwin's pilgrimage in Wales in 1188 to preach the crusade; it also deals with the topography, natural history, etc., of Wales. The first recension appeared in 1191, the third about 1214.

Descriptio Cambriæ, in two books: Gerald's Opera, vi. 153-227. Other editions: bk. i., by David Powel, Pontici Virunnii Britanniæ Historiæ Libri Sex, 231-77; bk. i., in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 879-96; bk. ii., in Wharton's Anglia Sacra, ii. 447-55; bks. i.-ii., by R. C. Hoare, with the Itinerarium Cambriæ; bks. i.-ii., by W. L. Williams, with the Itinerarium. The first recension appeared about 1194, the second about 1215. Dimock regards this as the most valuable of Gerald's treatises.

Gerald was archdeacon of Brecknock. He was twice elected to the see of St. Davids, but failed to secure possession of it. For his other works, concerning the church, etc., see No. 2242. Besides Brewer's preface to vol. i. of Gerald's Opera and the biography prefixed to Hoare's translation of the Itinerarium, the following works deal with his life and writings: -Aristide Joly, Etudes Anglo-Normandes: Gérold le Gallois, in Mémoires de l'Académie des Sciences, Arts, et Belles-Lettres de Caen, 1887-88, pp. 117-80, 1889, pp. 3-73, Caen, 1887-89. Valuable.—John Lynch, Cambrensis Eversus, 1662, edited, with a translation, by Matthew Kelly, Celtic Soc., 3 vols., Dublin, 1848-52. The first edition, 1662, appeared under the pseudonym 'Gratianus Lucius.' This valuable work is not confined to a refutation of Gerald's views concerning Ireland, but enters largely into Irish history.—Henry Owen, Gerald the Welshman, London, 1889; new edition, 1904.—M. Spaethen, Giraldus Cambrensis [1199-1203] und Thomas von Evesham [1204-06] über die von ihnen an der Kurie geführten Prozesse, in Neues Archiv der Gesellschaft für ältere Deutsche Geschichtskunde, xxxi. 595-649, Hanover, etc., 1906.—Stephanus Vitus (Stephen White), Apologia pro Hibernia adversus Cambri Calumnias, ed. Matthew Kelly, Dublin, 1849. A refutation of Gerald's statements regarding Ireland, written early in the 17th century.

1783. GLOUCESTER, ROBERT OF. The metrical chronicle of Robert of Gloucester [from Brutus to 1270], ed. W. A. Wright. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1887.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, 2 vols., Oxford, 1724; and in Works of Hearne, vols. i.—ii., London, 1810.—Extracts, 1192–1270, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 663–9. Hanover, 1888.—Translation: No. 597.

Beyond the fact that he was probably a monk of Gloucester, who wrote about A.D. 1300, nothing is known concerning the author of this English poem. The earlier portion, to 1135, may have been written by another person. A large part of the chronicle is derived from Geoffrey of Monmouth, Henry of Huntingdon, William of Malmesbury, and the Annals of Waverley. The contemporary narrative of the barons' war in the time of Henry III. is of some value. See Karl Brossmann, Ueber die Quellen der Chronik des Robert von Gloucester, Striegau, [1887], pp. 51; W. Ellmer, Ueber die Quellen der Reimchronik Roberts von Gloucester, Halle, 1886, pp. 37, and in Anglia, 1888, x. 1-37, 291-322; Hans Strohmeyer, Der Stil der Reimchronik Roberts von Gloucester, eine Untersuchung zur Ermittelung der Verfasser dieses Werkes, Berlin, 1891, pp. 106.

1783a. Grandes chroniques de France [or Chroniques de Saint-Denis, to 1380], ed. Paulin Paris. 6 vols. Paris, 1836–38.

A compilation; original and official from 1350 to 1377, this part being perhaps the work of Pierre d'Orgemont, chancellor to Charles V. (see Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3099). The period covered by Paris's last volume is being re-edited in three volumes for the Société de l'Histoire de France by Roland Delachenal: Chronique des Règnes de Jean II. et de Charles V., vol. i. (1350-64), Paris, 1910. The chronicles are written in French.

1784. GRAY, THOMAS (d. 1369?). Scalacronica: a chronicle of England and Scotland [ed. Joseph Stevenson]. Maitland Club. Edinburgh, 1836.—Scalacronica, the reigns of Edward I., Edward II., and Edward III., as recorded by Sir Thomas Gray. Translated by Sir Herbert Maxwell. Glasgow, 1907. [First printed in Scottish Historical Review, Oct. 1905—Oct. 1907 passim.]

Written in French; begun in 1355 while the author was a prisoner in Edinburgh. Extends from the creation, but Stevenson edits only the part 1066–1362. The title 'Scalacronica' points to the ladder in the Gray arms. A large portion of the chronicle is based on Bede, Higden, and other well-known writers; but it contains some useful information concerning the reigns of Edward II. and Edward III., especially in regard to the wars between England and Scotland. Gray was lord of Heaton manor in Northumberland.

1785. GREGORY, WILLIAM (d. 1467). Gregory's Chronicle, 1189-1469, ed. James Gairdner, Historical Collections of a Citizen of London in the Fifteenth Century, 55-239. Camden Soc. [London], 1876.

A London city chronicle, which devotes much attention to national transactions. The most valuable part, 19-30 Henry VI. (1440-52), seems to have been written by William Gregory, who was mayor of London in 1451. The work contains one of the best accounts of Cade's rebellion. See George Kriehn, The English Rising in 1450 (Strasburg, 1892), 8-16.

1786. HALL, EDWARD (d. 1547). Hall's Chronicle [1399–1547], collated with the editions of 1548 and 1550 [ed. Henry Ellis]. London, 1809.

There is a second title-page, a copy of that of the earlier editions: The Union of the Families of Lancaster and York. The first edition seems to have been published in 1542. The work is a glorification of the house of Tudor, but it gives some useful particulars regarding English history in the 15th century. Hall was a citizen of London and a lawyer by profession.

1787. HARDYNG, JOHN (d. circa 1465). Chronicle, from the earliest period of English history [to 1461], together with the continuation by Richard Grafton to 34 Henry VIII., ed. Henry Ellis. London, 1812.—Two separate editions, with the continuation, were printed in 1543.—Extracts, ed. C. L. Kingsford, English Hist. Review, xxvii. 740-53. London, 1912.

Hardyng's Chronicle is in English verse, but Grafton (d. circa 1572) wrote his continuation in prose. Hardyng's work, which was completed about 1465, is of little historical value, though it affords some information regarding the reigns of Henry IV., Henry V., Henry VI., and Edward IV. He took part in the battle of Agincourt, and was employed by Henry V. and Henry VI. to secure documents supporting the claim of England to the fealty of the Scotch kings. These documents were forgeries. Hardyng was for many years constable of the castle of Kyme, in Lincolnshire. For a sketch of his life and chronicle, see Kingsford in English Historical Review, 1912, xxvii, 462-82, and in his Historical Literature (Oxford, 1913), ch. vi. See also J. A. Kingdon's Incidents in the Lives of Thomas Poyntz and Richard Grafton, London, 1895, and his Richard Grafton, Citizen and Grocer, London, 1901.

1788. *Hemingburgh, Walter of (d. after 1313). Chronicon Walteri de Hemingburgh, vulgo Hemingford nuncupati, de gestis regum Angliæ [1048–1346], ed. H. C. Hamilton. English Hist. Soc. 2 vols. London, 1848–49.—Other editions: the part 1066–1273, in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 453–594, Oxford, 1687; 1274–1346, by Thomas Hearne, 2 vols., Oxford, 1731; extracts, 1129–1307, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 627–46, Hanover, 1888.

The early part is drawn from Henry of Huntingdon, William of Newburgh, and other chroniclers. The account of the reigns of the three Edwards appears to be derived chiefly from personal knowledge and contemporary report. There is a gap in the text comprising the years 1316-26. The author inserts many documents into his narrative, some of which are not found elsewhere. Hardy (Catalogue of Materials, iii. 255) believes that the portion 1297-1346 was written by a continuator. Horstmann identifies the writer for the years 1326-46 as John of Tynemouth, and Liebermann asserts that Hemingburgh's work probably ends with the year 1313; but Hamilton was inclined to believe that the whole chronicle, to 1346, was written by Walter of Hemingburgh. Walter was a canon regular of the priory of Gisburn, in Yorkshire, and hence is sometimes called Walter of Guisborough.

1789. Henrici Quinti Angliæ regis gesta [1413–16, fogether with an abridgment of Titus Livy's Vita et Gesta, 1417–22], ed. Benjamin Williams. English Hist. Soc. London, 1850.—Also printed in No. 1746.—See Nos. 1769, 1814.

Often called the Chronicle of the Chaplain, because it was written by a chaplain in Henry V.'s army. Williams surmised that the author was Jean de Bordin, who accompanied Henry on his first French campaign; but in 1874 Max Lenz (König Sigismund und Heinrich V., p. 14) showed that the chaplain was Thomas of Elmham, a conclusion confirmed by J. H. Wylie (The Agincourt 'Chaplain,' in the Athenæum, Aug. 23, 1902, p. 254), and accepted by C. L. Kingsford (The Early Biographies of Henry V., in the English Historical Review, 1910, xxv. 60). The author, who probably wrote in 1416, was an eye-witness of many of the events which he describes; and he gives a detailed account of the siege of Harfleur and the battle of Agincourt. He is the best authority for the first four years of Henry V.'s reign. Williams, pp. 167-262, also prints the Chronique de Normandie, 1414-22, by Georges Chastelain (d. 1475), with an English translation. It gives a good account of Henry V.'s residence in Paris.

A metrical chronicle derived mainly from Hall and Vergil (Nos. 1786, 1854).

1791. HEXHAM, JOHN OF (d. circa 1209). Historia Johannis prioris Hagustaldensis ecclesiæ xxv. annorum [1130-54], ed. Thomas Arnold, Symeonis Monachi Opera, ii. 284-332. Rolls Series. London, 1885.—Other editions: in Twysden's Scriptores X., 257-82, London, 1652; by James Raine, Priory of Hexham, i. 107-72, Surtees Soc., Durham, etc., 1864.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 14-16. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 3-32: The chronicle of John, prior of Hexham. London, 1856.

This continuation of Simeon's Historia Regum (No. 1767) relates mainly to the affairs of northern England, and was probably compiled late in the reign of Henry II. It contains some original information. John seems to have succeeded Richard (No. 1792) as prior of Hexham.

1792. HEXHAM, RICHARD OF. Historia de gestis regis Stephani et de bello de standardo [1135–39], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iii. 139–78. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Other editions: in Twysden's Scriptores X., 309–30, London, 1652; by James Raine, Priory of Hexham, i. 63–106, Surtees Soc., Durham, etc., 1864.—Extract, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 11–14. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. i. 35–58: The acts of king Stephen and the battle of the standard. London, 1856.

A valuable contemporary narrative, written before 1154, which is occupied mainly with the invasions of the Scots under King David. It gives much information not found elsewhere. Richard was elected prior of Hexham in 1141, and seems to have died between 1160 and 1178. For his history of the church of Hexham, see No. 2560.

1793. HIGDEN, RANULF (d. 1364). Polychronicon [from the creation to 1352], with the English translations of John Trevisa and an unknown writer of the fifteenth century. Vols. i.-ii., ed. Churchill Babington; vols. iii.-ix., ed. J. R. Lumby. Rolls Series. 9 vols. London, 1865–86.—Another edition of the parts relating to Great Britain, in Gale's Scriptores XV., 179–287. Oxford, 1691.

This 'chronicle of many ages' was the standard work on general history during the 14th and 15th centuries. It is in large part a compilation: Higden names about forty writers who are his authorities. Bk. i. is geographical: it describes the various countries of the earth. The other six books comprise a universal history. Only a portion of the last book is contemporary, and even that portion does not contain much original information. The real interest of the Polychronicon lies in 'the view it affords of the historical, geographic, and scientific knowledge of the age in which it appeared ': Gairdner, Early Chroniclers, 279. In many MSS. Higden's work closes in 1342 or 1344. A few MSS. of an earlier edition end in 1327. Trevisa's translation was made in 1387; it was printed by Caxton (with the latter's continuation to 1460) in 1482; reprinted, 1495 and 1527. Another translation, made between 1432 and 1450, continues the narrative to 1401. The Rolls Series edition, viii. 355-406, ix. 1-283, contains a Latin continuation of the Polychronicon to 1394, attributed to John Malverne, a monk of Worcester (d. circa 1415). It is, however, shown in J. A. Robinson's paper on An Unrecognized Westminster Chronicler, 1381-1394 (Proceedings of the British Academy, 1907, iii. 61-77) that Malverne wrote only to 1381, and that the rest of the chronicle was the work of a monk of Westminster. This latter continuation is one of the best authorities for the period that it covers, as Malverne's is for the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II. Besides the Malverne and Westminster continuations, there are others, of which the most common is that printed in the Rolls Series edition, viii. 407-28. See also Adam of Usk's Chronicon (No. 1853). Higden was a monk of St. Werburgh's abbey, Chester.

1794. Histoire de Guillaume le Maréchal, comte de Striguil et de Pembroke, régent d'Angleterre [circa 1140-1219], ed. Paul Meyer. 3 vols. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1891-1901.

The author of this valuable Anglo-French poem wrote in England about 1225. Gaston Paris (Littérature Française, 136) calls it 'un des documents les plus importants qui nous soient parvenus non seulement sur l'histoire, mais sur les mœurs, etc., du xiie et du xiiie siècle.' See also Paul Meyer, L'Histoire de Gnillaume le Maréchal, in Romania, 1882, xi. 22-74; T. F. Tout, The Fair [Battle] of Lincoln and the 'Histoire de Guillaume le Maréchal,' in English Historical Review, 1903, xviii. 240-65; and Molinier, Sources, iii. no. 2271.

1795. Histoire des ducs de Normandie et des rois d'Angleterre [from the first arrival of the Danes in Gaul to 1220], ed. Francisque Michel. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1840.—Portions, re-edited by Holder-Egger, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvi. 699-717. Hanover, 1882.—See also Extrait d'une chronique française des rois de France par un anonyme de Béthune [to 1217], in Bouquet's Historiens de la France (No. 575), xxiv. 750-75. Paris, 1904.

To 1199 the Histoire is an abridgment of William of Jumièges, with some additions. The part 1199-1220 was probably written by an eyewitness of the events narrated; it has a valuable account of the French invasion of England in 1216. On these two works, which are important sources for the reign of John, see Charles Petit-Dutaillis, L'Anonyme de Béthnne, in Revne Historique, 1892, l. 63-71. He shows that they are probably by the same anthor. Cf. Molinier, Sources, iii. nos. 2217-18.

1796. Historia (Anonymi) Eduardi Tertii [1326-77], ed. Thomas Hearne, Walteri Hemingford Historia de Rebus Gestis Eduardi I., etc., 387-452. Oxford, 1731.

This seems to be in large part a compilation from the works of Higden and Murimuth.

1797. Historia vitæ et regni Ricardi II. [1377–1402] a monacho quodam de Evesham consignata, ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1729.

Probably written at Evesham in the first quarter of the 15th century. Follows Walsingham to 1390, but then seems to become an independent authority, and gives a valuable account of the parliament of 1397. The author is hostile to Richard II. See George Kriehn, The Monk of Evesham's Chronicle, in American Historical Review, 1902, vii. 268-74.

1798. Historiæ Croylandensis continuatio [three continuations of 'Ingulf,' 1149-1486], ed. William Fulman, Rerum Anglicarum Scriptores, 451-593. Oxford, 1684.—Translated by H. T. Riley: Ingulf's Chronicle of the abbey of Croyland, with the continuations. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1854.

Deals with the general history of England as well as with the affairs of the abbey. Valuable for the reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., and Richard III. The writer of the part 1459-86 was contemporary with the transactions which he relates, and seems to have been in the confidence of Edward IV. His tone is friendly to that king, but hostile to Richard III. For Ingulf, the continuation ascribed to Peter of Blois, etc., see No. 1371.

1799. Historie of the arrivall of Edward IV. in England and the final recoverye of his kingdomes from Henry VI., A.D. 1471, ed. John Bruce. Camden Soc. London, 1838. pp. 52.—Reprinted, with modernised orthography, in Chronicles of the White Rose of York (No. 1668), 31-96. London, 1845.—Contemporary French abridgment of the English text: La révolte du conte de Warwick contre le roi Edward IV., ed. J. A. Giles. Caxton Soc. London, 1849.—Another edition of the French text, by L. M. E. Dupont, Mémoires de Philippe de Commines, iii. 281-93. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1847.—Translation of the French abridgment, by Edward Jerningham: Account of Edward IV.'s second invasion of England, 1471, drawn up by one of his followers. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxi. 11-23. London, 1827.

The English narrative is 'an authorised relation put forth by the Yorkists themselves.' The writer calls himself 'a servant of the king that presently saw in effect a great part of his exploits.' The facts are accurately presented, although the writer was a Yorkist partisan.

1799a. History of Gruffydd ap Cynan: the Welsh text, with translation, introduction, and notes, ed. Arthur Jones. Manchester, 1910.

· Written, probably in Latin, in the reign of Henry II. Important for the history of Wales and the English border down to 1137. For earlier versions, see Jones's introduction, and T. F. Tout's article on Gruffydd in the Dictionary of National Biography, 1890, xxiii. 301-4.

✓ 1800. *HOVEDEN, or HOWDEN, ROGER OF (d. after 1201). Chronica Rogeri de Houedene [A.D. 732-1201], ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 4 vols. London, 1868-71.—Another edition, in Savile's Scriptores, 230-471. London, 1596; reprinted, Frankfort, 1601.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 133-83. Hanover, 1885. ✓ Translated by H. T. Riley: The annals of Roger de Hoveden. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. 2 vols. London, 1853.

Probably written after 1192. The first part, A.D. 732-1148, is copied from the Historia post Bedam, a compilation (still extant in manuscript) made at Durham between 1148 and 1161, which is based on Simeon of Durham and Henry of Huntingdon. The second part, 1148-69, is a meagre compilation taken from the Chronicle of Melrose, the lives and letters of Becket, etc. The third portion, 1169-92, is the chronicle ascribed to Benedict of Peterborough, re-edited, with the addition of some important documents. The fourth part, 1192-1201, is Hoveden's original work, a valuable contemporary history, enriched with an abundance of documents. For a continuation, see No. 1761. Hoveden, probably a native of Howden, Yorkshire, was in attendance on Henry II. in France in 1174, and he was a justice itinerant of the forests in 1189. He had access to the public records, and held intercourse with the leading men of the time.

√ 1801. HUNTINGDON, HENRY OF (d. circa 1155). Historia Anglorum, B.C. 55-A.D. 1154, ed. Thomas Arnold. Rolls Series. London, 1879.—Other editions: in Savile's Scriptores, 169-229, London, 1596 (reprinted, Frankfort, 1601); in Migne's Patrologia, cxcv. 799-978, Paris, 1855; to A.D. 1066, in Petrie's Monumenta, 689-763, London, 1848.—Extracts, 768-1154, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xiii. 148-54. Hanover, 1881.—Translated by Thomas Forester: The chronicle of Henry of Huntingdon. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1853.

Five recensions appeared between 1130 and 1154. The author's main sources of information to about 1126 are Bede and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. After that date he derives many of his statements from oral report, but he does not give us many new facts. It was long believed that his chronicle contained valuable material relating to Anglo-Saxon history based on old folk-songs. Liebermann has shown, however, that this view is untenable, and that some of the details presented in the Historia Anglorum which are not found elsewhere are figments of the imagination. Henry became archdeacon of Huntingdon about 1110. See Felix Liebermann Heinrich von Huntingdon, in Forschungen zur Deutschen Geschichte, 1878, xviii. 265–95; and cf. Molinier, Sources, ii. no. 1988, 1802. ISLIP, SIMON' (d. 1366). Speculum regis Edwardi III., ed. Joseph Moisant, De Speculo Regis Edwardi III. seu tractatu quem de mala regni administratione conscripsit Simon Islip, cum utraque ejusdem recensione manuscripta nunc primum edita. Paris, 1891.

The two recensions of the Speculum are printed in full on pp. 81-169, This tract is an ardent remonstrance addressed to Edward III. on the abuses of purveyance. It was written about 1330, but Islip was not the author. James Tait, in his paper On the Date and Authorship of the 'Speculum Regis Edwardi' (English Historical Review, 1901, xvi. 110-15), suggests that the real author may have been Simon Meopham, who was archbishop of Canterbury, 1327-33. Islip was archbishop of Canterbury, 1349-66. He had also been a member of the royal council and keeper of the privy seal. See Dictionary of National Biography, 1908, x. 511-14.

1803. Itinerarium peregrinorum et gesta regis Ricardi [1187-99] auctore ut videtur Ricardo canonico S. Trinitatis Londoniensis, ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles and Memorials of the Reign of Richard I., vol. i. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Another edition (bad), in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 247–429. Oxford, 1687.—Fragments, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 191–219. Hanover, 1885.—Translated in Chronicles of the Crusades, 65–339: Itinerary of Richard I. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1848.

This is a history of the third crusade which used to be ascribed to Geoffrey of Vinsauf. Gaston Paris held that it is in large part a Latin translation of Ambrose's French poem (No. 1677), but it has recently been maintained that the relationship between the two works is more complicated: see Kate Norgate, The 'Itinerarium Peregrinorum' and the 'Song of Ambrose,' in English Historical Review, 1910, xxv. 523-47; and cf. Molinier, Sources, iii. no. 2332. The Itinerarium was probably written by Richard, canon and prior of Holy Trinity, London. 'Compared with Matthew Paris and the monastic annalists,' says Stubbs, 'it is as much superior in style as inferior in matter and method.' The work contains a detailed account of Richard I.'s expedition to the Holy Land (especially of the years 1190-92), with some remarks on his character and government.

1804. Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, 1405-49, ed. Alexandre Tuetey. Société de l'Histoire de Paris. Paris, 1881.—For other editions, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 686-7.

A contemporary chronicle, written in French; valuable for its exact account of conditions in Paris throughout the period. See Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 4149.

1805. JUMIÈGES, WILLIAM OF (fl. circa 1070). Willelmi Calculi Gemmeticensis monachi Historiæ Normannorum libri viii. [A.D. 851-1137], ed. André Duchesne, Historiæ Normannorum Scriptores, 215-317. Paris, 1619.—Reprinted in Migne's Patrologia, cxlix. 777-910. Paris, 1853.—Another edition, in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 604-91. Frankfort, 1602; also 1603.—Translated into French in F. P. G. Guizot's Collection des Mémoires, [xxix.] 1-316: Histoire des Normands. Paris, 1826.

The first four books are taken from Dudo's Historia Normannorum; the other four, A.D. 996-1137, are much interpolated. Bk. viii., often called Historia Henrici Primi Regis Angliæ (1087-1137), is a later addition, by Robert of Torigni; it has been translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. v. pt. i., London, 1858. The part relating to the Norman Conquest is a valuable contemporary narrative. William was a monk of Jumièges, concerning whose life little is known. See Molinier, Sources, ii. no. 1964; and Léopold Delisle, Matériaux pour l'Edition de Guillaume de Jumièges préparée par Jules Lair, in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1910, lxxi. 481-526. On the relation of this chronicle to that of Dudo of St. Quentin, see Gustav Körting, Ueber die Quellen des Roman de Rou, Leipsic, 1867, pp. 67.

1805a. JUVÉNAL (OF JOUVENEL) DES URSINS, JEAN (d. 1473). Histoire de Charles VI., 1380-1422, ed. J. A. C. Buchon, Choix de Chroniques, vol. iv. Paris, 1838.—For other editions, etc., see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 602.

Written in French about 1431. Valuable for the relations of Henry V. to France. The author was archbishop of Rheims and councillor of Charles VII. See Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3574.

1806. KLERK, JAN DE (d. 1365). Van den Derden Edewaert, Coninc van Engelant: Rymkronyk geschreven circa 1347, ed. J. F. Willems. Ghent, 1840. pp. 84.—Translated into French by Octave Delepierre: Edouard III., roi d'Angleterre, en Belgique. Ghent, 1841. pp. 47.

Valuable for the years 1337-41. The author favours the cause of Edward III. He was a native of Antwerp, and was also called Jan Boendaele, See H. Haerynck, Jan Boendaele, Ghent, 1888, 1807. KNIGHTON, HENRY (d. circa 1366). Chronicon [A.D. 959–1366, with a continuation, 1377–95], ed. J. R. Lumby. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1889–95.—Another edition, in Twysden's Scriptores X., 2311–2742. London, 1652.

Down to 1336 it is derived mainly from Higden and Hemingburgh. It contains no entries for the years 1367-76. The continuator, who wrote the part 1377-95, was a partisan of the duke of Lancaster, but a bitter opponent of the Wyclifites. He gives some valuable details regarding the Black Death, the rising of 1381, and the social condition of England. Knighton was a canon regular of St. Mary's, Leicester. James Tait, in the English Historical Review, 1896, xi. 568-9, severely criticises Lumby's edition.

1808. LANGTOFT, PETER (d. after 1307). The chronicle of Pierre de Langtoft in French verse [from Brutus to 1307, with a translation], ed. Thomas Wright. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1866–68.—Extracts, 1190–1307, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 647–62. Hanover, 1888.

A large part of this chronicle was translated into English by Robert Mannyng (No. 1816). To the end of Henry III.'s reign it is taken from Geoffrey of Monmouth, Huntingdon, Malmesbury, and other well-known writers. For the years 1272-1307 it is a contemporary record, much of which is devoted to Edward I.'s Scottish wars. The author's tone is hostile to the Scots, He was a canon of the priory of Bridlington in Yorkshire.

1809. LAYAMON (fl. 1200). Layamon's Brut, or chronicle of Britain, a poetical semi-Saxon paraphrase of the Brut of Wace [with a translation], ed. Frederic Madden. Soc. of Antiq. of London. 3 vols. London, 1847.

Completed about 1204. Based on Wace's Brut (No. 1859), with the addition of some Welsh traditions. Layamon was a priest of Areley in Worcestershire. See Heinrich Krautwald, Layamons Brut verglichen mit Waces Roman de Brut, Breslau, 1887, pp. 32; Rudolf Imelman, Layamon, Versuch über seine Quellen, Berlin, 1906; and Adolf Luhmann, Die Überlieferung von Layamons Brut, Halle, 1906.

1810. LE BEAU, JEAN (d. after 1449). Chronique de Richard II., 1377-99, ed. J. A. [C.] Buchon, Collection des Chroniques Françaises, vol. xxv. supplement ii. Paris, 1826. pp. 79.

A valuable French account of Richard II.'s reign, probably written early in the 15th century. Moranvillé contends that the Chronique edited by Williams (No. 1753) is merely another redaction of Le Beau's work; but perhaps the latter is an abridgment of the former. See H. Moranvillé, La Chronique du Religieux de St. Denis, les Mémoires de Salmon, et la Chronique de la Mort de Richard II., in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1889, l. 5-40.

1811. LE BEL, JEAN (d. 1370). Chronique de Jean le Bel [1272-1361, but no details till 1326], ed. Jules Viard and Eugène Déprez. Société de l'Histoire de France. 2 vols. Paris, 1904-05.—Les vrayes chroniques de Jehan le Bel [1326-61], ed. M. L. Polain. Académie Royale de Belgique. 2 vols. Brussels, 1863. [A poor edition.]

Written in French about 1356-61, and deals mainly with the wars of England and France. This valuable work is the basis of the early part of Froissart's Chronicles, and constitutes one of the most important sources of information regarding the Hundred Years' war. The author, a canon of St. Lambert, Liège, took part in Edward III.'s expedition against the Scots in 1327, and was an admirer of that king. See Henri Pirenne, Jean le Bel, in Biographie Nationale de Belgique, 1891, xi. 518-25; and Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3093.

1812. LE FÈVRE, JEAN (d. 1468). Chronique [1408-35], ed. François Morand. Société de l'Histoire de France. 2 vols. Paris, 1876-81.—For other editions, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 715.

This chronicle, written in French, borrows much from Monstrelet, but is very valuable for the battle of Agincourt, at which Le Fèvre was present on the English side. He was seigneur of Saint-Remy and privy councillor of Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy. Another chronicle valuable for the relations between France and England, especially for the period 1405-33, is Antonio Morosini's Chronique [1396-1433], ed. Germain Lefèvre-Pontalis, Société de l'Histoire de France, 4 vols., Paris, 1898-1902 (Italian text, with French translation; vol. iv. is a study of the author and his work). Morosini, a citizen of Venice, was still writing in 1434. The date of his death is unknown. For these two chronicles, see Molinier, Sources, iv. nos. 3941, 4073.

1813. Le livere de reis de Brittanie e le livere de reis de Engletere [from Brutus to 1274, with two continuations to 1326 and a translation], ed. John Glover. Rolls Series. London, 1865.

An abridged French translation of extracts from Geoffrey of Monmouth, Florence of Worcester, Ralph de Diceto, and other well-known chroniclers; perhaps compiled by Peter of Ickham (fl. circa 1290). It consists of two parts, which the editor calls Le Livere de Reis de Brittanie and Le Livere de Reis de Engletere.

1814. LIVY, TITUS (fl. 1437). Titi Livii Foro-Juliensis Vita Henrici Quinti regis Angliæ [1413-22], ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1716.—Vita et gesta Henrici Quinti, ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1727.—The first English life of king Henry the Fifth, written in 1513 by an anonymous writer known commonly as the translator of Livius, ed. C. L. Kingsford. Oxford, 1911. 3 4.5

The Vita is one of the principal biographies of Henry V.; written after 1437. The author, who seems to have been a native of Forli, was a member of Henry VI.'s privy council. It is the principal source of The First English Life, which also contains excerpts from an important lost life of Henry V. completed soon after 1455.

The Vita et Gesta was, without sufficient reason, attributed by Hearne to Elmham (No. 584); but Wylie and Kingsford have shown that it is another version of Livy's Vita. Wylie thinks that it arose from an expansion of the Vita made by Livy himself soon after 1437. Kingsford, however, argues that the expansion was made later, probably in 1446, by an unknown writer, 'perhaps a foreign scholar resident in England.' See J. H. Wylie, Decembri's Version of the Vita Henrici Quinti by Tito Livio, in English Historical Review, 1909, xxiv. 84-89; C. L. Kingsford, The Early Biographies of Henry V., ibid., 1910, xxv. 58-92 (a critical study of the texts), his introduction to The First English Life, and his Historical Literature, ch. iii.

1814a. MACCONMIDHE, GILLA-BRIGHDE (fl. 1260). Poem on the battle of Dun [1260], Irish text, with English translation, ed. John O'Donovan. Celtic Soc., Miscellany, 145–83. Dublin, 1849.

'The poem affords curious glimpses into the distracted state of Ireland at the period to which it refers.' The author was chief poet of Ulster and a follower of Brian O'Neill, king of the Irish of the north. At the battle of Dun, which was fought with the English, Brian was slain.

1815. *Malmesbury, William of (d. circa 1142). De gestis regum Anglorum libri quinque [A.D. 449-1127]; Historiæ novellæ libri tres [1125-42]. Edited by William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1887-89.—Other editions: in Savile's Scriptores, I-IIO, London, 1596 (reprinted, Frankfort, 1601); by T. D. Hardy, English Hist. Soc., 2 vols., London, 1840 (reprinted in Migne's Patrologia, clxxix. 955-1440, Paris, 1855).—Bks. i.-iii. of the Gesta Regum, in Commelin's Scriptores, 281-348. Heidelberg, 1587.—Extracts from the Gesta Regum and the Historia Novella, ed. Waitz, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), x. 449-85; ed. Pauli, ibid., xiii. 134-5. Hanover, 1852-81.—Translated by John Sharpe: The history of the kings of England and The modern history of William of Malmesbury. London, 1815.— Other translations: by J. A. Giles, Bohn's Antiquarian Library, London, 1847; by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. iii. pt. i., London, 1854.

Malmesbury was 'the first writer after Bede who attempted to give to his details of dates and events such a systematic connexion, in the way of cause and sequence, as entitles them to the name of History.' The Gesta Regum was finished in 1125, but two new recensions appeared circa 1135-40; the early part is derived from Nennius, Bede, the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Eadmer, and other writers. The Historia Novella was written in 1140-42. Bk. v. of the Gesta Regum and the three books of the Historia Novella are in large part a contemporary account of the years 1100-1142. The Gesta is also of some value for the reigns of William I. and William II. The author, a monk of Malmesbury, was a partisan of Maud, but he is fair and accurate. For his other works, see Nos. 1444, 2263, 2606, and p. 283. Brief annals, probably written at Malmesbury, are printed by W. H. Stevenson in the English Historical Review, 1907, xxii. 81-82. See also, besides Stubbs's prefaces, W. de Gray Birch, Life and Writings of William of Malmesbury, reprinted from the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, new series, vol. x. [London, 1874], pp. 65; and Kate Norgate, England under the Angevin Kings (London, 1887), i. 83-93.

1816. MANNYNG, ROBERT (fl. circa 1338). The story of Robert Manning of Brunne [to A.D. 689], ed. F. J. Furnivall. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1887.—Peter Langtoft's Chronicle, as improved by Robert of Brunne [A.D. 689–1307], ed. Thomas Hearne, 2 vols., Oxford, 1725; also in Hearne's Works, vols. iii.—iv., London, 1810.

Written in English verse and completed in 1338. The part edited by Furnivall is mythical history derived from Wace and Geoffrey of Monmouth; the second part, edited by Hearne, is a translation of Langtoft's Chronicle, with some useful additions. The author, a native of Brunne (Bourne) in Lincolnshire, is often called Robert of Brunne. He was a member of the Gilbertine order. See Oscar Preussner, Robert Mannyng of Brunne's Uebersetzung von Pierre de Langtofts Chronicle, Breslau, 1891, pp. 70; and Max Thümmig, Ueber die Altenglische Uebersetzung der Reimchronik Peter Langtoft's durch Robert Manning von Brunne, in Anglia, 1892, xiv. 1-76.

1817. Marlborough, Henry of (fl. 1420). Quæ sequuntur descripta sunt è chronicis manuscriptis Henrici de Marleburgh [1372-1421], ed. William Camden, Britannia, 832-6. London; 1607.—Translated by James Ware, Historie of Ireland [pt. iii.], 207-23: Henry of Marlborough's Chronicle of Ireland [1285-1421]. Dublin, 1633.—Ware's translation reprinted, in his Ancient Irish Histories, vol. ii. Dublin, 1809.

The chronicle from which Camden prints this extract is called Cronica Excerpta de Medulla Diversorum Cronicorum. It extends from the birth of Christ to 1421, and was begun in 1406. The first part is a mere compilation, and the later part deals mainly with the affairs of the English settlers in Ireland.

√ 1818. Monstrelet, Enguerrand de (d. 1453). La chronique de Monstrelet, 1400-1444, ed. Louis Douët d'Arcq. Société de l'Histoire de France. 6 vols. Paris, 1857-62.—Translated by Thomas Johnes: The chronicles of Monstrelet [with continuations] to 1516. 5 vols. Hafod, 1809. Other editions: 4 vols., Hafod, 1809; 13 vols., London, 1810; 2 vols., London, 1840 and 1853.

A continuation of Froissart, which contains information concerning the relations of England with France. Monstrelet was a magistrate of Cambrai. For the editions of his chronicle and the modern literature concerning him, see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 792; Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3946; and André Lesort, Notes Biographiques sur Monstrelet, in Bulletin Historique et Philologique du Comité des Travaux Historiques et Scientifiques, Paris, 1908, pp. 153-7.

1819. More, Sir Thomas (d. 1535). History of king Richard III., ed. J. R. Lumby. Cambridge, etc., 1883.—Other editions: in More's Works, London, 1557; in his Historie of Edward V., 1641; in Kennett's Complete History of England, 1706 and 1719; by S. W. Singer, 1821.—Latin version: Historia Ricardi regis Angliæ, in More's Opera. Louvain, 1565.—Other editions of the Opera, Louvain, 1566, and Frankfort, 1689.

Both versions are ascribed to More; the English (written in 1513) seems to be a paraphrase of the Latin. Much of More's information was obtained from Cardinal John Morton (d. 1500), and some writers believe that Morton was the author of the Latin version. The tone of the biography is strongly Lancastrian, and hostile to Richard III. The work, which was left unfinished, is valuable, though it displays a somewhat partisan spirit. See T. E. Bridgett, Life and Writings of Thomas More, London, etc., 1891; W. H. Hutton, Sir Thomas More, London, 1895; Frederic Seebohm, The Oxford Reformers, 3rd edition, London, 1887 (reprinted, 1913).

1820. 'More, Thomas de La' (fl. 1340). Vita et mors Edwardi regis Angliæ [1307–27], ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ii. 297–319. Rolls Series. London, 1883.—Another edition, in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 593–603. Frankfort, 1602; also 1603.

Merely an extract from Geoffrey le Baker's Chronicle, erroneously ascribed to More. More represented Oxfordshire in parliament in 1340; he was Baker's patron.

1821. MORINS, RICHARD DE (d. 1242). Annales prioratus de Dunstaplia, A.D. 1–1297, ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, iii. 1–420. Rolls Series. London, 1866.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, 2 vols, Oxford, 1733.—Extracts, 1207–97, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 504–13. Hanover, 1885.

The part to 1241 was compiled by Morins, who was prior of Dunstable 1202-42. He began his work in 1210, and carried it on from year to year until his death. Probably the entries from 1241 onward were also written at Dunstable contemporaneously with the events narrated. The part to 1201 is an abridgment of the works of Diceto; the annals of the years 1201-97 are original. Much attention is devoted to the affairs of the abbey and to the general history of England. 'Many historical facts,' says Luard, 'are known solely from this chronicle. . . . It is probably the most accurate record extant of the ordinary secular proceedings of a monastery in the thirteenth century.'

1822. MURIMUTH, ADAM (d. 1347). Continuatio chronicarum [1303-47], ed. E. M. Thompson. Rolls Series. London, 1889.—Other editions (imperfect), with a continuation to 1380: by Anthony Hall, Oxford, 1721 (appended to his edition of the continuation of Nicholas Trevet's Annales, 1722); by Thomas Hog, English Hist. Soc., London, 1846.

Begun about 1325; three recensions appeared between 1337 and 1347. The part 1303-37 is meagre; the later portion, 1337-47, is valuable for the history of the English campaigns in France. The author was a canon of St. Paul's, London, and precentor of Exeter. He was employed by Edward II. on missions to the papal court. The continuation, especially the part 1359-77, seems to be the work of a well-informed contemporary writer.

1823. * Newburgh, William of (d. circa 1201). Historia rerum Anglicarum [1066–1198, with a continuation to 1298], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., i. 1-408, ii. 409–583. Rolls Series. London, 1884–85.—Other editions: by William Silvius, Antwerp, 1567 (bad); in Commelin's Scriptores, 353–496, Heidelberg, 1587 (bad); by John Picard, Paris, 1610, also 1632; by Thomas Hearne, 3 vols., Oxford, 1719; by H. C. Hamilton, English Hist. Soc., 2 vols., London, 1856.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 221–48. Hanover, 1885.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, iv. pt. ii. 297–672: The history of William of Newburgh. London, 1856.

Probably begun in 1196. Much of the matter is taken from Simeon of Durham, Huntingdon, Fantosme, and other chroniclers, but it is entirely recast so as to form a valuable commentary on the history of the 12th century. The author displays remarkable judgment and good sense in dealing with men and events. 'Many passages,' says Howlett, 'yield in force and elegance to the work of no writer of that age.' Freeman, in Contemporary Review, 1878, xxxiii. 216, calls him 'the father of historical criticism.' William boldly assailed the fables of Geoffrey of Monmouth, which other medieval chroniclers accepted as historical facts. He was a canon of the Austin priory of St. Mary at Newburgh in Yorkshire. He was also called William Little, or Petit (Parvns). For the continuation to 1298, see No. 1687. There is a good account of Newburgh's History, by Kate Norgate, in Dictionary of National Biography, 1900, lxi. 360-63; she calls it 'the finest historical work left to us by an Englishman of the twelfth century.' She thinks (English Historical Review, 1904, xix. 288-97) that it was composed 1199-1201; but Rudolf Jahncke (Guilelmus Neubrigensis, in Jenaer Historische Arbeiten, no. 15, Bonn, 1912) puts the date some two years earlier. For light on the personal history of the author, see H. E. Salter, in English Historical Review, 1907, xxii. 510-14.

1824. NIGER, RALPH (d. circa 1205). Radulphi Nigri Chronica; the chronicles of Ralph Niger, ed. Robert Anstruther. Caxton Soc. London, 1851.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 327-44. Hanover, 1885.

Chronicon, from the creation to Chronicon secundum, A.D. 1-circa 1199, pp. 1-104. Chronicon secundum, A.D. 1-circa 1171, with a continuation, 1162-78, pp. 105-91.

The first chronicle does not contain many notices relating to England; those in the second are taken from Geoffrey of Monmonth, William of Malmesbury, and Henry of Huntingdon: The work is interesting chiefly on account of the bitter invective against Henry II., who obliged Ralph to go into exile. The latter was an ardent supporter of Becket. See Reinhold Pauli, Die Chroniken des Radulphus Niger, in Nachrichten der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1880, pp. 569–89.

1825. Notes (Brief) of occurrences under Henry VI. and Edward IV. [1422-62], ed. James Gairdner, Three Fifteenth-Century Chronicles, 148-63. Camden Soc. [London], 1880.

Mainly Latin; written in the 15th century. Of some value for the years 1459-62.

1826. Opus chronicorum [1259-96], ed. H. T. Riley, Johannis de Trokelowe et Henrici de Blaneford Chronica, etc., 3-59. Rolls Series. London, 1866.—Brief extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 520-21. Hanover, 1888.

Written 1301-1308, by a monk of St. Albans. 'Becomes more and more meagre in its details as it approaches his own times.' It was used by Rishanger (No. 1836).

1826a. Ordericus Vitalis (d.circa 1141). Historia ecclesiastica [A.D. I-1141], ed. Auguste le Prévost. Société de l'Histoire de France. 5 vols. Paris, 1838-55.—Other editions: in Duchesne's Historiæ Normannorum Scriptores, 319-925, Paris, 1619; Bouquet's Recueil des Historiens, ix. 10-18, x. 234-6, xi. 221-48, xii. 585-770, Paris, 1757-81; Migne's Patrologia, clxxxviii. 15-984, Paris, 1855.—Extracts, ed. Pertz and Waitz, in Pertz's Scriptores, xx. 50-80, xxvi. 11-28. Hanover, 1868-82.—Translated into French [by L. F. Du Bois] in F. P. G. Guizot's Collection des Mémoires, [vols. xxv.-xxviii.]: Histoire de Normandie. 4 vols. Paris, 1825-27. —Translated into English by Thomas Forester: The ecclesiastical history of England and Normandy. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. 4 vols. London, 1853-56.

Compiled during the years 1123-41. Contains a valuable account of English and Norman history (secular as well as ecclesiastical) from 1066 to 1141, though much of the author's information regarding the period of the Norman Conquest was derived from William of Poitiers and William of Jumièges. The chronology is very faulty, and there are many confusing digressions. Orderic Vital was born in Shropshire in 1075; in 1085 he went to Normandy, where he became a monk of St. Evroul. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 217-23; J. Tessier, De Orderico Vitali, Poitiers, 1872, pp. 73; R. W. Church, St. Anselm (London, 1888), ch. vi.; and especially Delisle's introduction to the fifth volume of Le Prévost's edition (reprinted, with an additional note, in Orderic Vital et l'Abbaye de Saint-Evroul, pp. 1-78, and supplemented by the Compte-Rendu et Discours at the inauguration of a monument to Orderic, Aug. 27, 1912, both published by the Société Historique et Archéologique de l'Orne, Alençon, 1912):

1827. Otterbourne, Thomas (fl. 1400). Chronica regum Angliæ [from Brutus to 1420], ed. Thomas Hearne, Duo Rerum Anglicarum Scriptores Veteres, i. 3–283. Oxford, 1732.

Of some value for the years 1377-1420. According to Hearne, the author was a Franciscan friar; but this is doubted by Little, who believes that the writer was perhaps the Thomas Otterbourne who became rector of Chingford in 1393. See A. G. Little, The Grey Friars in Oxford (Oxford, 1892), 174-5.

1828. Oxenedes, or Oxnead, John de. Chronica [A.D. 449–1293], ed. Henry Ellis. Rolls Series. London, 1859.

Written late in the 13th century. The author, a monk of St. Benet, Holme, Norfolk, made use of William of Malmesbury, Roger of Wendover, Matthew Paris, and other chroniclers, adding no new information except some facts of local interest concerning Norfolk, 1280-93.

1829. PAGE, JOHN. Poem on the siege of Rouen [1418], ed. James Gairdner, Historical Collections of a Citizen of London in the Fifteenth Century, 1-46. Camden Soc. [London], 1876.—Another edition, by J. J. Conybeare and Frederic Madden, Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxi. 43-78, xxii. 350-98. London, 1827-29.

An accurate account, written in English soon after the siege.

1830. *Paris, Matthew (d. 1259). Chronica majora [from the creation to 1259], ed. H. R. Luard. Rolls Series. 7 vols. London, 1872-83.—Other editions of the part 1066-1259, with a continuation to 1273: [by Matthew Parker], London, 1571; by William Wats, London, 1640.—Excerpts, A.D. 47-1259, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 107-389. Hanover, 1888.—Translated into French by Alphonse Huillard-Bréholles: Grande chronique de Matthieu Paris. 9 vols. Paris, 1840-41. Translated into English by J. A. Giles: Matthew Paris's English history [with the continuation], from 1235 to 1273. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. 3 vols. London, 1852-54.—Historia Anglorum sive Historia minor [1067-1253], ed. Frederic Madden. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1866-69. Excerpts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores, xxviii. 390-Hanover, 1888.—For other editions of the Chronica Majora, etc., see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 778-9.

Matthew Paris is commonly regarded as England's greatest medieval historian. His style is graphic, his view is broad, and he exhibits a keen interest in national politics. He became a monk of St. Albans in 1217, and succeeded Wendover as chronographer of that abbey in 1236. He came in contact with the prominent men of his time, and was on familiar terms with Henry III. The nucleus of the Chronica Majora was a compilation made by John de Cella, abbot of St. Albans (1195-1214); it extended to 1188, and was continued by Roger of Wendover to 1235. Paris revised these two works, and carried the story to 1259. His revisions of the narrative to 1235 are clearly indicated in the appendix to Coxe's edition of Wendover (No. 1864). Three recensions of the Chronica Majora appeared in 1250, 1253, and 1259 respectively. This work is very valuable for the study of English and continental history. It also contains many details concerning the affairs of the abbey of St. Albans, and many papal bulls, royal letters, and other documents. Much of the author's information was gathered from eye-witnesses of the events narrated. He speaks the truth fearlessly, boldly condemning the abuses of the court and the church, rebuking pope, king, nobles, and clergy, when he deems them worthy of blame. This chronicle was continued to 1306 by Rishanger (No. 1836).

The Additamenta, or Liber Additamentorum, printed in vol. vi. of Luard's excellent edition of the Chronica Majora, forms a kind of appendix to Paris's greater chronicle and to his Vitæ Abbatum; it contains charters granted to the abbey, papal letters, royal writs, etc., A.D. 793-1258. The Historia Minor, begun in 1250, is an abridgment of the Chronica Majora, but it contains some additional information. Paris's Vitæ Abbatum S. Albani, edited by Wats, 1640 [1639] and 1684 [1682], extends to 1255, and is incorporated by Walsingham in his Gesta Abbatum (No. 2402); extracts are edited by Liebermann in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 434-40. His life of Stephen Langton is edited by Liebermann in his Ungedruckte Anglo-Normannische Geschichtsquellen (No. 586), and in Pertz's Scriptores, xxviii. 441-3 (extracts only). Another work ascribed to Paris is the Abbreviatio Chronicorum Angliæ, compendious annals, A.D. 1000-1255: No. 1674.

1831. *Peterborough, Benedict of (d. 1193). Gesta regis Henrici Secundi Benedicti abbatis: the chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., 1169-92, known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, ed. William Stubbs. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1867.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne: De vita et gestis Henrici II. et Ricardi I. 2 vols. Oxford, 1735.—Extracts, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 81-132. Hanover, 1885.

The most valuable chronicle of the reign of Henry II. Begun about 1172; from that year onward most of the events were recorded contemporaneously. Many documents are embedded in the narrative. Benedict, abbot of Peterborough, was not the author; the work was ascribed to him because one of the extant manuscripts was transcribed by his order. Stubbs believes that it was not written at Peterborough or at St. Albans, and surmises that it may be a transcript of Richard Fitz-Neal's lost Tricolumnis altered from its tripartite shape. The view that it represents the Tricolumnis, presented by Stubbs as 'a chance hypothesis,' is rejected by Felix Liebermann, Dialogus de Scaccario (Göttingen, 1875), 65-69. For the defects of the Gesta, see Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores, 1885, xxvii. 82-83.

1832. POITIERS, WILLIAM OF (fl. circa 1087). Gesta Willelmi ducis Normannorum et regis Angliæ [1035–67], ed. André Duchesne, Historiæ Normannorum Scriptores, 178–213. Paris, 1619.—Reprinted by Francis Maseres, Historiæ Anglicanæ Selecta Monumenta, 37–167. London, 1807.—Other editions: in Giles's Scriptores (No. 1671), 77–159, London, 1845; and Migne's Patrologia, cxlix. 1217–70, Paris, 1853.—Translated into French in F. P. G. Guizot's Collection des Mémoires, [xxix.] 319–439: Vie de Guillaume le Conquérant. Paris, 1826.

This biography, which has not come down to us in its complete form, is one of the chief sources relating to William the Conqueror's career, but it is untrustworthy as regards English affairs. The author was 'more studious of his patron's glory than of truth and accuracy.' Freeman (Norman Conquest, ii. 163) calls him 'a well-informed contemporary,' but adds that 'the work is disfigured by his constant spirit of violent partisanship.' His sympathies are anti-English. William of Poitiers a Norman, who had made a long sojourn in Poitiers, was archdeacon of Lisieux and chaplain of William the Conqueror. He was a soldier before he became a priest. The date of his death is unknown: See Gustav Körting, Wilhelm's von Poitiers Gesta Guilelmi, etc.: ein Beitrag zur Anglo-Normannischen Historiographie, Dresden, 1875, pp. 41.

1832a. READING, JOHN OF (d. 1368-69). Chronica Johannis de Reading et anonymi Cantuariensis, 1346-67, ed. James Tait. Manchester, 1914.

Tait holds that the Canterbury chronicle is wrongly ascribed to Stephen Birchington. Cf. No. 2432.

1833. REDMAN, ROBERT. Henrici Quinti historia [1413-22], ed. C. A. Cole, Memorials of Henry V., 1-59. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

Of no historical value. Written in praise of Henry V., between 1536 and 1544. Very little is known concerning the author.

1834. RIEVAULX, AELRED OF (d. 1166). Relatio de standardo, ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iii. 179-99. Rolls Series. London, 1886.—Other editions: in Twysden's Scriptores X., 337-46, London, 1652; and Migne's Patrologia, cxcv. 701-12, Paris, 1855.

An account of the battle of the Standard, 1138; less important than Richard of Hexham's work on the same subject (No. 1792). Aelred spent his youth at the court of David, king of Scotland, and was abbot of Rievaulx, in Yorkshire. He'ranks in the second class of the English mediæval historians, and even there does not occupy the first place': Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 293. See Dictionary of National Biography, 1889, xviii. 33-35.

1835. RIGORD (d. circa 1209). Gesta Philippi Augusti [1179-1208], ed. H. F. Delaborde, Œuvres de Rigord et de Guillaume le Breton, i. 1–167. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1882.—Extracts, ed. Auguste Molinier, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvi. 288–94. Hanover, 1882.—Translated into French in F. P. G. Guizot's Collection des Mémoires, [ix.] 1–179: Vie de Philippe-Auguste. Paris, 1825.

Rigord, a monk of St. Denis, began his career as a physician of Languedoc. His work was abridged, and continued to 1223, by William of Armorica, or Guillaume le Breton, chaplain of Philip Augustus (d. circa 1226), in his Gesta Philippi Augusti and in his great poem entitled Philippide, extracts from both of which are edited by A. Molinier and others in Pertz's Scriptores, 1882, xxvi. 295–389, and both of which are translated into French in Guizot's Collection, 1825, [ix.] 183–351, and [vol. x.]. The works of Rigord and Guillaume le Breton are valuable for the relations to France of Henry II., Richard I., and John. See Cartellieri, Philipp II. August (No. 2809), i. Beilagen, 31–35. For other editions, etc., see Potthast, Bibliotheca, i. 552, ii. 973; and Molinier, Sources, iii. nos. 2211–12.

1836. RISHANGER, WILLIAM (d. after 1312). Chronica [1259-1306, together with Rishanger's Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, 1297-1307, and three fragments of Annales Regis Edwardi Primi which have been attributed to him], ed. H. T. Riley. Rolls Series. London, 1865.—Chronicon de duobus bellis apud Lewes et Evesham [1263-67], ed. H. T. Riley, Walsingham's Ypodigma Neustriæ, 491-565. Rolls Series. London, 1876.—Another edition, by J. O. Halliwell: The chronicle of William de Rishanger of the barons' war. Camden Soc. London, 1840.—Extracts from Rishanger's works are edited by Liebermann in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 512-19. Hanover, 1888.

The first of these works is a continuation of Matthew Paris's Chronica Majora. The part 1259-72 was completed after 1290, and the part 1272–1306 after 1327. Probably this chronicle, or a large portion of it, has been wrongly assigned to Rishanger. The author seems to have borrowed much from Trevet. The second work, Gesta Edwardi Primi, compiled soon after 1307, is brief and of little value. Riley calls the Chronicle of the Barons' War (written after 1307, and, according to Tout, Political History of England, iii. 453, not before 1312) 'a literary production, lame, disjointed, verbose, obscure, and, in many places, almost unintelligible.' It exhibits ardent admiration for Simon de Montfort. Rishanger became a monk of St. Albans in 1271. Perhaps he succeeded Matthew Paris as official chronicler, or historiographer, of that abbey; but there seems to have been a suspension of historical activity in St. Albans from about 1267 to about 1300. Riley believes that Rishanger was still alive in 1327. He was sixty-two years old in 1312. See No. 1681.

1837. Ross, John (d. 1491). Historia regum Angliæ [from the creation to 1485], ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1716; 2nd edition, 1745.

Written between 1485 and 1491. Down to 1483 it is very meagre; the account of the reign of Richard III. is somewhat fuller. Ross, or Rous, was a native of Warwick.

1838. ROUEN, ETIENNE DE (d. circa 1170). Stephani Rothomagensis monachi Beccensis poema cui titulus 'Draco Normannicus,' ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., ii. 585–781. Rolls Series. London, 1885.—Other editions: by Angelo Mai, in Appendix ad Opera edita ab Angelo Maio, 20–65, Rome, 1871; by Henry Omont, Le Dragon Normand et autres Poèmes d'Etienne de Rouen, 1–167, Société de l'Histoire de Normandie, Rouen, 1884.—A large part of it is also printed in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvi. 153–94. Hanover, 1882.

Deals with Henry II. and his parents, King Stephen, William the Conqueror, Hugh Capet, Charlemagne, the death of the Empress Maud, and other topics, to 1169. Large portions of the work are derived from Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumièges; but it furnishes some new facts for the history of the years 1153-69. Draco, in the title of the poem, means 'standard.' See Charles Fierville, Etienne de Rouen, in Bulletin de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie (Caen, 1878), viii. 54-78, 421-42.

1839. RUDBORNE, THOMAS (fl. 1460). Historia major de fundatione et successione ecclesiæ Wintoniensis [A.D. 164-1138], ed. Henry Wharton, Anglia Sacra, i. 177-286. London, 1691.

Written about r454. Deals with the general history of England, as well as with the affairs of the see of Winchester. Rudborne was a monk of St. Swithun's, Winchester. The Historia Minor, which seems to have been a summary of the Historia Major, is not now extant.

1840. SAINTE-MAURE, BENOÎT DE (d. after 1189). Chronique des ducs de Normandie [from the creation to 1135], ed. Francisque Michel. Documents Inédits. 3 vols. Paris, 1836-44.

A French poem, of no great value, written about 1180 at the request of Henry II. Its chief authorities are Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumièges. Benoît was a Norman who was attached to the court of Henry II. See E. D. Grand's article in La Grande Encyclopédie [1888], vi. 210-12.

1841. SILGRAVE, HENRY DE. Chronicon Henrici de Silegrave: a chronicle of English history, from the earliest period to 1274, ed. C. Hook. Caxton Soc. London, 1849.

To 1066 it is taken mainly from William of Malmesbury. Some of the brief notices of the barons' war, 1263-65, are useful. Nothing is known concerning the author. Perhaps he was the abbot of Ramsey named Silgrave who died in 1268.

1842. Song of Dermot and the earl, an old French poem [to about 1175, with a translation], ed. G. H. Orpen. Oxford, 1892.—Another edition, by Francisque Michel: Anglo-Norman poem of the conquest of Ireland by Henry II. London, 1837.

In its present form, probably composed about 1225. Perhaps it was based on a chronicle furnished or written by Morice Regan, an eye-witness of much that the song narrates on his authority; but it is difficult to determine his share in the authorship of the work. Regan was secretary of Dermot McMurrough, king of Leinster. The poem has much historical value. It is concerned mainly with the adventures of Dermot and his son-in-law Strongbow, earl of Pembroke (d. 1176). See J. H. Round, Commune of London (No. 2826a), ch. vii.; and F. Liebermann, in English Historical Review, 1893, viii. 129-33.

1843. SPROTT, THOMAS (fl. 1272). Chronica [from the creation to 1377], ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1719.—Thomas Sprott's Chronicle of profane and sacred history [from the creation to 1307]. Translated by William Bell, accompanied by a facsimile of the codex [in a separate roll]. Liverpool, 1851.

These are two distinct chronicles, of little value, which have erroneously been attributed to Sprott. He was a monk of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, who wrote a history of the abbots of that monastery from 596 to 1272. This work, which was used by Thorne (No. 1845), is no longer extant.

1843a. STONE, JOHN. Chronicle [1415-71], ed. W. G. Searle. Cambridge Antiq. Soc. Cambridge, etc., 1902.

Stone was a monk of Christ church, Canterbury, 1415-71. His work, though chiefly concerned with the history of Christ church, has many notices of battles and political events in the Wars of the Roses.

1844. TAYSTER, OF TAXSTER, JOHN DE (d. after 1265). Cronica abbreviata [from the creation to 1265], ed. Benjamin Thorpe, Florentii Wigorniensis Chronicon, ii. 136-96. English Hist. Soc. London, 1849.—A better text of the years 1258-62, ed. H. R. Luard, Bartholomæi de Cotton Historia Anglicana, 137-40. Rolls Series. London, 1859.—Extracts from Tayster, and from two continuations (to 1300, perhaps by John of Eversden), ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 584-98. Hanover, 1888.

Thorpe edits only the part 1152-1265. To the year 1201 the chronicle is a brief compilation from Florence of Worcester, William of Malmesbury, and other chroniclers, and the notices of the years 1202-58 are taken mainly from Matthew Paris; but the entries for the years 1258-65 seem to be original. Tayster was a monk of Bury St. Edmunds and a partisan of Simon de Montfort. See No. 1866.

1845. THORNE, WILLIAM (fl. 1397). Chronica de rebus gestis abbatum S. Augustini Cantuariæ [A.D. 578-1397], ed. Roger Twysden, Scriptores X., 1753-2202. London, 1652.

Deals with the general history of England, as well as with the affairs of the abbey. To 1228 the work is derived mainly from Sprott's Chronicle. Thorne was a monk of St. Augustine's, Canterbury.

- 1846. TIGERNACH (d. 1088). Annals of Ireland, to 1088, with a continuation to 1178. See No. 1377.
- 1847. TILBURY, GERVASE OF (fl. 1212). Otia imperialia, ed. G. G. Leibnitz, Scriptores Rerum Brunsvicensium, i. 881–1004, ii. 751–84. Hanover, 1707–10.—Extracts: ed. Joseph Stevenson, Radulphi de Coggeshall Chronicon, 419–49, Rolls Series, London, 1875; ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 359–94, Hanover, 1885.

Written about 1212 for the recreation of the emperor Otto IV. Contains odds and ends about natural history, politics, etc., and an interesting account of the kings of England from 1066 to 1199. Gervase, a native of Tilbury in Essex, entered the service of Otto IV., who made him marshal of the kingdom of Arles. See Reinhold Pauli, Gervasius von Tilbury, in Nachrichten der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1882, pp. 312-32.

1848. *Torigni, Robert of, or Robert de Monte (d. 1186). Chronique [A.D. 94-1186], ed. Léopold Delisle. Société de l'Histoire de Normandie. 2 vols. Rouen, 1872-73.—The chronicle of Robert of Torigni [Chronica Roberti de Torigneio], ed. Richard Howlett, Chronicles of the Reigns of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I., iv. 3-315. Rolls Series. London, 1889.—Edited by L. C. Bethmann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), vi. 475-535, Hanover, 1844; reprinted in Migne's Patrologia, clx. 411-546, Paris, 1854.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. iv. pt. ii.: The chronicles of Robert de Monte. London, 1856.

Written from time to time, A.D. 1150-86; the first recension seems to have been completed in 1157. To 1100 the work is borrowed mainly from Sigebert of Gemblours. The author also uses Henry of Huntingdon, Eadmer, William of Jumièges, etc. The chronicle is valuable for the internal affairs of England in 1153-54, and for the foreign policy of Henry II. Robert of Torigni also wrote a history of Henry I. (No. 1805). He became prior of Bec about 1149, and was elected abbot of Mont-Saint-Michel in 1154. He visited England in 1157 and 1175. For other editions of his chronicle, besides those named above, see Howlett's preface, pp. lxv.-lxix.; and Potthast, Bibliotheca, ii. 977. For the chronicle of Sigebert of Gemblours (d. 1112), which Robert of Torigni continued, see Potthast, ii. 1016-17; Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 116-18; and Molinier, Sources, ii. no. 2193.

1849. *Trevet, Nicholas (d. 1328). Annales sex regum Angliæ, 1135-1307, ed. Thomas Hog. English Hist. Soc. London, 1845.—Other editions: in Luc d'Achery's Spicilegium, viii. 411-728, Paris, 1668 (new edition, iii. 143-231, Paris, 1723); by Anthony Hall, Oxford, 1719.—Nicolai Triveti annalium continuatio [1307-18], ed. Anthony Hall. Oxford, 1722. pp. 29.

The early portion of the Annales is compiled mainly from William of Newburgh, Robert of Torigni, and Ralph de Diceto. For the reign of Edward I. the work is a valuable contemporary record. The continuation, though brief, is said to contain several notices of Edward II. found nowhere else; with it is printed Adam Murimuth's chronicle (No. 1822). Trevet also wrote a scanty chronicle in French, to 1313, which has never been printed. He was a Dominican friar who taught in the schools of Oxford. Modern writers usually call him Trivet, but the proper form of his name seems to be Trevet. For other editions and other works, see Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, iii. 295–8.

1850. TRIKINGHAM, ELIAS OF (fl. 1320). Annales [A.D. 626-1268], ed. Samuel Pegge. London, 1789. pp. 46.

A meagre collection of historical notes gleaned from various chroniclers. Apart from a few details regarding the abbeys of Peterborough and Ramsey, the work is of no value. The author was probably a monk of Ramsey.

1851. *Trokelowe, John of (fl. 1330). Annales [1307-23], ed. H. T. Riley, Johannis de Trokelowe et Henrici de Blaneforde Chronica et Annales, 61–127. Rolls Series. London, 1866.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, Oxford, 1729.

Written after 1229; valuable for the reign of Edward II. The author, a monk of St. Albans, was an eye-witness of many of the transactions which he narrates. His work was the basis of Walsingham's account of the years 1307-23; but Walsingham attributes these annals to Rishanger.

1852. TROYES, CHRESTIEN DE (d. circa 1195). Du roi Guillaume d'Angleterre, ed. J. A. Giles, Scriptores Rerum Gestarum Willelmi, 179–269. Caxton Soc. London, 1845.—Other editions: in Michel's Chroniques Anglo-Normandes, iii. 39–172, Rouen, 1840; Wendelin Foerster's Christian von Troyes Sämtliche Werke, iv. 253–360, 426–60, Halle, 1899.

A French poem (of no historical authority) relating to William the Conqueror,—'témoigne d'une grande fécondité d'imagination.' Chrestien was the most celebrated French poet of the 12th century. See Histoire Littéraire de la France (Paris, 1869), xv. 193-264.

1853. USK, ADAM OF (d. circa 1430). Chronicon, 1377-1404. Edited, with a translation, by E. M. Thompson. Royal Soc. of Literature. London, 1876; 2nd edition (1377-1421), 1904. 4

Written after 1415, and intended as a continuation of Higden. The part 1377-94 is meagre, as is also that of 1404-21. The latter is the missing portion of the unique text of the MS. in the British Museum which was found in 1885. The author, a Welshman, was an ecclesiastical lawyer. He sat on the commission for the deposition of Richard II., and was employed in the service of Henry IV. See Thompson's introduction to the second edition.

1853a. VENETTE, JEAN DE. [Chronique, 1340-68], ed. H. Géraud, Chronique Latine de Guillaume de Nangis, ii. 179-378. Société de l'Histoire de France. Paris, 1843.

This anonymous Latin chronicle, continuing Guillaume de Nangis, has been shown by La Curne de Sainte-Palaye (in Histoire [or Mémoires, etc.] de l'Académie Royale des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, 1733, viii. 569-78, 1740, xiii. 520-33) to be the work of Jean de Venette, prior of the Carmelite convent in Paris, who died about 1370. The author is hostile to the nobility and to the English armies. See Géraud's introduction, vol. i. pp. xix.-xl.; and Molinier, Sources, iv. no. 3098.

1854. VERGIL, POLYDORE (d. circa 1555). Anglicæ historiæ libri xxvii. [from the earliest times to 1538]. Leyden, 1651; other editions, Basel, 1555, 1556, and 1570.—Editions of bks. i.-xxvi., to 1509: Basel, 1534, 1546; 2 vols., Ghent, 1556-57; 2 vols., Douai, 1603.—Three books of Polydore Vergil's English history, comprising the reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., and Richard III. [1422-85, from a translation of Henry VIII.'s time], ed. Henry Ellis. Camden Soc. London, 1844.—Polydore Vergil's English history, from an early translation. Vol. i., containing the first eight books, comprising the period prior to the Norman conquest, ed. Henry Ellis. Camden Soc. London, 1846.

Ellis says that this is 'the first of our histories in which the writer ventured to compare the facts and weigh the statements of his predecessors.' Gairdner calls it 'the first fruit of the revival of letters in the field of English history.' Vergil's repudiation of the fables of Geoffrey of Monmouth raised a great outery against his work, which was completed in 1533. The most valuable portion is the account of the reign of Henry VII. Vergil was an Italian who came to England in or about 1505 as sub-collector of Peter's pence, and who afterwards held various English benefices, returning to Italy in 1550. See F. A. Gasquet, Some Materials for a New Edition of Polydore Vergil's 'History,' Royal Hist. Soc., Trans., new series, 1902, xvi. 1-17.

1855. Versus rhythmici de Henrico Quinto, ed. C. A. Cole, Memorials of Henry V., 61-75. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

A eulogy of the character of Henry V., to whose household the writer belonged.

1856. VIGEOIS, GEOFFREY OF (fl. 1184). Chronica Gaufridi prioris Vosiensis cœnobii [A.D. 996–1184], ed. Philippe Labbe, Nova Bibliotheca, ii. 279–342. Paris, 1657.—Extracts, ed. Holder-Egger, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvi. 198–203. Hanover, 1882.

Completed in 1184. Valuable for the continental policy of Henry II. The author was prior of the abbey of Vigeois. See François Arbellot, Etude Historique et Bibliographique sur Geoffroy de Vigeois, Limoges, etc., 1888, pp. 31.

1857. Vita Edwardi II. [1307-48], ed. William Stubbs, Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ii. 155-294. Rolls Series. London, 1883.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, Johannis de Trokelowe Annales, 93-250. Oxford, 1729.

Valuable for the reign of Edward II.; the best of the three lives of that king edited by Stubbs. Hearne attributed it on insufficient grounds to a monk of Malmesbury. Probably most of it was written toward the close of Edward II.'s reign. The part 1326-48, added later, was taken from Higden's Polychronicon. For a contemporary account of the last years of Edward II., see Lettre de Manuel de Fiesque concernant les Dernières Années d'Edouard II., ed. A. [C.] Germain, Montpellier, 1878, pp. 23. Manuel became bishop of Vercelli in 1343, and died in 1348. The letter, which is addressed to Edward III., is not dated.

1858. Voyage de Nicolas de Bosc évêque de Bayeux pour négocier la paix entre les couronnes de France et d'Angleterre [1381], in Voyage Littéraire de Deux Religieux Bénédictins [by Edmond Martène and Ursin Durand], ii. 307-60. Paris, 1724.—Also printed in Kervyn de Lettenhove's edition of Froissart's works, xxiii. 354-75. Brussels, 1876.

Written in French. Nicholas was accompanied on his mission by Guillaume de Lestrange, archbishop of Rouen.

1859. WACE (d. circa 1175). Le roman de Brut, ed. A. J. V. Le Roux de Lincy. 2 vols. Rouen, 1836-38.—Le roman de Rou et des ducs de Normandie [from Rollo to 1106], ed. Frédéric Pluquet. 2 vols. and supplement. Rouen, 1827-29.—Another edition (more nearly complete, but not good), by Hugo Andresen, 2 vols., Heilbronn, 1877-79.—Master Wace his chronicle of the Norman conquest, from the Roman de Rou. Translated by Edgar Taylor. London, 1837.—The conquest of England, from Wace's Roman de Rou. Translated into English rhyme, with the text after Pluquet, by Alexander Malet. London, 1860.

Two French metrical chronicles. The Roman de Brut, completed in 1155, is partly a translation and partly a paraphrase of Geoffrey of Monmouth's work, and served as the basis of Layamon's Brut (No. 1809). Wace's Roman de Rou (Rollo), written 1160-74, is of much more historical value. His chief sources are Dudo of St. Quentin and William of Jumièges; probably he also used Malmesbury's Gesta Regum. Freeman (Norman Conquest, v. 581, Oxford, 1876) believes that the Roman de Rou is the most trustworthy narrative of the battle of Hastings, of which Wace gives a very full account; but Round distrusts the historical authority of this chronicle, and urges that it should be used with the greatest caution. Wace was born in Jersey about 1100. See Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 428-37; Gustav Körting, Ueber die Quellen des Roman de Rou, Leipsic, 1867, pp. 67; Gaston Paris, in Romania, 1880, ix. 592-614; Potthast, Bibliotheca, ii. 1102; J. H. Round, Wace and his Authorities, in Round's Feudal England (London, 1895), 409-18; and Molinier, Sources, ii. no. 1975.

1860. WALLINGFORD, JOHN OF (d. 1258). Cronica [A.D. 449–1035], ed. Thomas Gale, Scriptores XV., 525–50. Oxford, 1691.—Excerpts, 1201–58, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 505–11. Hanover, 1888.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, ii. pt. ii.

521-64: The chronicles of John Wallingford, A.D. 449-1035. London, 1854.

A compilation; of no value. The latter part is taken mainly from Matthew Paris. The author was a monk of St. Albans.

1861. *Walsingham, Thomas (d. circa 1422). Historia Anglicana [1272–1422], ed. H. T. Riley. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1863–64.—Other editions, with the title Historia Brevis ab Edwardo I. ad Henricum V.: [by Matthew Parker], London, 1574; in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 37–408, Frankfort, 1602 (also 1603).—Ypodigma Neustriæ [from the first invasions by the Northmen to 1419], ed. H. T. Riley. Rolls Series. London, 1876.—Other editions: [by Matthew Parker], London, 1574; in Camden's Anglica, etc., Scripta, 409–592.

The earlier portion of the Historia Anglicana is a compilation from other chroniclers; the part 1272-1377 is derived mainly from Hemingburgh, Higden, Rishanger, and Trokelowe. The contemporary account of the years 1377-1422 is original and valuable. It is particularly important for the career of Wyclif, Wat Tyler's revolt, and other events of Richard II.'s reign. Riley believes that the part 1392-1422 was not written by Walsingham.

The Ypodigma Neustriæ, or Memorials of Normandy (dedicated to Henry V. in 1419), is a manual of Norman and English history. The earlier part is derived from William of Jumièges, Diceto, Trevet, etc. In this and in his other works Walsingham vilifies the Lollards. For his Gesta Abbatum S. Albani, see No. 2402. He was precentor and 'scriptorarius,' or principal scribe, of the abbey of St. Albans. In 1394 he was made prior of Wymondham, Norfolk; but he probably returned to St. Albans in 1400. See No. 1745.

1862. WARKWORTH, JOHN (d. 1500). A chronicle of the first thirteen years of the reign of Edward IV. [1461-74], ed. J. O. Halliwell. Camden Soc. London, 1839. pp. 79.—Reprinted, with modernised orthography, in Chronicles of the White Rose of York (No. 1668), 97-142. London, 1845.

A short but valuable historical fragment, written in English, contemporaneously with the events narrated, in continuation of a copy of Caxton's Chronicle. It was bequeathed by Warkworth to St. Peter's college, Cambridge, of which he was master, A.D. 1473-1500; its authorship is usually attributed to him, but there is no evidence to prove that he wrote it. The chronicle exhibits a distinct bias in favour of the Lancastrian house.

1863. WAURIN, JEHAN DE (d. circa 1474). Recueil des croniques et anchiennes istories de la Grant Bretaigne [from the earliest times to 1471], ed. William Hardy and E. L. C. P. Hardy. Vol. i., Albina to A.D. 688; vols. ii.—v., 1399—1471. Rolls Series. 5 vols. London, 1864—91.—The part 1325—1471 was edited by L. M. E. Dupont, Société de l'Histoire de France, 3 vols., Paris, 1858—63.—Translated from the French by William Hardy and E. L. C. P. Hardy: A collection of chronicles and ancient histories of Great Britain [from Albina to A.D. 688, and 1399—1431]. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1864—91.

A general collection of the then existing materials of English history. The part to 1413 was completed about 1455; the rest was written in the time of Edward IV. The author made much use of the Chronicle of Brute (No. 1733), and of Froissart and Monstrelet; but from 1444 to 1471 the work is in large part original and contemporary. Waurin belonged to a noble family of Artois. He fought at the battle of Agincourt on the French side, but later he served against the French under the banner of the duke of Burgundy, 1419-35. For other fragments of his chronicles, from a MS. at Vienna, see Bulletin Historique et Philologique du Comité des Travaux Historiques et Scientifiques, 1892, pp. 49-56.

1864. *Wendover, Roger of (d. 1236). Flores historiarum [from the creation to 1235], ed. H. O. Coxe. English Hist. Soc. 4 vols. and appendix. London, 1841–44. [This edition begins with the year A.D. 447.]—Another edition, of the part 1154–1235 (badly edited), by H. G. Hewlett, Rolls Series, 3 vols., London, 1886–89.—Excerpts, A.D. 304–1235, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 3–73. Hanover, 1888.—Translated by J. A. Giles: Roger of Wendover's Flowers of history, A.D. 447–1235. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. 2 vols. London, 1849.

A general chronicle relating to the continent as well as to England. Its nucleus was a compilation, extending to 1188, made by John de Cella, abbot of St. Albans (1195–1214). This was continued by Wendover to 1235 and by Matthew Paris to 1259: see No. 1830. Coxe's appendix shows the variations in the texts of Wendover and Paris to 1235. Wendover's work, especially the part 1200–1235, is an original authority of great value. 'His signal merit as a contemporary chronicler, which atones for many deficiencies, is his fearless frankness of speech without respect of persons.' He was historiographer of the abbey of St. Albans. See Hewlett's introduction; the prefaces to Luard's edition of Matthew Paris's Chronica Majora; and Pertz's Scriptores, xxviii. 3–20. F. M. Powicke, in his paper on Roger of Wendover and the Coggeshall Chronicle (English Historical Review, 1906, xxi. 286–96), shows that Roger of Wendover used Coggeshall (No. 1756) for the years 1187–95 only.

adscriptum [1451–61], ed. H. T. Riley, Registra Quorundam Abbatum Monasterii S. Albani, i. 1–433. Rolls Series. London, 1872.—Another edition, under the title Johannis de Whethamstede Chronicon, e Registro ejus, by Thomas Hearne, Duo Rerum Anglicarum Scriptores Veteres, ii. 311–540. Oxford, 1732.

Probably compiled by some unknown hand soon after Whethamstede's death. The work not merely deals with the affairs of the abbey, but is also a valuable contemporary account of the political history of England, especially during the years 1455-61. Blakeney formerly owned the manuscript. Vol. ii., pp. 3-24, of Riley's edition of the Registra contains letters written by Whethamstede, A.D. 1459-64. He was abbot of St. Albans, 1420-40, 1451-65.

1866. *Worcester, Florence of (d. 1118). Chronicon ex chronicis [A.D. 450-III7, with two continuations, to II4I and 1205], ed. Benjamin Thorpe. English Hist. Soc. 2 vols. London, 1848-49.—Other editions: from the creation to 1141 [by William Howard], London, 1502; from the creation to 1141. with the Flores Historiarum ascribed to Matthew of Westminster. Frankfort, 1601 (obsolete); from A.D. 450 to 1066, in Petrie's Monumenta, 522-615, London, 1848; from 1118 to 1140, The chronicle of John of Worcester, ed. J. R. H. Weaver, Oxford, 1908. pp. 72, with facsimile plates (a new edition of the continuation to 1141).—Extracts, 781-1140, ed. Waitz and Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), v. 564-8, xiii. 124-34. Hanover, 1844-81.—Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England, vol. ii. pt. i.: The chronicle of Florence of Worcester, with a continuation [to 1141]. London, 1853. Translated by Thomas Forester: The chronicle of Florence of Worcester, with two continuations [to 1295]. Bohn's Antiquarian Library. London, 1854.

The nucleus of this work is the general chronicle of Marianus Scotus, which ends in 1082 and was brought to England by direction of Robert, bishop of Hereford (see W. H. Stevenson, in English Historical Review, 1907, xxii. 72-84). Florence made many additions relating to England, using Bede, Asser, and the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle in a version that is no longer extant. After 1082 he becomes a valuable independent authority. The author of the continuation to 1141, John, a monk of Worcester, was a contemporary of the events which he records. The second continuation, down to 1152, is extracted from the chronicle of Henry of Huntingdon; the part 1152-1265 is taken from the chronicle of John of Tayster; and the remainder was written by John of Eversden. Sir Ernest Clarke's Bury Chroniclers of the 13th Century ([Bury], 1905, pp. 26) has some interesting brief remarks about the value of Tayster and Eversden, who were chroniclers of Bury St. Edmunds (see No. 1844). Florence was a monk of Worcester, concerning whose personal history very little is known. See Dictionary of National Biography, 1889, xviii. 89-90, xix. 335-6.

1867. Worcester, William of (d. circa 1480). Annales rerum Anglicarum [1324–1468, 1491], ed. Joseph Stevenson; Letters and Papers Illustrative of the Wars of the English in France during the Reign of Henry VI., ii. 743–93. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Another edition, by Thomas Hearne, Liber Niger Scaccarii, ii. 424–521. Oxford, 1728; reprinted, London, 1771.—William of Worcester's Collections respecting the wars of the English in France and Normandy [1423–52, written in French and English], ed. Joseph Stevenson, Letters and Papers Illustrative of the Wars of the English, etc., ii. 519–742. Rolls Series. London, 1864.

The Annales contains some useful information concerning the Wars of the Roses. There are no entries for the years 1469-90; and the account of the year 1491 looks like an addition by a later hand. Besides his Annales and Collections, William wrote a Latin itinerary, edited by James Nasmith, Itineraria Symonis Simeonis et Willelmi de Worcestre (Cambridge, 1778), 77-378. It is a sort of commonplace book, containing topographical and other information concerning various parts of England. The latest entries are for the year 1480. The part relating to Bristol is also printed in the Antiquities of Bristow, by James Dallaway, Bristol, 1834. William of Worcester, also called William Botoner, was a native of Bristol and an ardent adherent of the house of York. He was secretary to John Fastolf, the celebrated Norfolk knight See F. A. Gasquet, Old English Bible, 1908, pp. 247-75.

1868. *WYKES, THOMAS (d. circa 1293). Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes [1066–1289], ed. H. R. Luard, Annales Monastici, iv. 6–319. Rolls Series. London, 1869.—Another edition, in Gale's Scriptores Quinque, 21–118. Oxford, 1687.—Extracts, 1147–1288, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 484–502. Hanover, 1885.

Written in the abbey of Osney. To 1258 it closely resembles the Annals of Osney (No. 1693), the earlier portion of which Wykes probably used; their relations to each other are fully considered by Luard. Wykes also used Florence of Worcester, Diceto, Newburgh, and Matthew Paris; but from 1256 or 1262 onward he is an original authority. 'For the whole history of the campaigns of Lewes and Evesham, and the events immediately preceding and following them,' says Luard, 'his history must always be of the first importance.' This work is a notable exception to the rule that the chroniclers are partisans of Simon de Montfort: Wykes was an ardent royalist. He became a canon of Osney in 1282. See Dictionary of National Biography, 1900, lxiii. 232-3.

1869. WYNTOUN, ANDREW OF (d. circa 1425). The orygynale cronykil of Scotland [from the creation to 1408], ed. David Laing, in Historians of Scotland, vols. i., iii., ix. 3 vols. Edinburgh, 1872-79.—Another edition, by David Macpherson, 2 vols., London, 1795.—The original chronicle of Andrew of Wyntoun, ed. F. J. Amours. Vols. ii.-vi. Scottish Text Soc. Edinburgh, etc., 1903-08.

An English poem, completed about 1420. The author was a canon regular of the priory of St. Andrews, and prior of St. Serf's in Loch Leven. See W. A. Craigie, Wyntoun's Original Chronicle, in Scottish Review, 1897, xxx. 33-54; and his paper, The St. Andrews MS. of Wyntoun's Chronicle, in Anglia, 1898, xx. 363-80.

§ 49. LAW-WRITERS.

a. Principal Treatises, Nos. 1870-76.b. Short Tracts, Nos. 1877-83.

The Quadripartitus and other law-books of the first half of the twelfth century, examined in § 36b, are in large part undigested collections of Anglo-Saxon dooms, with some amendments made by William the Conqueror and his sons. The treatise of which Glanvill is the reputed author (No. 1874) marks considerable progress in the systematic exposition of English law, and embodies the legal reforms introduced by Henry II. In Henry III.'s reign Bracton, the greatest law-writer of medieval England, produced the first comprehensive survey of English law: No. 1870. In the last decade of the thirteenth century Fleta, Britton, and Thornton attempted to present Bracton's material in a more compendious form. Of these abridgments Britton's is the most valuable. The compendium, or Summa, of Gilbert Thornton, which seems to have been made in 1292, is not now extant: but a recent paper by G. E. Woodbine, on The Summa of Gilbert de Thornton (Law Quarterly Review, 1909, xxv. 44-52), contends that MS. Hale 135 in the library of Lincoln's Inn is a copy of Thornton's Summa. The author was chief justice of the king's bench. Our knowledge of the work is derived from Selden's dissertation on Fleta: No. 1872. To the reign of Edward I.

belong also the untrustworthy Mirror of Justices, Hengham's two little treatises on procedure, the precedents of John of Oxford, some of the tracts in Maitland's Court Baron, and perhaps the tractlet called Fet Assavoir: Nos. 1875, 1878–80, 1883. The fourteenth century is barren of important law-books: a few anonymous tracts of uncertain date, like the Modus Tenendi Curias, the Old Tenures, and the Novæ Narrationes (Nos. 1878, 1881–2), seem to belong to this period. Two great legal writers stand forth prominently in the fifteenth century, namely, Fortescue and Littleton (Nos. 1873, 1876); but their works are limited in scope.

For the Roman law in Glanvill, Bracton, Britton, and Fleta, see T. E. Scrutton, Influence of the Roman Law (No. 660), 74–124; and No. 1870. These four writers, together with Fortescue and Littleton, throw much light on social and constitutional as well as on legal history. Imperfect texts of Glanvill, Britton, Fleta, and the Mirror of Justices are printed in David Hoüard's Traités sur les Coutumes Anglo-Normandes, 4 vols., Rouen, 1776. We now have good editions of Britton, the Mirror, and Fortescue's Governance; but Glanvill, Bracton, Fleta, and Fortescue's De Laudibus need re-editing.

Some useful bibliographical notes will be found in J. G. Marvin's Legal Bibliography, Philadelphia, 1847. For Lyndwood and John of Ayton, see No. 622.

a. PRINCIPAL TREATISES.

√ 1870. *BRACTON, HENRY DE (d. 1268). Henrici de Bracton De legibus et consuetudinibus Angliæ libri quinque [with a translation], ed. Sir Travers Twiss. Rolls Series. 6 vols. London, 1878–83.—Earlier editions, 1569, 1640.—An elaborate new edition is in preparation by G. E. Woodbine.

The correct form of his name seems to have been Bratton. In the plea rolls from about 1245 to 1267 he is often called an itinerant justice, and in 1264 he was appointed dean of the cathedral church of Exeter. His work, which was compiled probably between 1250 and 1258, is the first comprehensive exposition of English law and by far the most important lawbook of medieval England. He borrowed some maxims and rules from the Roman law, chiefly from the Summa of Azo of Bologna. 'His law is English case law systematised by the aid of methods and principles which have been learnt from the civilians.' There has been considerable dispute as to the extent of the influence of the Roman law upon Bracton, but the substance of his work is doubtless based upon English precedents. A Note Book (No. 2032), comprising about 2000 cases taken from the plea rolls of England, seems to have been made by or for Bracton, and was used by him in the compilation of his treatise. A good edition of his law-book is needed; Twiss did not understand the pedigree of the manuscripts, and hence failed to distinguish Bracton's original work from later interpolations.

vith an English translation, ed. F. M. Nichols. 2 vols. Oxford, 1865.—Earlier editions, [circa 1530], 1640.—Translated by Robert Kelham: [Bk. i.], The ancient pleas of the crown. London, 1762.—Britton: an English translation and notes by F. M. Nichols, ed. S. E. Baldwin. Washington, 1901.

The name Britton is applied to a treatise compiled about 1291, which makes the law appear in the king's name, in the form of royal precepts. It is in large part an abridgment of Bracton, but the writer shows some originality in the arrangement of the material, and turns to account some of Edward I.'s statutes. Perhaps he also made use of Fleta. Nothing is known regarding the authorship of the work. It used to be ascribed to John Breton, bishop of Hereford; but that theory cannot be true, for he died in 1275. As Bracton's name was sometimes written Britton or Bretton, Selden surmised that the treatise obtained its name from the author out of whose work the material was mainly derived. The best account of Britton will be found in the introduction to Nichols's excellent edition.

× 1872. Fleta seu Commentarius juris Anglicani; accedit tractatulus Fet assavoir dictus; subjungitur etiam Joannis Seldeni Ad Fletam dissertatio historica. London, 1647; 2nd edition, 1685.—Fleta: liber primus [ed. Sir Thomas Clarke]. London, 1735.

This is the work of an anonymous author, compiled between 1290 and 1293; according to the preface, it was written in Fleet prison. It is an abridgment of Bracton, with some additions derived mainly from the statutes of Edward I. The most striking departure from Bracton's treatise is found in the account of manorial organisation, but even this part of Fleta exhibits little originality. Clarke's text, as far as it goes, is more accurate than that of either of the other two editions. The latter contain Selden's Latin dissertation on Fleta, which was translated in 1771 [by Robert Kelham].

1873. Fortescue, Sir John (d. 1476?). The works of sir John Fortescue. Collected by Thomas (Fortescue), lord Clermont. 2 vols. London, 1869. [Half-title: Sir John Fortescue, his life, works, and family history, in two volumes.]—An insertion, vol. i. pp. 57–90, was printed in 1877: De titulo Edwardi comitis Marchiæ, with a translation, ed. William Stubbs.—Vol. ii.: History of the family of Fortescue; 2nd edition, 1880.

Sir John Fortescue was chief justice of the king's bench and an ardent adherent of the house of Lancaster. Having been attainted for treason by Edward IV., he went into exile with Queen Margaret in 1463, and remained abroad until 1471. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Tewkesbury, was induced to retract all that he had written against Edward IV.'s title, and was pardoned by the king. He wrote several tracts in favour of the Lancastrian house (De Natura Legis Naturæ, etc.). His two principal works, the De Laudibus Legum Angliæ and the Governance of England, though concerned more with politics than with law, throw light on trial by jury and other legal institutions of England. In the De Laudibus, which was written between 1468 and 1470, in the form of a dialogue, for the instruction of Edward, son of Henry VI., Fortescue compares the law of England with that of the continent (especially with the civil law of France), and commends the advantages of the former. His chief object is to show the superiority of a constitutional over a despotic government. The various editions are: [1537]; with Robert Mulcaster's translation, 1567, 1573, 1575, 1578, 1599, 1609; with Mulcaster's translation and Selden's notes, 1616, 1660, 1672; with Francis Gregor's translation, 1737, 1741, 1775; Gregor's edition, with notes by Andrew Amos, 1825; with Gregor's translation, in Lord Clermont's Works of Fortescue, 1869; with Gregor's translation and Lord Clermont's Life of Fortescue, Cincinnati, 1874. A good edition is needed. See also Edward Waterhous, Fortescutus Illustratus, a Commentary on De Laudibus, London, 1663.

Fortescue's Governance of England, otherwise called The Difference between an Absolute and a Limited Monarchy, has been well edited by Charles Plummer, Oxford, 1885; 5 older editions, 1714, 1719, and 1869. It was written between 1471 and 1476, and is the earliest English treatise on constitutional history. Like the De Laudibus, it emphasises the advantages of a limited over an absolute monarchy. Measures are suggested for strengthening the crown and reducing the power of the nobles. Much attention is devoted to the reform of the royal revenues and to the reconstruction of the privy council. There is a good account of Fortescue's life and works in the introduction to Plummer's edition of the Governance. See also Stubbs, Constitutional History, § 365; Henry Morley, English Writers, 1890, vol. vi. ch. ix.; and A. M. Welch, Sir John Fortescue, Bristol and Glouc. Archæol. Soc., Trans., 1901, xxiv. 193-250.

✓ 1874. *GLANVILL, RANULF DE (d. 1190). Tractatus de legibus et consuetudinibus regni Angliæ. London, [1554].—Other editions: 1557, 1604, 1673, 1780; by George Phillips (No. 2824), 1828.—Translated by John Beames, London, 1812; another edition, with introduction by J. H. Beale, Jr., Washington, 1900.

Glanvill aided Henry II. in his military operations against the Scots and the Welsh, and was chief justiciar of England from 1180 to 1189. The Tractatus de Legibus is usually ascribed to him, but there is no good evidence to show that he wrote it. It may have been written by his nephew, Hubert Walter. The work was compiled near the end of Henry II.'s reign, 1187-89. It is the oldest of the legal classics of England, and marks a distinct advance over the unsystematic law-books of Henry I.'s time (§ 36b). 'With the exception of the Decretum, it was the earliest systematic treatise that appeared after the dissolution of the Roman Empire.' The author's primary object is to describe the procedure of the king's court, but he also throws much light upon other legal institutions. 'Glanville, who led the way,' says Reeves, 'is still entitled to the veneration always due to those who open the paths to science.' His work helped to make law and practice more nearly uniform throughout England along the lines marked out by Henry II.

The law-book known from its opening words as Regiam Majestatem is a Scotch version of Glanvill, compiled in the first half of the 13th century. The two works are collated in Acts of the Parliament of Scotland, 1844, i. 135-74, and the Regiam Majestatem is printed ibid., i. 597-641; cf. George Neilson, Trial by Combat, 1890, pp. 99-104. There is an excellent account of Glanvill by F. W. Maitland in Dictionary of National Biography, 1890, xxi. 413-15; also a sketch of him in Records of the Anglo-Norman House of Glanville, by W. U. S. Glanville-Richards, London, 1882, pp. 27-45. See also Maitland, Glanvill Revised, in Harvard Law Review, 1893 [1892], vi. 1-7 (reprinted in his Collected Papers, ii. 266-89), where he describes a revised version of Glanvill written, or perhaps only transcribed, by Robert Carpenter of Haresdale about 1265.

1875. Horne, Andrew (d. 1328). The mirror of justices [French text with a translation]. Edited by W. J. Whittaker, with an introduction by F. W. Maitland. Selden Soc. London, 1895.—Earlier edition: La somme appelle Mirrori des justices, 1642.—Translated by W[illiam] H[ughes], 1646; other editions, 1649, 1659, 1768, 1840. [Appended is Hughes's translation of Anthony Fitzherbert's Diversity of Courts, 1534.]—Translated by W. C. Robinson, Washington, 1903 [pp. 289-330, Hughes's translation of the Diversity of Courts].

This work, which was probably written in the reign of Edward I., perhaps between 1285 and 1290, is usually attributed to Andrew Horne, chamberlain of the city of London, but it is not certain that he was the author. It treats of all branches of the law, and proposes remedies for various legal abuses. The treatise abounds in falsehoods and myths. 'What then shall we say of this book? and what shall we call its author? Is he lawyer, antiquary, preacher, agitator, pedant, faddist, lunatic, romancer, liar? A little of all perhaps, but the romancer seems to predominate.' This quotation is taken from Maitland's introduction (to Whittaker's edition), where the best account of the Mirror will be found. See also I. S. Leadam, The Authorship of the Mirror of Justices, in Law Quarterly Review, 1897, xiii. 85–103; he believes that the work was transcribed under the direction of Andrew Horne, but that it was probably compiled by an earlier member of the Horne family.

1876. *LITTLETON, Sir THOMAS (d. 1481). Lyttleton: his treatise of Tenures, in French and English; a new edition, to which are added the ancient treatise of the Olde Tenures and the customs of Kent, ed. T. E. Tomlins. London, 1841. The first part of the Institutes of the laws of England, or a commentary upon Littleton. London, 1628. 19th edition [with valuable notes], by Francis Hargrave and Charles Butler, 2 vols., 1832; reprinted, Philadelphia, 1853.—Littleton's Tenures in English, ed. Eugene Wambaugh. Washington, 1903. [Bibliography, pp. lxvii.-lxxxiv.]

Littleton was appointed one of the judges in the court of common pleas in 1466. His treatise, which was probably compiled in 1474-75, contains a lucid account of the various tenures and estates of England. Coke calls it 'the most perfect and absolute work that ever was written in any human science.' It used to be called Tenores Novelli, to distinguish it from an older work on the same subject (No. 1882). The first part of Coke's Institutes, commonly designated 'Coke upon Littleton,' contains Littleton's text with a translation and an elaborate commentary; in this form the treatise long remained the chief authority on the English law of real property. Four editions of Littleton's text were printed without title-page in Henry VII.'s time, the first of them about 1481. The British Museum has twenty-nine editions, published between 1481 and 1639. See British Museum Catalogue, 1891, pp. 277-82; J. M. Rigg, in Dictionary of National Biography, 1893, xxxiii. 373-6; [K. E. Digby], in Encyclopædia Britannica, 1911, xvi. 793-4.

b. SHORT TRACTS.

All of these, except Nos. 1880 and 1883, are anonymous. For the Old Natura Brevium, see No. 2043.

1877. Brevia placitata: a thirteenth-century collection of precedents for pleadings in the king's courts, ed. G. J. Turner. University Press, Cambridge. In preparation.

Compiled late in the reign of Henry III. Each precedent usually comprises a writ, a count, and a plea.

1878. *Court baron (The), being precedents for use in seignorial and other local courts, together with select pleas from the court of Littleport [and a translation], ed. F. W. Maitland and W. P. Baildon. Selden Soc. London, 1891.

La court de baron, 19-67. Compiled late in the 13th century.

De placitis et curiis tenendis, 68-78. Perhaps written by John of Oxford, a monk of Luffield, toward the end of Henry III.'s reign or early in Edward I.'s.

Modus tenendi curias, 79-92. Compiled about 1307.

Modus tenendi curias, 93-106. Professes to relate what happened in certain imaginary courts in 14-16 Edward III.; written about 1342, partly in French and partly in Latin.

Pleas at Littleport, 107-47. See No. 2283.

Cf. N. J. Hone, A Mannor and Court Baron (No. 547).

✓ 1879. Fet assavoir, in Fleta (No. 1872), 446-52. London, 1647.—Also printed at the end of the second edition of Fleta, 1685; and by Woodbine (No. 1879a).

A very short French tract on procedure, the date and author of which are unknown. Reeves, English Law, ch. xi., seems to ascribe it to the reign of Edward I.

✓ 1879a. Four thirteenth-century law tracts, ed. G. E. Woodbine. New Haven, etc., 1910.

Fet asaver, 53-115. Judicium essoniorum, 116-42. Modus componendi brevia, 143-62. Exceptiones ad cassandum brevia, 163-83.

The editor believes that some of these anonymous tracts may have been written by Hengham (No. 1880).

1880. HENGHAM, RALPH DE (d. 1311). Radulphi de Hengham Summæ, Magna Hengham et Parva vulgo nuncupatæ. [Printed with Fortescue's De Laudibus.] London, 1616.—Reprinted [with the De Laudibus], 1660, 1672, 1737, 1741, 1775.

Hengham Magna and Hengham Parva are two little treatises on procedure, dealing with essoins, defaults, writs, etc. Hengham, chief justice of the king's bench, was convicted of false judgment in 1289-90; in 1301 he was appointed chief justice of the court of common pleas. See also No. 1879a:

1881. [Novæ narrationes.] Herein is conteined the booke called Novæ narrationes, the booke called Articuli ad Novas narrationes, and the booke of Diversities of courtes. London, 1561.

The French tract called Novæ Narrationes deals with the method of pleading, and is usually assigned to the reign of Edward III. It was first printed about 1515.

1882. Olde teners newly corrected. London, 1525.—Two earlier editions, without title-page; other editions, 1528, 1530, 1532, 1538, etc., and in the later editions of Coke upon Littleton (No. 1876).

A meagre French tract of uncertain date, ascribed to the reign of Edward III. It is called Old Tenures to distinguish it from Littleton's work on the same subject.

✓ 1883. [OXFORD, JOHN OF.] A conveyancer in the thirteenth century. By F. W. Maitland. Law Quarterly Review, vii. 63–69. London, 1891.—Reprinted in Maitland's Collected Papers (No. 656a), ii. 190–201. Cambridge, 1911.

Maitland here gives an account of a collection of precedents or forms of conveyancing, written by John of Oxford, a monk of Luffield priory, early in the reign of Edward I. For a paper giving many examples in extenso, see T. F. Kirby, Some Notes on Fourteenth Century Conveyancing, Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, 1904, lix. 255-80. See No. 1878.

- g. Memoranda, Originalia, and Fine Rolls, Nos. 1985-92.
- h. Miscellaneous: Ministers' Accounts, etc., Nos. 1993-99.

There is an account of the chief revenue rolls in F. S. Thomas's Ancient Exchequer (London, 1848), 61-92. See also Joseph Redington's Account of the Miscellaneous Records of the Queen's Remembrancer, Deputy Keeper's Reports, 1879, xl. 467-79; Martin's Index and Palgrave's Kalendars (Nos. 475, 479); and, for modern works on the exchequer and revenue, §§ 18, 66.

a. DOMESDAY BOOK AND SUPPLEMENTARY SURVEYS.

Domesday Book was compiled in 1086. The material was collected by royal commissioners, probably in the shire courts, from the verdicts of local juries. This information was reduced to writing, and, having been rearranged and digested, was embodied in two volumes usually designated the Exchequer Domesday. The actual survey seems to have been made hundred by hundred, whereas Domesday Book, excepting Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk, contains only abstracts of the survey rearranged under the names of tenants-in-chief: all the lands of each tenant-in-chief of the crown are given under his name, no matter in what hundred they may be. The first volume, sometimes called Great Domesday, containing 382 folios, includes thirty counties; the second, called Little Domesday, a smaller volume of 450 folios, comprises longer reports of Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk. Round believes that the Little Domesday was 'a first attempt at the codification of the returns,' and that a new plan of arrangement was adopted for Great Domesday. The counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmorland, and Durham are not included in the survey, but parts of Cumberland and Westmorland are comprised in Yorkshire. Lancashire and Rutland were not yet shires, but their area is dealt with under Yorkshire, Cheshire, and Northamptonshire. 'Domesday is a geld book, a tax book. Geldability, actual or potential, is its main theme.' The survey was intended primarily to ascertain the assessments for the payment of the king's geld and to prevent the evasion of its payment. Incidentally it furnishes a vast mass of details regarding the classes of society, land tenures, social life, and legal institutions of England, before and after the Norman Conquest.

The Exchequer Domesday is supplemented by other records, which may be divided into three groups:—

- 1. The Exon Domesday (a survey of the five south-western shires), the Inquest of Ely, and the Inquest of Cambridgeshire (Nos. 1884, 1893-6, 1909, 1912). These records seem to be fuller copies or digests of the original returns of the royal commissioners from which the Exchequer Domesday was compiled.
- 2. The geld inquests of Northamptonshire and the five southwestern counties (Nos. 1884, 1891, 1895, 1906, 1909). They record two assessments of Danegeld made between 1066 and 1084.
- 3. Various local surveys of the twelfth century, notably Liber Winton, Boldon Book (Nos. 1898, 1901), and four surveys which seem to be connected with the assessment of Danegeld in Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire, and Worcestershire (Nos. 1903–4, 1907, 1913).

Among the older works on Domesday, those deserving particular mention are two brief essays by P. C. Webb, one entitled A Short Account of some Particulars concerning Domesday, 1756, and the other on Danegeld (No. 1590); Robert Kelham's Domesday Book Illustrated, 1788; Ellis's Introduction (No. 1886); J. F. Morgan's England under the Norman Occupation (No. 2821); Freeman's Norman Conquest, vol. v. ch. xxii. and appendix. The scholarly works of Eyton (Nos. 1887, 1897, 1909-10) have added much to our knowledge of the subject; and a still greater advance in the scientific study of the survey has been made in recent years by the researches of Maitland and Round (Nos. 1889, 1891). A brief contemporary account of the survey is printed by W. H. Stevenson in the English Historical Review, 1907, xxii. 72-84; and Vinogradoff's English Society and Stenton's Manorial Structure (Nos. 1240a, 1562) are essentially studies of Domesday. For incomplete bibliographies of the Domesday literature, see Nos. For Domesday boroughs and hundreds, see Nos. 1885, 1885a. 1563, 1571.

The extensions and translations of the following portions of Domesday are useful, especially for the identification of placenames:—

Suffolk (extension and translation), by J[ohn] H[ervey]: No. 1910a.

Surrey, 1862.

Sussex, by W. D. Parish: No. 1911.

Warwickshire, by William Reader, 1835; 2nd ed., by E. P. Shirley, [1879].

Wiltshire, by W. H. [R.] Jones: No. 1912.

Worcestershire [by W. B. Sanders], 1864.

Yorkshire (translation only), by R. H. Skaife: No. 1913a.

For the full titles of these works, see the printed catalogue of the library of the British Museum under 'Domesday Book.' The most valuable of them are given below under the names of the counties (Nos. 1892–1914a). A text or a translation, with introduction, map, and index, to the Domesday survey of each county; is appearing in the Victoria History of the Counties of England (No. 839). For the following counties the survey has already been published: Bedfordshire, Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, Cumberland, Derby, Devon, Essex, Hampshire, Herefordshire, Hertfordshire, Lancashire, Leicestershire, Norfolk, Northamptonshire, Nottinghamshire, Rutland, Shropshire, Somerset, Suffolk, Surrey, Sussex, Warwickshire, Worcestershire, and Yorkshire. The introductions (many of them by J. H. Round) are of more than local interest.

Round propounds the new theory that the assessment of land in Domesday is based on the five-hide unit in south England and on the six carucate unit among the Danes in the north. He also throws light on other problems: for example, on the relations of the inquests of Ely and Cambridgeshire to the original returns of the Domesday jurors. In the English Historical Review, 1900, xv. 293-302, he criticises Maitland's definition of the Domesday manor (No. 1889). Round's most recent discussions of Domesday are to be found in his introductions to the Domesday portions of the Victoria county histories. Cf. Evelyn White, with transcript of an unpublished translation made by William Bawdwen in 1867.] East Anglian, 3rd series, vols. xi.-xii. passim. Norwich, etc., 1905-08; separately printed, 1910.

- 1893. *Inquisitio comitatus Cantabrigiensis; subjicitur Inquisitio Eliensis: ed. N. E. S. A. Hamilton. Royal Soc. of Literature. London, 1876.

The Inquest of Cambridgeshire seems to be a copy of the original returns from which Domesday was compiled. This copy was made in the latter part of the 12th century, and it deals with the holders of lands in Cambridgeshire. Hamilton prints the texts of the Inquest and Domesday in parallel columns.

The Inquest of Ely (Hamilton, pp. 97-195) relates to the lands of Ely abbey in Cambridgeshire, Hertfordshire, Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Huntingdonshire. Round believes that it is copied in part from the original returns of the Domesday jurors and in part from the second volume of the Exchequer Domesday. Hamilton's edition is better than Ellis's (No. 1884).

Durham.

1898. Boldon buke: a survey of the possessions of the see of Durham made by order of bishop Hugh Pudsey in 1183, with a translation, ed. William Greenwell. Surtees Soc. Durham, 1852.

—Translated, with critical introduction, by G. T. Lapsley, in Victoria History of Durham (No. 839), i. 259-341. London, 1905.

This survey enumerates various services and rents due to the bishop; it is called Boldon Book because the services of the village of Boldon are often referred to as a standard. There is another edition, by Ellis (No. 1884). Lapsley's text is based on a collation of the MSS. used by Ellis and Greenwell with the older Stowe MS., which they had not seen. Greenwell, in his appendix, prints extracts from the pipe rolls of Henry I., Richard I., and John, with Bishop Bek's great roll of receipts, A.D. 1309, and several charters.

Hampshire.

1901. Liber Winton, ed. Henry Ellis, Domesday Book (No. 1884), iv. 529-62. Record Com. [London], 1816.

The Liber Winton, which is preserved in the library of the Society of Antiquaries of London, comprises two distinct records. The first is a survey of royal lands in Winchester, with the landgavel and geld paid in the time of Edward the Confessor and Henry I.; it was made between 1103 and 1115, by order of the king, from the verdicts of eighty-six burgesses. The second is an inquest of all lands in Winchester, made in 1148 by command of the bishop of Winchester. See Round's account of the Winchester survey, in Victoria History of Hampshire (No. 839), i. 527-37.

Leicestershire.

1903. The Leicestershire survey (1124-29), ed. J. H. Round, Feudal England, 197-203. London, 1895.—Survey of Leicestershire [with a photographic copy. Translated by W. K. Boyd.] Leicestersh. Archit. and Archæol. Soc., Trans., viii. 179-83. Leicester, 1896.—Leicestershire survey [with map]. Translated by F. M. Stenton, in Victoria History of Leicestershire (No. 839), i. 339-54. London, 1907.

This survey deals with the land-owners of various hundreds, vill by vill, and was probably compiled in connection with the assessment of a geld.

Lincolnshire.

1904. The Lincolnshire survey, temp. Hen. I. [facsimile of the whole text, with a translation], ed. James Greenstreet. London, 1884. pp. 37.—Translated by R. E. C. Waters: A roll of the owners of land in the parts of Lindsey in Lincolnshire, compared with the Domesday survey of Lindsey. Reprinted from the Associated Architectural Societies' Reports and Papers, 1882, vol. xvi. pt. ii. Lincoln, [1883]. pp. 65.

This survey, made in 1115-18 for the assessment of a geld, gives the names of the tenants-in-chief of the crown, with the locality and extent of their estates, and in some cases the names of their under-tenants. See Round, Feudal England (No. 1891), 181-95.

Northamptonshire.

1906. The Northamptonshire geld roll, ed. Henry Ellis, Introduction to Domesday (No. 1884), i. 184-7. [London], 1833.

This Anglo-Saxon document records a levy of Danegeld between 1066 and 1075. See Round, Feudal England (No. 1891), 147-56.

1907. The Northamptonshire survey, ed. J. H. Round, Feudal England, 215–24. London, 1895.—Translated by J. H. Round, in Victoria History of Northamptonshire (No. 839), i. 357–92. Westminster, 1902.

In his Feudal England Round prints only about a fifth of the survey, which is somewhat similar to that of Leicestershire (No. 1903). He believes that it 'was originally made under Henry I., and was subsequently corrected here and there, to bring the entries up to date, down to the days of Henry II.' See also his essay on the Hidation of Northamptonshire, in English Historical Review, 1900, xv. 78-86; and F. ### Worcestershire.

1913. The Worcestershire survey, temp. Hen. I., in Thomas Hearne's edition of Heming's Chartularium Ecclesiæ Wigorniensis, 313–16. Oxford, 1723.

This survey seems to have been made in consequence of a dispute between the sheriff of the shire and the church of Worcester as to the number of hides in the county for which that church should be rated. See Round, Feudal England (No. 1891), 169-80; also his translation of 'some early Worcestershire surveys,' appended to his edition of the Domesday survey in Victoria History of Worcestershire (No. 839), i. 324-31.

b. THE DIALOGUS AND EXCHEQUER BOOKS.

The Black Book and the Red Book of the Exchequer (Nos. 1916-17) both contain the Dialogus de Scaccario (No. 1915). The 'cartæ' of 1166 and other portions of the Red Book are also in the 'Little' Black Book (No. 1916), and some entries in the latter are also found in the Black Book. The 'cartæ' of 1166 were returns made to the crown by the barons, stating the number of knights actually enfeoffed by each baron and his predecessors, with the number of men or 'milites' whose service each feoffee owed to the baron. This information enabled the king to provide a new feudal assessment. See Round, Feudal England, 236-46.

1915. *Dialogus de scaccario. Edited by Thomas Madox, in the appendix to his History of the Exchequer. London, 1711; 2nd edition, 1769.—Extracts, without the notes, in Stubbs's Select Charters, 199-241. 9th edition. Oxford, 1913.—Best edition: De necessariis observantiis scaccarii dialogus, commonly called Dialogus de scaccario, ed. Arthur Hughes, C. G. Crump, and C. Johnson. Oxford, 1902.—Translated by a gentleman of the Inner Temple [John Rayner]: The ancient dialogue of the exchequer. London, 1758.—A better translation in E. F. Henderson's Select Historical Documents of the Middle Ages, 20-134. London, etc., 1892.

Madox constructed his edition from the texts of the Black Book and Red Book (Nos. 1916–17). The Dialogus, which was completed in 1178 or 1179, was written by Richard Fitz-Neal, treasurer of England, 1158–98, and bishop of London, 1189–98. It is in the form of a dialogue between a master and his disciple, and consists of two books. The first book describes the organisation of the exchequer, its writs and rolls, and the functions of its officers. The second book treats of proceedings in the exchequer, the collection of debts, the manner in which accounts were rendered by the sheriffs, and the various sources of royal revenue. The treatise also contains much information regarding other institutions. See F. Liebermann, Einleitung in den Dialogus de Scaccario, Göttingen, 1875; the introduction to the Oxford edition of the Dialogus; and Poole (No. 2959b).

1916. Liber niger scaccarii, ed. Thomas Hearne. 2 vols. Oxford, 1728; 2nd edition, London, 1771; reprinted, 1774.

This is the Liber Niger Parvus, which was probably compiled in the first decade of the 13th century by Alexander de Swereford. It contains three treaties of Henry I. and Henry II. with the count of Flanders, four bulls of Pope Alexander III., the 'cartæ' of 1166, the Constitutio Domus Regis (circa 1135), various charters, etc. This book should not be confused with the unprinted Liber Niger which contains the Dialogus de Scaccario and miscellaneous entries relating to the exchequer from 19 Edward II. to 1715. A part of the contents of both Black Books is also found in the Liber Rubeus (No. 1917).

See George Wrottesley, The Liber Niger Scaccarii, Wm. Salt Archæol. Soc., Collections, Birmingham, [1881], i. 145-240; Henry Barkly, Remarks on the Liber Niger, Bristol and Glouc. Archæol. Soc., Trans., [1890], xiv. 285-320. These two papers relate to the Little Black Book, and deal mainly with the 'cartæ' of 1166, for Staffordshire and Gloucestershire respectively. See also No. 1961.

1917. *[Liber rubeus de scaccario]: the red book of the exchequer, ed. Hubert Hall. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1896.

The earlier portion of this work was compiled about A.D. 1230 by Alexander de Swereford; many additions were made from time to time, some of them as late as the 16th century. It contains charters, inquisitions, statutes, correspondence, surveys, fiscal accounts, exchequer precedents, papal bulls, etc. Hall prints many of the most important documents and a table of contents of the MS. volume. Among the valuable pieces which he omits are the Leges Henrici Primi (No. 1406) and the Dialogus de Scaccario. More than two-thirds of the material in his edition consists of records relating to feudal tenures, mainly of the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John: for example, the 'cartæ' of 1166, lists of persons subject to the payment of scutage, A.D. 1156-1252, lists of knights' fees under the first four Angevin kings, etc. Volume iii. contains the Constitutio Domus Regis (circa 1135), privileges and exemptions of exchequer officers, three royal ordinances of 1323-26 which aim to reform the exchequer administration, a fourteenth-century treatise on the mint, etc. These documents throw light on the fiscal machinery of the 13th and 14th centuries, and the editor's elaborate preface gives much information regarding scutage, tenures, the exchequer administration, and other topics. The severe criticism of this edition in J. H. Round's Studies on the Red Book of the Exchequer, London, 1898, pp. 91, is answered in Hall's Red Book of the Exchequer, a Reply to Mr. J. H. Round, London, 1898, pp. 18. See also Hall, The English Historical Review and the Red Book of the Exchequer, a letter to S. R. Gardiner, dated Feb. 1, 1899, pp. 15.

Joseph Hunter's Three Catalogues, London, 1838, reprinted from the appendix of the Record Commissioners' report of 1837, describes the contents of the Red Book. For the portion relating to the counties of Nottingham and Derby, see Yeatman, Feudal History of Derby (No. 871), i. 265-364.

1918. Table of contents of the red book [of the Irish exchequer]. Deputy Keeper's Reports, Ireland, xxiv. 96-99. Dublin, 1892.

The earliest entries are of the time of John and Henry III. See J. F. Ferguson, A Calendar of the Contents of the Red Book of the Irish Exchequer, Kilkenny and South-East of Ireland Archæol. Soc., Proceedings (Dublin, 1856), iii. 35-52.

c. PIPE ROLLS.

The pipe rolls, also called annual or great rolls of the exchequer, record the yearly accounts of the sheriffs and other debtors of the crown as audited in the upper exchequer, and thus display the amount of the royal revenue derived from various sources. particularly from the king's farm, the king's geld, and from fines imposed by judicial proceedings. It has been conjectured that they were called pipe rolls either from their resemblance to the section of a drain pipe or because all the revenues or sheriffs' accounts flowed through them, as through a conduit, into the treasury. Both explanations are unsatisfactory. (English Historical Review, 1911, xxvi. 329-30) suggests that the name is derived from the individual membranes, or pipes, of which the roll was made up. The series begins in 31 Henry I. (1130), but there is a gap from that year to 2 Henry II.; then there is a roll for each year until 1832, excepting I Henry III. and 7 Henry IV. In all there are 676 rolls, forming one of the most nearly complete and also one of the most valuable series of national records. They are particularly useful for the legal and constitutional history of the twelfth century, because so few other records of that period are extant.

There are also in the Public Record Office 612 duplicates or 'antigraphs' of the pipe rolls, called chancellors' rolls, 9 Henry II.—3 William IV. They were in charge of the chancellor, and served as a check on the pipe rolls, which were in the custody of the treasurer.

d. EXPENDITURE AND RECEIPT ROLLS.

These rolls include:-

- I. Pells of issue and receipt ('pelles exitus,' 'pelles introitus'), journals of daily receipts and expenditures without distinction of counties, made up by the clerk of the pells in the pells' office, a part of the lower exchequer. The pells' issue rolls contain entries of payments made out of the crown revenues by the exchequer officials. They extend from 6 Henry III. to 19 Edward IV., and from 9 Elizabeth to 1797; in 1797 the form of the record was changed from rolls to books. The pells' receipt rolls record revenues paid into the exchequer, 14 John-22 George III.; from 1782 onward the entries are in receipt books. Abstracts of both kinds of pells, for various reigns, will be found in Ramsay's papers in the Antiquary (No. 2960). The series of auditors' issue and receipt rolls contains matter similar to that which is entered in the pells; the one series of rolls served as a check on the other.
- 2. Receipt rolls, which seem to have been in use from the time of Henry II. to that of Henry III. Like the pells, they were made up in the lower exchequer; but they were term rolls (not journals of daily accounts), with the entries arranged under counties, a feature in which they resemble the pipe rolls. A portion of a single roll (No. 1934) has survived.
- 3. Liberate rolls, 2 John-14 Henry VI., which contain writs issued by the chancery directing exchequer officers to 'deliver' or pay out of the treasury sums of money for salaries and other expenses of the crown.
- 4. Præstita rolls, John-James I., in which are entered payments made from the treasury to royal officers and others by way of imprest, advance, or accommodation, and charged to the account of the persons receiving them.
- 5. Misæ rolls, only two of which are extant, namely those of 11 and 14 John (Nos. 1930, 1935). They contain an account of the daily expenses of the king's court, and are closely related to the wardrobe accounts (§ 50e).

Various Irish receipt rolls and treasurers' accounts of Edward I.'s reign are printed in the Calendar of Documents relating to Ireland (No. 2127).

1930. Documents illustrative of English history in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, from the records of the queen's remembrancer, ed. Henry Cole. Record Com. London, 1844 [printed 1835].

Rotulus misæ, 14 John, 231-69. | Rotulus de præstito, 7 John, 270-76.

- r931. Extracts from the liberate rolls relative to [the repayment of] loans supplied by Italian merchants to the kings of England in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, with an introductory memoir by E. A. Bond, ed. C. G. Young. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxviii. 207-326. London, 1840.
- 1932. Issue roll of Thomas de Brantingham, treasurer of England, 44 Edward III., A.D. 1370. Translated by Frederick Devon. London, 1835.

Translation only.

1933. Issues of the exchequer [extracts, 10 Hen. III.-39 Hen. VI.; with an appendix, 1 Edw. IV.-45 Eliz.]. Translated by Frederick Devon. London, 1837.

Translation only. The extracts 10-26 Henry III. are from the liberate rolls. Devon also translated extracts from later issue rolls: Issues of the Exchequer during the Reign of James I., London, 1836. These two volumes and No. 1932 were published under the direction of the comptroller of the receipt of the exchequer.

1934. Receipt roll of the exchequer for Michaelmas term, 1185: a fragment of a unique record, reproduced in thirty-one plates, ed. Hubert Hall. London, 1899. pp. 37.

This was apparently one of a series of receipt rolls made up in the lower exchequer twice a year, at the Easter and Michaelmas sessions; of this series only fragments are now extant. The roll of 1185 seems to have recorded all sums received at the lower exchequer, while the pipe rolls recorded 'only such as were paid on account or were connected with a permanent liability.' Single payments made in full, such as fines and amercements, were usually entered in the receipt roll.

1935. Rotuli de liberate ac de misis et præstitis regnante Johanne, ed. T. D. Hardy. Record Com. London, 1844.

Contains liberate rolls, 2, 3, 5 John, the misæ roll of 11 John, and the præstita roll of 12 John. See also Liberate Rolls, Henry III., relating to Staffordshire, in Collections of the Wm. Salt Archæological Society, 1911, [xiv.] 1-25. A calendar of the liberate rolls is soon to appear in the Rolls Series.

e. WARDROBE AND HOUSEHOLD ACCOUNTS, ETC.

'The King's Wardrobe . . . was anciently one of the Royal Treasuries into which certain portions of the revenues of the Crown were paid, and from which disbursements were made, as well for military and naval as for civil and domestic expenses.' Prominent among these disbursements were the ordinary expenses of the royal family. The treasurer of the king's wardrobe also kept the king's money, jewels, and private receipts, which were entered in a roll, while another roll contained the daily expenses of the royal household. Besides the king's wardrobe, of which the great wardrobe and the privy wardrobe were departments, there were several minor wardrobes. The wardrobe accounts extend from John to 56 George III. The most valuable in print is the Liber Quotidianus of 28 Edward I. (No. 1940a). A wardrobe account of 10–13 Edward I. is appended to Henry Ellis's edition of John of Oxenedes (No. 1828), pp. 326–36; and fragments of such accounts are found in Stevenson's Documents (No. 2133). See also Nos. 2766, 2889; and T. F. Tout, The Chief Officers of the King's Wardrobe to 1399, in English Historical Review, 1909, xxiv. 496–505. Tout is preparing an elaborate study of the wardrobe.

See also the misæ rolls (Nos. 1930, 1935), which are closely related to the wardrobe accounts. For household books of nobles and prelates, see  $\S 58b$ .

f. TAXATION OR SUBSIDY ROLLS.

These rolls begin in Henry III.'s reign, and relate to carucages, scutages, feudal aids, tallages, poll-taxes, tenths, fifteenths, and other fractions of moveables, etc. They are particularly valuable for genealogical purposes, especially the rolls of 23 Edward I., 1 and 6 Edward III. (taxes on moveables), and the poll-tax rolls of 51 Edward III. and 2 and 4 Richard II. The tax on moveables was introduced by Henry II. in 1188, and became prominent in the thirteenth century; fragmentary rolls, temp. Hen. III., for Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Kent, Lancashire, and Wilts are in the Public Record Office, but the earliest in print belong to the time of Edward I. The scutage rolls, 16 John-20 Edward III. (Nos. 1946, 1957, 2093a), as a rule give the names of persons who were exempted from the payment of scutage because they had performed their military service or had compounded for it by paying a fine. Scutage, and feudal aids (Nos. 1947, 1951, etc.), were levied on knights' fees. The Book of Aids is a MS. volume in the Public Record Office which gives details regarding an aid for the knighting of the Black Prince, 20 Edward III., and regarding another aid for the marriage of the king's eldest daughter, 3 Henry IV., together with a description of the knights' fees on which these aids were imposed: see Nos. 871, 996, 1951, 1955, 1961, 2157, 2169. For aids, see also § 55. The poll-tax rolls (Nos. 1949-50, 1963-4, 1966, 1969, 1973, 1980a, 1981) begin in 51 Edward III.

See F. G. Davenport, List of Materials for Manorial History (No. 64), p. 32, for some printed subsidies not mentioned below; Palgrave's Parliamentary Writs (No. 2004), especially vol. ii. pt. ii., and the Red Book of the Exchequer (No. 1917), for documents relating to scutage; Rotuli Parliamentorum (No. 2010), i. 228-65, for valuable rolls of a seventh and fifteenth levied in Colchester, 24 and 29 Edward I. (cf. No. 1950d); the History of Northumberland (No. 1041), for extracts from the roll of a tenth in 1296. On the old land-tax, or Danegeld, see § 50a; on clerical subsidies, § 56b.

General.

1946. BIRD, S. R. [SCARGILL]. The scutage and marshal's rolls. Genealogist, new series, i. 65-76. London, 1884.

Contains lists of these rolls (also printed in his Guide to the Public Records, 2nd edition, 23-24), and the scutage roll of 6 Henry III. in full. See also No. 2093a.

1947. Inventory or calendar of accounts, assessments, etc. [4 Hen. III.-38 Hen. VIII.]. Deputy Keeper's Reports, ii. app. ii. 136-89, iii. app. ii. 3-104. London, 1841-42.

A calendar of tenths, fifteenths, etc., aids, tallages, reliefs, and the like. Continued to 27 Elizabeth, ibid., 1843-44, reports iv.-v.

1948. *Nonarum inquisitiones temp. regis Edwardi III. Record Com. [London], 1807.

The record of a subsidy of a ninth of corn, wool, and lambs in every rural parish, a ninth of moveables in boroughs, and a fifteenth of the moveables of foreign merchants. These nonæ rolls of 14-15 Edward III. also specify the value of every benefice, and state how far it exceeded or fell short of the valuation of Pope Nicholas in 1292 (No. 2211); the ninth of corn, wool, and lambs in 1340 was considered worth as much as the tenth of those commodities in 1292. Not all these rolls of 14-15 Edward III. have yet been printed.

1949. Subsidy roll of 51 Edward III., ed. John Topham. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, vii. 337-47. London, 1785.

Contains, besides the poll-tax of 51 Edward III., a tenth and fifteenth, 47 Edward III.; but these records give only the total sums of money levied in various counties and boroughs.

Cambridgeshire.

g. MEMORANDA, ORIGINALIA, AND FINE ROLLS.

The memoranda rolls, 10 Richard I.-1848, comprise two distinct series, those of the king's remembrancer and those of the treasurer's remembrancer. These 'memoratores' prepared the business which was to come before the barons of the exchequer. and called the attention of the latter to important matters concerning the revenue. Their rolls contain valuable memoranda relating to a great variety of matters, many of which are also recorded in other rolls, such as proceedings for the recovery of debts due to the crown, returns of commissions of inquiry, charters and letters patent, sheriffs' accounts, etc. Prior to I Henry III. there are only two memoranda rolls, to Richard I.-I John. and 12 John. The duties of the remembrancers are fully set forth in Hubert Hall's edition of the Red Book of the Exchequer (No. 1917), 863-87. For Irish exchequer memoranda of the reign of Edward I.; see Mary Bateson, in English Historical Review, 1903, xviii. 497-513; and cf. Round's note on Decies and Desmond, ibid., 709.

The treasurer's remembrancer also had charge of the originalia rolls, Henry III.—1837 (No. 1992), in which are entered the estreats transmitted from the chancery to the exchequer in order to inform the latter regarding the chancery transactions which affected the revenue in any way. These estreats comprise 'all manner of charters, commissions, letters patent, and letters close, whereby farms, rents, and accounts may be rendered at the exchequer; and likewise the homages and fealties of all those who shall have performed them to the king the same year and ought to render a relief to him; and all manner of fines made during the same time in the chancery': Hall's Red Book, 879.

The fine rolls, I John-23 Charles I. (No. 1990), 'take their name from the enrolment on them of fines or payments made for writs, grants, licences, pardons and exemptions of various kinds.' They are 'a compilation of three entirely different and unrelated classes ' of chancery enrolments: (1) payments for writs, brief notes that give little or no information about the nature of the writs themselves; (2) 'grossi fines,' which are mainly 'notes of enrolments on the patent and charter rolls,' consisting 'almost wholly of fines made for licences and pardons for the alienation and acquisition of land, for commissions of over and terminer. and for charters and confirmations of charters'; (3, the most important class) 'enrolments of documents issued under the great seal in the form both of letters patent and of letters close, relating to matters in which the crown had some direct or indirect financial interest.' As entries of payments made to the king by way of oblation, these rolls were at first called oblate rolls; but the name fell into disuse after the reign of John. On the importance of fines as a source of royal revenue, see Madox, History of the Exchequer (No. 2959), chs. xi.-xiii.

h. MISCELLANEOUS: MINISTERS' ACCOUNTS, ETC.

The ministers' accounts, Henry III.—Charles II., were the original accounts of bailiffs, reeves, farmers, receivers, and other ministers; or officers, appointed to collect the issues of royal manors and lands, in various parts of England, Ireland, and Wales, which were not included in the yearly farms of the sheriffs. These accounts were at first entered in the pipe rolls, but from 42 Edward III. onward in a distinct series of rolls called foreign accounts (i.e. foreign to the business of the sheriffs), which may be regarded as a digest of the detailed ministers' accounts. The latter include many surveys and rentals that give valuable particulars regarding social and manorial life; also accounts of the English possessions of the knights templars in England, drawn up in the time of Edward II.

Some customs accounts are edited by Alexander Bugge in Diplomatarium Norvegicum, 1910 (No. 2130a). A selected series of such accounts is in preparation by N. S. B. Gras (cf. No. 2953a).

An important list of crown debtors, circa 1166, is printed by Jenkinson (No. 3223a).

Some valuable documents of the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. concerning the mint, and a fourteenth-century tract on the same subject, will be found in Hubert Hall's edition of the Red Book (No. 1917), 979-1010, 1072-81.

§ 51. PRIVY COUNCIL, PARLIAMENT, AND LEGISLATION.

- a. Writs, Petitions, and Proceedings, Nos. 2000-2011.
- b. Legislative Acts, Nos. 2012-27.
- c. Modus Tenendi Parliamentum, Nos. 2028-31.

For the modern literature relating to the privy council, parliament, etc., see §§ 18, 64, 65. The Peers' Reports (No. 2944) contain important documents concerning parliamentary history, and the lists of members of parliament (No. 2945) are helpful to the historical investigator.

a. WRITS, PETITIONS, AND PROCEEDINGS.

The principal classes of records falling under this head are:—

- I. Writs for the election of members of the house of commons, with the returns thereto, 3 Edward I. onward; and writs summoning peers to parliament, enrolled on the dorse of the close rolls until Henry VIII.'s reign. The chief collections are those of Dugdale, Palgrave, Prynne, and the Peers' Reports (Nos. 2003-4, 2006, 2944). For Ireland, see Lynch's treatise (No. 3013).
- 2. Original petitions, Edward I.—Henry VII., comprising petitions to the king, the council, parliament, the chancellor in his executive capacity, and to other officers of state. Many of the petitions to parliament, with the answers thereto, are printed in the Rotuli Parliamentorum (No. 2010); see also North Riding Record Soc., Records, new series, 1896, iii. 229–59; and Nos. 2002, 2007–II, 2570.
- 3. The rolls of parliament (Nos. 2002, 2008, 2010-II), in which from 33 Edward I. to I Richard III. are entered the transactions of parliament, with various petitions or bills. The statutes, which used to be enrolled on the statute rolls, are entered in the rolls of parliament since I Richard III., side by side with the proceedings; but in the sixteenth century the journals of the two houses become the ordinary minute-books of transactions, and from the seventeenth century onward the parliament rolls consist of legislative acts only. The Vetus Codex, or Black Book of the Tower, contains ancient transcripts of parliament rolls. 18-35 Edward I. and 12 Edward II.; it was printed by Ryley in 1661 (No. 2011).

4. The proceedings, or acts, of the privy council (Nos. 2005. 2000). Much information concerning the business transacted by this body in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries may be gleaned from the patent, close, and coram rege rolls. Formal minutes of its transactions do not seem to have been kept before the reign of Richard II., when the separation of the council from parliament was completed. Many of the records (originals and transcripts), 1386-1461, together with the register of 1545-46, are preserved in the British Museum. The later proceedings, 1540 onward, are in the Privy Council Office. Some pleadings before the king's council in the thirteenth century are included in the Abbreviatio Placitorum (No. 2041); and Fortescue's Governance (No. 1873) is valuable for the study of the council in the fifteenth century. See also J. F. Baldwin's paper, Early Records of the King's Council, in American Historical Review, 1905, xi. 1-15 (ch. xiv. of his King's Council, Oxford, 1913); and No. 2046a.

2000. COTTON, ROBERT. An exact abridgement of the records in the Tower of London, Edward II.-Richard III., of all the parliaments. Revised by William Prynne. London, 1657; reprinted, 1689.

Contains abstracts of the rolls of parliaments.

2001. De concilio Hiberniæ per magnates totius illius insulæ. Irish Archaol. Soc., Miscellany, i. 15-33. Dublin, 1846.

The earliest extant record of an Irish parliament; the session was held in some year between 1289 and 1303. The Latin text, which is here printed, is translated in Betham's Dignities (No. 2923), 262-71.

2002. Documents illustrative of English history in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, ed. Henry Cole. Record London, 1844 [printed, 1835].

Rotulus parliamenti, 12 Edw. II., | Placita parliamentaria, 35 Edw. I.,

Petitiones in parliamento, 18 Edw. I., 55-82.

Parliamentary writs of summons, 28 Edw. I., 333-40.

2003. DUGDALE, WILLIAM. A perfect copy of all summons of the nobility to the great councils and parliaments of the realm [49 Hen. III.—I James II.]. London, 1685.

This valuable work seems to have been reprinted in 1794, with the date 1685 on the title-page.

2004. *Parliamentary writs and writs of military summons [Edw. I.-Edw. II.], ed. Francis Palgrave. Record Com. 2 vols. in 4. London, 1827-34.

Contains writs summoning peers to parliament, writs and returns for the election of members of the house of commons, writs for levying expenses of representatives of the commons, and writs and other documents relating to military service. It is an elaborate collection of records, of great value for the study of parliamentary history. Palgrave intended that these ponderous volumes should be a mere introduction to many others: 'he looked down long vistas of imperial folios.' See C. P. Cooper, Account of the Public Records (London, 1832), ii. 33-88; and his Observations... on the Parliamentary Writs edited by F. Palgrave, London, 1832. Certain writs and returns for the parliament of 1275 have been discovered and printed by C. H. Jenkinson, The First Parliament of Edward I., in English Historical Review, 1910, xxv. 231-42.

2005. *Proceedings and ordinances of the privy council of England [1386–1542], ed. [N.] Harris Nicolas. Record Com. 7 vols. [London], 1834–37.—New series: Acts of the privy council [1542–1604], ed. J. R. Dasent. Rolls Series. 32 vols. London, 1890–1907.

The most valuable source for the study of this institution. Vols. i.-vi. of the first series comprise records preserved in the British Museum.

2006. PRYNNE, WILLIAM. A brief register, kalendar, and survey of the several kinds of all parliamentary writs. 4 pts. London, 1659–64.

Contains much valuable material, especially writs for great councils, parliaments, etc., A.D. 1203-1483, and writs of expenses of knights, citizens, and burgesses, with returns to writs, etc., Edw. I.-Edw. IV. The third part has a separate title: Brevia Parliamentaria Rediviva, 1662.

2007. Public record office. Lists and indexes, no. i.: Index of ancient petitions of the chancery and the exchequer preserved in the public record office. Rolls Series. London, 1892.

An index of the names of persons and places mentioned in about 16,500 petitions addressed to the king, the council, parliament, the chancellor in his executive capacity, and to other officers of state, Edw. I.-Hen. VII. See also Index to the Petitions to the King in Council, in Deputy Keeper's Reports, 1873, xxxiv. I-162.

2008. *Records of the parliament at Westminster in 1305, ed. F. W. Maitland. [Half-title: Memoranda de parliamento.] Rolls Series. London, 1893.

The best edited of all the printed parliament rolls. Contains, besides the roll of r305, thirteen original petitions and a valuable introduction, which throws light on the history of parliament and the privy council and on the nature of the petitions.

2009. Roll of the proceedings of the king's council in Ireland, 1392-93 [with a translation], ed. James Graves. Rolls Series. London, 1877.

The MS., the text of which is mainly in French, is preserved among the muniments of the marquis of Ormonde. The greater part of the record is made up of petitions presented to the council, with the answers thereto. On pp. lv.-lxxiv. is a translation of the ordinances of a great council of Ireland, 1455. The appendix contains various documents, including a calendar of Irish close rolls, 16 Richard II.

† 2010. *Rotuli parliamentorum; ut et petitiones et placita in parliamento [1278-1503]. 6 vols. n.p., n.d.—Index, 1832.

The most valuable collection of material relating to the history of parliament. It was printed in accordance with an order of the house of lords, dated March 9, 1767. In 1777 the six volumes were 'in a very short time' to be 'ready to be delivered to the lords': Lords' Journals, xxxv. 236. The official copy of the work formerly in the old record office in the Tower has a MS. inscription stating that the same was presented in 1783 by the king's command. The text of this edition is inaccurate, having been printed from transcripts which were not collated with the originals. The appendixes contain many petitions and extracts from letters patent and close. For rolls not included in these six volumes, see Nos. 2002, 2008. The elaborate Index to the Rolls of Parliament, 1832, was edited by John Strachey, John Pridden, and Edward Upham, by order of a committee of the lords.

2011. RYLEY, WILLIAM. Placita parliamentaria [Edw. I.– Edw. II.]. London, 1661.

Contains rolls of parliament; with an appendix comprising extracts from patent and close rolls, Edw. I.-Edw. II., and petitions in parliament, Edw. I.-Hen. VI. This collection has been superseded by the Rotuli Parliamentorum (No. 2010).

b. LEGISLATIVE ACTS.

Apart from the Leges, or private compilations, of the twelfth century examined in § 36b, the principal legislative acts of the period 1066-1485 are:—

- r. Two small collections of William the Conqueror's laws. One of these comprises three enactments regarding the use of the duel and the ordeal in criminal accusations in which Normans and Englishmen were concerned: Latin and Anglo-Saxon versions are printed in Schmid's Gesetze der Angelsachsen, 352-3, Thorpe's Ancient Laws, i. 488-9, and Liebermann's Gesetze der Angelsachsen, i. 483-4; cf. Freeman, Norman Conquest, vol. v. app. KK, and below, No. 2016. The other collection (often called Articuli Willelmi, or, from the opening words, Hic Intimatur) contains ten Latin enactments regarding the oath of fealty, murder fines, punishments, etc.: 9th edition, in Stubbs's Select Charters, 97-99, in his edition of Hoveden, vol. ii. pp. ci.-cii., 216-18, and in Liebermann's Gesetze, i. 486-8. This seems to be a private compilation put together early in the twelfth century and containing an epitome of ordinances made by the Conqueror at different times. There is also a much longer version, with various interpolations by a later hand, perhaps of Edward I.'s time: Schmid, Gesetze, 354-7; Thorpe, Ancient Laws, i. 490-94; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 489-or; cf. Hoveden, ed. Stubbs, vol. ii. pp. xxii.-xliii. We have also the Conqueror's ordinance or writ separating the ecclesiastical from the temporal courts: Schmid, Gesetze, 357; Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 485; Stubbs, Select Charters, 99-100.
- 2. The charters of liberties of Henry I., Stephen, and Henry II.: Stubbs, Select Charters, 116-19, 142-4, 158; also printed in Bémont's work and in Statutes of the Realm, 1810, i. 1-4 (Nos. 2013, 2025). On Henry I.'s charter, of which Liebermann gives the best text (No. 2017), see E. A. Freeman, William Rufus, ii. 352-9; and H. L. Cannon, The Character and Antecedents of the Charter of Liberties of Henry I., in American Historical Review, 1909, xv. 37-46.
- 3. The order of Henry I. concerning the holding of the courts of the hundred and shire (Stubbs, Select Charters, 122, and Liebermann, Gesetze, i. 524); and the assizes, orders, and constitutions of Henry II. and Richard I. (Stubbs, Select Charters, 161-89, 251-8). For the assize of Clarendon, see also Palgrave, English Commonwealth, ii. 166-71; and for the constitutions of Clarendon, see Maitland, Henry II. and the Criminous Clerks (No. 3124).
- 4. The Great Charter of John, the forest charter, and their various confirmations to 1301: Stubbs, Select Charters, 284-303, 333-51, 482-93; Statutes of the Realm, 1810, i. 6-44; and the works of Bémont, Blackstone, and Thomson (Nos. 2013–14, 2019). There is an elaborate commentary on the Great Charter in Coke's Second Institute (No. 649); another valuable one is McKechnie's work (No. 2017a), which also, at pp. 176–82, points to other commentaries and editions. Bémont gives an account of the literature concerning the charters of liberties. G. B. Adams's essays are expanded in No. 638. See C. H. McIlwain, Due Process of Law in Magna Carta, Columbia Law Review, 1914, xiv. 27–51. Autotypes of the articles of the barons and Magna Carta may be purchased at the British Museum. On the Confirmatio Cartarum, 1297, see No. 1986.

5. The statute rolls, records of chancery in which the statutes were entered. Only six rolls are extant, extending from 6 Edward I. to 8 Edward IV., with a gap from 8 to 23 Henry VI. This series is supplemented by ancient transcripts of statutes, John-Henry VIII., several volumes of which are preserved in the Public Record Office. The legislative acts of Henry III. are found in the patent and close rolls and in the chroniclers. Richard III. onward the statutes are entered in the rolls of parliament. The old printed collections of statutes begin with Henry III.'s confirmation of the Great Charter, 1225. The principal commentaries are Coke's Second Institute and Barrington's Observations (Nos. 649, 2020). See also John Selden's Opera Omnia, 1726, ii. 969-1030, iii. 6-46, dealing mainly with the older laws to 1215. Reeves, in his English Law (No. 658), gives a useful abstract of the statutes. For the Welsh and Irish laws, see § 36.

Of little value. Contains a translation of the charters.

2013. BÉMONT, CHARLES. Chartes des libertés anglaises, 1100-1305. Paris, 1892.

Contains critical texts of the charters of Henry I., Stephen, Henry II., and John, the articles of the barons, the forest charter, Henry III.'s confirmation of 1225, and Edward I.'s confirmations. The introduction gives a good account of the history of the Great Charter, with the literature of the subject. Valuable.

2014. BLACKSTONE, WILLIAM. The great charter and charter of the forest, to which is prefixed the history of the charters. Oxford, 1759.

Contains the articles of the barons, the Great Charter, the forest charter, and the various confirmations to the year 1300. The best of the older works on Magna Carta.

2018. ROUND, J. H. An unknown charter of liberties. English Hist. Review, viii. 288-94. London, 1893.

Round believes that this document comprises concessions made to the northern barons in 1213. Its enactments closely resemble those of the Great Charter, but it contains two clauses concerning scutage and foreign service which are not found in Magna Carta. G. W. Prothero, ibid., 1894, ix. 117-21, suggests that the document is a proposal for a compromise offered by John to the barons early in 1215. Hubert Hall, ibid., ix. 326-35, believes that it is not an original charter, but a forgery or private compilation (circa 1216-17) based on Henry I.'s charter and Magna Carta. H. W. C. Davis, ibid., 1905, xx. 719-26, maintains that it is an informal report of the negotiations that ended in the Great Charter. Petit-Dutaillis (Studies, 120) accepts this view, but believes the writer to have been a French agent, not, as Davis thinks, a partisan of the barons. McKechnie (Magna Carta, 202-5) suggests that the document is a copy of the schedule which the barons sent to the king from Brackley at Easter. 1215 (cf. his 2nd edition, 171-5). Ludwig Riess, in Historische Vierteljahrschrift, 1910, xiii. 449-58, considers it a copy of a memorandum belonging to John, prepared in England in 1214 and sent to the king at Poitou, where it fell into the hands of the French, who sent it to the English barons.

2019. THOMSON, RICHARD. An historical essay on the magna charta of king John. London, 1829.

Contains the text of John's charter, with a translation; also translations of the articles of the barons, the forest charter, and the confirmations of Henry III. and Edward I.; with elaborate notes, based largely on Coke's Second Institute. This is one of the 'standard' works on the Great Charter.

This so-called statute, dealing with the rights of the king, seems to be a tract written by some lawyer in the early part of Edward I.'s reign.

c. MODUS TENENDI PARLIAMENTUM.

This anonymous tract (No. 2030) gives an account of the composition and proceedings of parliament. The author exaggerates the importance of the commons and belittles the rights of the lords. Stubbs (Select Charters, 500) calls it 'a somewhat ideal description of the constitution of parliament towards the end of the 14th century . . . a theoretical view for which the writer was anxious to find a warrant in immemorial antiquity.' The work was probably written in the last quarter of the fourteenth century. Riess, in his Wahlrecht (No. 2946), 110–15, ascribes it to the second half of Richard II.'s reign; Bémont, to the early part of that reign; and Hardy, to the first quarter of the four-teenth century. Round, in his Commune of London (No. 2826a), 317-18, thinks there is a fair presumption that it dates from the year 1386. For a popular account of this tract, see A. C. Ewald, Paper and Parchment (London, 1890), 59-70.

§ 52. THE CENTRAL COURTS.

- a. General, Nos. 2032-53.
- b. Particular Counties, etc., Nos. 2054-86.

The following are the principal classes of records relating to the royal judicature:—

I. Plea rolls of the common law courts, containing the official minutes of their proceedings. Pleas heard in the king's court (curia regis) seem to have been enrolled in the last years of Henry II.'s reign, but the earliest surviving rolls are of the year 1194. In the twelfth century royal justice was administered in the curia regis with its tributary eyres or circuits; and from this central tribunal the courts of king's bench (curia coram rege) and common pleas (curia de banco) gradually emerged in the reign of John. By degrees the general eyre, which tried all kinds of suits, was displaced in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries by various commissions of justices, which tried specific categories of cases (justices of gaol-delivery, of assize, of over and terminer, etc.). At first the various judicial records are not sharply distinguished: criminal and civil proceedings before the central court and before the evre are included under the general head of curia regis. As now arranged in the Public Record Office, all placita coram rege and all common pleas (placita de banco) to the accession of Edward I. are called rotuli curiæ regis; all eyre records of the same period are called assize rolls. From the time of Edward I. onward we have distinct series of records for the king's bench (coram rege rolls), common pleas (de banco rolls), eyre, gaoldelivery, etc. There are also plea rolls of the court of exchequer from 20 Henry III.; though mainly concerned with the royal revenue, this tribunal also tried many actions between the king's subjects. The quo warranto proceedings (No. 2040) form a separate class of eyre rolls; and the coroners' rolls (Nos. 2047. 2073) are also closely connected with the business of the itinerant justices. For pleas in parliament and in the king's council, see § 51 and No. 2041. All the judicial records printed by the Record Commission, the Pipe Roll Society, and the Selden Society are valuable.

2. Feet of fines, pedes finium, or final concords (Nos. 2035. 2055-61, etc.). They are records of actions, mainly fictitious suits, brought before the curia regis, the court of common pleas, or the eyre, for the purpose of conveying land. When such a case came up for trial, the parties secured permission from the court to settle or put an end ('finis') to the suit, and the land was adjudged to belong to the plaintiff according to a prearranged agreement made by him and the defendant. A copy or indenture of the judgment was given to each of them, and its counterpart. called the foot, was kept by the court as evidence of the new owner's title. This practice served effectively to register the transfer of land. Final concords seem first to have come into use in the second half of Henry II.'s reign, but only a few fines of that period have survived. The continuous series of pedes finium. which begins in 1195, is remarkably complete, and extends to 1834, when fines were abolished by statute. It is particularly valuable to the genealogist and the topographer. See Pollock and Maitland, English Law, 2nd edition, ii. 94-106; and, on the earliest fines, J. H. Round, in English Historical Review, 1897, xii. 293-302, and in his Feudal England, 509-18. The modern law of the subject is fully set forth in William Cruise's Essay on Fines, London, 1783; 3rd edition, 1794.

- 3. The year books, 1292-1535 (No. 2053), so called because there was one for each regnal year. They are anonymous law reports, written in French, containing the discussions of the judges and counsel on the points of law, and the grounds of judgment in important cases tried before the royal justices either at Westminster or in eyre. They are not records so much as 'professional memoranda . . . intended to give information on points of interest to legal practitioners'; hence they lay emphasis on pleading and technical forms rather than on matters of substance, and often give no intimation of the final disposition of the case. According to an old legal tradition, these reports had official sanction and were drawn up by reporters in the employ of the crown; but Maitland (Year Book 1-2 Edward II., pp. xi.-xiv.) and Pike (Year Books 14-15 Edward III., p. xv., and 18 Edward III.; p. lxxx.) hold that they are in no wise official but were due to private enterprise, and Maitland believes that the earliest of them are students' notebooks (Year Book 3 Edward II., pp. ix.-xvi.). Much legal and constitutional history still lies buried in the year books, a good edition of which has long been an urgent want. 'They should be our glory, for no other country has anything like them; they are our disgrace, for no other country would have so neglected them ': Pollock and Maitland, English Law, 2nd edition, vol. i. p. xxxv. See also Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence, 1896, pt. ii. ch. v.; C. P. Cooper, Account of the Public Records, 1832, ii. 300-401; J. W. Wallace, The Reporters, 4th edition, Boston, 1882 (description of the various year books, etc., pp. 73-111); W. S. Holdsworth, The Year Books, in Law Quarterly Review, 1906, xxii. 266-84, 360-82, reprinted in Select Essays (No. 660a), ii. 96-122, and incorporated in his History of English Law (No. 653a), ii. 444-67; L. O. Pike, The MSS. of the Year Books and the Corresponding Records, in Green Bag, 1900, xii. 533-42; C. C. Soule, Year Book Bibliography, in Harvard Law Review, 1901, xiv. 557-87.
- 4. Records of the courts of chancery, forests, Jews, chivalry, and other special tribunals. Of these the most important are the equity proceedings of the court of chancery (Nos. 2033, 2048), which begin in the time of Richard II. The placita forestæ,

John-Charles II. (Nos. 2036, 2042, 2052, 2078, 2085), contain pleas, perambulations, and other transactions, chiefly before the justices in eyre of the forests. The surviving pleas before the justices of the Jews (Nos. 2032a, 2034, 2042, 2052a) extend from 3 Henry III. to 14 Edward I. The few extant records of the court of chivalry, preserved in the Public Record Office (cf. No. 2046), are chiefly of the reigns of Edward I. and Richard II.; it was a military court and a tribunal of honour, deciding disputes regarding coat-armour, etc.

5. Writs, brevia (No. 2043). Those used in judicial procedure were written mandates of the king, which usually ordered the sheriff to compel the defendant to appear in court to answer the plaintiff. They were introduced into England soon after the Norman Conquest, and their number rapidly increased in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Every suit before a royal court was initiated and authorised by an original writ. In connection with actions thus started by brevia originalia obtained from the chancery, other writs, called brevia judicialia, might be issued by the court in the course of litigation. For each kind of suit there was a fixed form of writ, or, as Bracton says, 'tot formulæ brevium quot sunt genera actionum'; and as new circumstances arose new kinds of writs were introduced. Maitland (No. 2043) has traced the history of the official Registrum Brevium from the early part of Henry III.'s reign, when there were fifty or sixty kinds of writs, to the close of the fourteenth century, when there were several hundred. See also M. M. Bigelow, History of Procedure. 1880, pp. 147-200.

2035. *Fines sive pedes finium, 1195-1214, ed. Joseph Hunter. Record Com. 2 vols. London, 1835-44.—Feet of fines, 1182-99. Pipe Roll Soc. [4 vols.] London, 1894-1900.

Hunter's edition was not completed; it is arranged by counties, and includes Bedfordshire, Berks, Bucks, Cambridgeshire, Cornwall, Cumberland, Derbyshire, Devon, and Dorset. In the four volumes issued by the Pipe Roll Society the fines are arranged in chronological order; only four of them are prior to 1190. To the fourth volume is appended an undated 'roll of the king's court in the reign of Richard I.' That this is a roll of Hilary term, 1196, is shown by J. H. Round in his paper, A Plea Roll of Richard I., in English Historical Review, 1907, xxii. 290-92. Forty-eight fines, Rich. I.-Hen. VIII., are printed in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum (London, 1702), 217-37. See also Statutes of the Realm, 1810, i. 126, 214-15; English Historical Review, 1897, xii. 293-302.

✓ 2038. Placita Anglo-Normannica: law-cases from William I. to Richard I. preserved in historical records, ed. M. M. Bigelow. Boston, 1879.

A valuable collection of 'unofficial records of litigation,' comprising mainly narrative accounts of cases taken from the chroniclers. See also Palgrave, English Commonwealth (No. 1497), ii. 5-87, for the suit of Richard de Anesty to recover the lands of his uncle, A.D. 1158-63, and for the case of the abbot of Battle abbey v. the bishop of Chichester, A.D. 1148-57.

2040. *Placita de quo warranto, Edward I.-Edward III. [ed. William Illingworth]. Record Com. [London], 1818.

These were pleadings held before the itinerant justices and based on writs of quo warranto requiring certain persons, boroughs, abbeys, and other communities to show by what authority they claimed franchises. The plea determined whether the exercise of the franchise was an infringement of royal rights. These pleadings resulted from the inquiries recorded in the hundred rolls (No. 2160) and from the statute of Gloucester, 1278. After 10 Edward III. the quo warranto proceedings took place in the king's bench or in the exchequer, and are entered on the coram rege and memoranda rolls. The volume published in 1818 gives many valuable details regarding fendal, municipal, and other institutions. Some placita de quo warranto of Edward III.'s reign will also be found in the Record of Caernarvon (No. 2657), 133-207.

2041. *Placitorum abbreviatio, Richard I. - Edward II. Record Com. [London], 1811.

This abstract of pleas (held in the curia regis, king's bench, common pleas, eyres, king's council, parliament, etc.) was made by Arthur Agarde and others in the time of Elizabeth and James I. Many interesting cases are omitted, and the transcripts contain numerous errors; nevertheless the book is of great value.

2042. Public record office. Lists and indexes, no. iv.: List of plea rolls preserved in the public record office [5 Rich. I. onward]. Rolls Series. London, 1894; revised edition, 1910.—

Lists and indexes, no. xxxii.: Index of placita de banco [common pleas], 1327-28. Rolls Series. 2 pts. in 1 vol. Dublin, 1909. [Arranged by counties.]

The valuable List of Plea Rolls includes rolls of the old curia regis, king's bench, common pleas, exchequer, eyres, marshalsea, exchequer of the Jews, palatinates of Durham, Lancaster, and Chester, courts of Wales, coroners' inquests, etc. For those relating to the justices of the peace and of labourers, 1359–1414, see B. H. Putnam, Early Records of the Justices of the Peace, in English Historical Review, 1913, xxviii. 321–30; and see her paper on The Ancient Indictments in the Public Record Office, ibid., 1914, xxix. 479–505. See also the lists of assize rolls, placita forestæ, etc., in Report of the Record Commissioners, 1837 (No. 489), 22–67.

✓ 2043. Registrum omnium brevium tam originalium quam judicialium. 2 pts. London, 1531; 4th edition, 4 pts., 1687.

This official register gives the various forms of writs, many of which had remained unchanged since the 12th and 13th centuries. It is 'a book that grew for three centuries or more.' See F. W. Maitland, History of the Register of Original Writs, in Harvard Law Review, 1889, iii. 97-115, 167-79, 212-25; reprinted in his Collected Papers (No. 656a), ii. 110-73, and in Select Essays (No. 660a), ii. 549-96.

Besides this register we have the anonymous Natura Brevium, or La Vieux Natura Brevium, which seems to have been compiled in Edward III.'s reign; it contains the principal kinds of writs, with a short commen tary explaining their nature and application. Various editions were published, both in the original French and in English, during the 16th century (circa 1510, 1516, 1528, etc.). A work of a similar character by Anthony Fitzherbert is called La Novelle Natura Brevium (London, 1534, and later editions; translation, 1652, 9th edition, 1794). Many writs are found in Glanville's treatise and in the law-books of the 13th century. See also the Statuta Walliæ, 1284, in Statutes of the Realm, 1810, i. 55-68.

2044. Rotuli curiæ regis, ed. Francis Palgrave. Record Com 2 vols. [London], 1835.

Vol. i. contains rolls of 6 and 10 Richard I. and 1 John; vol. ii., a roll of 1 John. They comprise pleas held before the curia regis and in eyre. Valuable.

2045. Rotuli selecti ad res Anglicas et Hibernicas spectantes, ed. Joseph Hunter. Record Com. [London], 1834.

Rotuli sex ad res Anglicas spectantes, 105-265: mainly pleas (held in pursuance of the Dictum of Kenilworth) relating to lands of rebel barons in the counties of Cambridge, Essex, Northampton, and Suffolk, 52-54 Henry III.

2046. Scrope (The) and Grosvenor controversy: De controversia in curia militari inter Ricardum le Scrope et Robertum Grosvenor, 1385-90, ed. N. H. Nicolas. 2 vols. London, 1832.

Vol. i. contains proceedings in the court of chivalry concerning the right to bear certain arms; vol. ii., the history of the family of Scrope.

For a dispute on a similar subject, see An Account of the Controversy between Reginald Lord Grey of Ruthyn and Sir Edward Hastings in the Court of Chivalry in the Reign of Henry IV. [ed. C. G. Young, London, 1841], pp. 34. There is also a tract on the use of the judicial combat in that court, called The Ordinance and Form of Fighting within the Lists, written in French about 1390 by Thomas of Woodstock, duke of Gloucester, son of Edward III.; printed, with an old translation, in the Black Book of the Admiralty (No. 2145), i. 301-29; there is a Latin version in Spelman's Glossarium (No. 214), under 'Campus.'

2046a. Select cases before the king's council in the star chamber, 1477–1544, ed. I. S. Leadam. Selden Soc. 2 vols. London, 1903–11.

Contains few cases before 1485.

2046b. Select cases concerning the law merchant, 1270–1638, ed. Charles Gross. Vol. i.: Local courts. Selden Soc. London, 1908.

Made up largely of the records of piepowder or fair courts.

2047. Select cases from the coroners' rolls, 1265-1413 [with a translation], ed. Charles Gross. Selden Soc. London, 1896.

The introduction gives an account of the history of the coroner's office, and deals also with Englishry, the jury, and the duties of neighbouring townships. See also R. H. Wellington, The King's Coroner, a Collection of Statutes relating to the Office, with a Short History of the same, 2 vols., London, 1905-06.

- 2048. Select cases in chancery, 1364-1471 [with a translation], ed. W. P. Baildon. Selden Soc. London, 1896.
- 2049. Select civil pleas, ed. W. P. Baildon. Vol. i., 1200–1203 [with a translation]. Selden Soc. London, 1890.

Pleas before the justices of the bench and justices in eyre, relating mainly to real property.

2050. Select pleas in the court of admiralty [1390-1602, with a translation], ed. R. G. Marsden. Selden Soc. 2 vols. London, 1894-97.

The introduction to vol. i. contains a good account of the early history of this court. Only two of the cases are prior to 1524, in which year the regular series of act books of the admiralty begins. See also Marsden's Early Prize Jurisdiction and Prize Law in England, in English Historical Review, 1909, xxiv. 675-97.

2051. Select pleas of the crown, ed. F. W. Maitland. Vol. i., 1200–1225 [with a translation]. Selden Soc. London, 1888.

Contains pleas before the king, the justices of the bench, and the justices in eyre, with a valuable introduction on the early history of the courts of king's bench and common pleas. See also Maitland's paper, The Murder of Henry Clement, with an extract from the curia regis roll 18-19 Henry III., in English Historical Review, 1895, x. 294-7; reprinted in his Collected Papers (No. 656a), iii. 11-16.

2052. Select pleas of the forest [1209-1334], ed. G. J. Turner. Selden Soc. London, 1901.

Contains a valuable introduction on the forests of the 13th century. For a review, see English Forests and Forest Laws of the Thirteenth Century, in Edinburgh Review, 1902, excv. 456-80.

2052a. Select pleas, starrs, and other records from the rolls of the exchequer of the Jews, 1220–84, ed. J. M. Rigg. Selden Soc. London, 1902.

Also issued as a special volume of the publications of the Jewish Historical Society of England. For a calendar, see No. 2032a.

2052b. State trials of the reign of Edward I., 1289-93, ed. T. F. Tout and Hilda Johnstone. Royal Hist. Soc., [Camden Third Series]. London, 1906.

Contains the official proceedings of the trials of the judges and other royal officers before a special commission.

2052c. Three rolls of the king's court, 1194-95, ed. F. W. Maitland. Pipe Roll Soc. London, 1891.

Comprises the earliest roll of the king's court, that of Trinity term, 1194; also an eyre roll for Wilts, 1194, and another for Bedfordshire and Bucks, 1195. Valuable. For a roll of the king's court of Hilary term, 1196, see No. 2035.

2053. *[Year books.] Les reports des cases [Edw. II.-27 Hen. VIII.]. 11 pts. London, 1678-80.

This is the most nearly complete edition of the year books, but it is badly edited and badly printed. Excellent editions of certain year books never before published have been issued, with translations, in the Rolls Series: 6 vols., 20–22, 30–35 Edw. I., 11–12 Edw. III., ed. A. J. Horwood, 1863–83; and 14 vols., 12–20 Edw. III., ed. L. O. Pike, 1885–1911. The Selden Society is publishing Edward II.: vols. i.—iv., vi. (1—4 Edw. II.), ed. F. W. Maitland and G. J. Turner; vols. v., vii.—viii. (The Eyre of Kent, 6—7 Edw. II., 3 vols.), ed. Maitland, L. W. Vernon Harcourt, and W. C. Bolland: London, 1903—14. Cf. W. M. Geldart, The Year Books of Edward II., in English Historical Review, 1911, xxvi. 239—56. The year books of Richard II. are to be published by the Ames Foundation of Harvard university; the first volume, for 1388, edited by G. F. Deiser, appeared in 1914. One part of the year books of Edward III. (pt. v. of the edition of 1678—80) is called Le Livre des Assises, or Liber Assisarum. For many old cases, now probably all included in the year books, see David Jenkins, Eight Centuries of Reports, or 800 Cases adjudged in the Exchequer Chamber [4 Hen. III.—21 James I.], 3rd edition, London, 1777.

We have also two valuable digests of the year books, arranged under titles in alphabetical order: Anthony Fitzherbert's La Graunde Abridgement, 'painfully and elaborately collected,' first printed in 1514, containing also many cases taken from the plea rolls of Henry III.'s reign; and Robert Brooke's La Graunde Abridgement, first printed in 1568, a revision of Fitzherbert's work, with additional cases.

§ 53. CHANCERY ENROLMENTS: FOREIGN RELATIONS, ROYAL LETTERS AND GRANTS.

- a. General, Nos. 2087-2113.
- b. Particular Countries, Nos. 2113a-37.

Most of the records examined in this section are chancery enrolments: in other words, transcripts of documents which before being issued from the chancery were copied into various series of rolls for future reference and verification. These documents relate to a great variety of transactions at home and abroad, for the chancellor was secretary of state for both home and foreign affairs. Some of the chancery enrolments, notably the liberate, fine, and statute rolls, have already been described, in §§ 50–51. The rolls of the chancery were formed by sewing the separate membranes end to end into one continuous strip, which was then rolled up; whereas the membranes of the plea rolls and of most of the exchequer records were fastened or filed at the top, so as to overlap. The collections or series of documents considered in this section are:—

r. Charters, and letters patent and close, the most valuable of the chancery enrolments. They were the instruments by which the kings of England made grants and transacted much public business of importance. 'By the first their more solemn acts were declared, by the second their more public directions promulgated, and by the third they intimated their private instructions to individuals.' These three series of records contain grants of lands, offices, privileges, and the like to individuals or communities, mandates to royal officers, etc.; the patent and close rolls also comprise truces, treaties, diplomatic correspondence. and documents concerning the revenue, judicature, and other branches of the English government. Royal charters and letters patent, although they often resemble each other as to their contents, are distinguished from each other as regards their form. The charters are addressed 'to the archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, earls, barons,' etc., and are executed in the presence of various witnesses; whereas letters patent are addressed 'to all to whom these presents shall come,' and are usually witnessed by the king himself ('teste meipso'). Letters patent were so called because they were delivered open, with the great seal pendent at the bottom: but in this respect they do not differ from charters. Letters close, 6 John to the present time, were mainly royal mandates addressed to one individual or more: therefore they were closed and sealed on the outside. The patent rolls extend from 3 John to the present time; the charter rolls from 1 John to 8 Henry VIII., after which date all grants were made in the form of letters patent and were entered on the patent rolls. The confirmation rolls, I Richard III.-I Charles I. (Nos. 2088, 2004, 2102), contain charters of confirmation, which usually recite in full, or 'inspect,' and confirm older royal grants, some of them as old as the seventh century; before I Richard III. the confirmations are enrolled on the charter and patent rolls, and after I Charles I. on the patent rolls.

A calendar of the royal charters from 1066 to 1154 is being prepared by H. W. C. Davis (Regesta Regum Anglo-Norman-norum, vol. i., 1066–1100, Oxford, 1913), and a calendar of the Norman charters of the same period by C. H. Haskins. Cf. J. H. Round, in English Historical Review, 1914, xxix. 347–56.

- 2. 'Cartæ antiquæ' (Nos. 2088, 2101), which comprise chancery transcripts of royal and other charters of various dates, from Ethelbert of Kent to Edward I. They are probably copies of charters brought to the chancery in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries for exemplification and enrolment, in order to ensure the preservation of their contents.
- 3. 'Ancient correspondence,' or 'litteræ regum,' Richard I.-Henry VII. (Nos. 2089, 2091, 2105-7, 2113): mainly royal letters preserved in the Public Record Office in the form, not of enrolments, but of originals.

- 4. The so-called treaty rolls, which are divided into various branches, namely Almain, French, Gascon, Norman, Roman, Irish, Scotch, and Welsh rolls: Nos. 2088, 2097, 2101-2, 2115-17, etc. They contain treaties, diplomatic correspondence, charters, letters patent and close, etc., relating to the affairs of foreign countries,—Germany and Flanders (Almain rolls), the English possessions in France (French, Gascon, and Norman rolls), the Roman see, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. Documents similar to these are also preserved in the patent and close rolls.
- 5. Rymer's Fœdera (Nos. 2097-9), a collection of records of great importance for the study of political and diplomatic history. It contains numerous extracts from the charter, patent, close, treaty, and other rolls. N. H. Nicolas calls it 'the Bible of antiquaries.'

a. GENERAL.

Many letters patent and close are transcribed on the originalia and memoranda rolls (§ 50g); many are printed in Palgrave's Parliamentary Writs, the Rotuli Parliamentorum, the Peers' Reports (Nos. 2004, 2010, 2944), and in Robert Brady's Complete History of England, London, 1685 (Continuation, 1700). Numerous royal grants will also be found in Madox's Formulare Anglicanum (No. 238), in Dugdale's Monasticon (No. 613), and in the local collections of charters (§ 57). The palatinates of Durham, Chester, and Lancaster each had its own series of chancery enrolments: see § 57. The Great Charter, with its precursors and confirmations, is examined in § 51b.

By reason of the alphabetical arrangement followed below, the Calendars are separated from the Rolls on which they are based.

2087. Ancient charters, royal and private, prior to 1200 [1095-1200], ed. J. H. Round. Pipe Roll Soc. London, 1888.

The Welsh rolls 5-9 Edward I. (1277-80) were privately printed in full by Sir Thomas Phillipps (No. 2137). For scutage rolls, see § 50f.

2094. Calendarium rotulorum chartarum [1199-1483] et inquisitionum ad quod damnum [1307-1461]. Record Com. [London], 1803.

This calendar is printed from a MS. in the Public Record Office, and seems to have been compiled in the time of James I. It is imperfect, but useful. An inquisition ad quod damnum was taken by virtue of a writ addressed to the royal escheator of a county when any grant of a market, fair, or privilege was requested, commanding him to ascertain by the verdict of a jury whether such grant, if it should be made, would be to the damage of the king or of other persons. For a list of inquisitions ad quod damnum, 1244-1485, published by the Public Record Office, see No. 2105.

For a calendar of royal charters which occur in letters of inspeximus, exemplification, or confirmation, and in chartularies, in the Public Record Office, see Deputy Keeper's Reports, 1868-69, xxix. 7-48, xxx. 197-211.

2095. Calendarium rotulorum patentium [3 John-23 Edw. IV.]. Record Com. [London], 1802.

A collection of notes, which seems to have been made early in the 17th century. It does not cover more than one-fifth of the entries on the patent rolls to 23 Edward IV.

2096. Early Scottish charters [A.D. 565-1153], ed. A. C. Lawrie. Glasgow, 1905.

Many of these are grants to the monks of Durham and to other English religious houses.

—New edition [1069–1383], by Adam Clarke, Frederic Holbrooke, and John Caley, 4 vols. in 7 pts., Record Com., 1816–69 [vol. iv. printed 1833, published 1869].—Syllabus of documents in Rymer's Fædera. By T. D. Hardy. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1869–85.

Vols. i.-xvii. (London, 1704-17), extending to 1625, are often called the first edition. The 'new edition' contains many municipal charters. All the editions are fully described in Hardy's valuable Syllabus, which also contains a good index and chronological abstract of the various editions, See also C. P. Cooper, Account of the Public Records, 1832, ii. 89-144. A General Introduction to the Fædera (pp. 72) was printed by the Record Commission in 1817, but not published; pp. 1-24 of this Introduction correspond to pp. i.-xii. of vol. i. of the Fædera, 1816.

This great national work was undertaken at the public expense; Rymer (b. 1641, d. 1713) was appointed editor in 1693.

2098. [Fædera, etc.] Acta regia, or an account of the treaties, etc., published in Rymer's Fædera [1101-1625]. Translated from the French [of Paul de Rapin de Thoyras, by Stephen Whatley]. 4 vols. London, 1726-27.—Reprinted, 4 vols., 1731; 1 vol., 1732; 1 vol., 1733.

Rapin's abstract or abridgment of the Fœdera was originally published in Le Clerc's Bibliothèque Choisie. It is also printed in vol. x. of the Hague edition of the Fœdera, under the title, Abrégé Historique des Actes Publics d'Angleterre.

Most of the documents of Richard III.'s reign are copied from the Harleian MSS., and deal mainly with England's foreign relations.

- 2104. Letters of the kings of England [Rich. I.-Charles I.], ed. J. O. Halliwell. 2 vols. London, 1846; reprinted, 1848. Translations only.
- 2105. List of ancient correspondence of the chancery and exchequer preserved in the public record office froyal letters, etc., circa Rich. I.-Hen. VII.]: Public record office, Lists and indexes, no. xv. Rolls Series. London, 1902.—List of chancery rolls [charter, patent, close, fine, parliament, and other rolls, I John onward]: ibid. no. xxvii. London, 1908.—List of inquisitions ad quod damnum [28 Hen. III.-2 Rich. III.]: ibid. nos. xvii., 2 pts. London, 1904-06.

See a review of the List of Ancient Correspondence by C. V. Langlois, in Journal des Savants, 1904, pp. 380-93, 446-53; and see his paper on Nova Curie, in Revue Historique, 1905, lxxxvii. 55-79.

2106. Official correspondence of Thomas Bekynton, secretary to Henry VI., ed. George Williams. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1872.

Contains many letters of Henry VI. to continental potentates, and other documents throwing light upon the foreign relations of England during the first half of the 15th century. See No. 2233.

- 2107. Original letters illustrative of English history, including numerous royal letters [1418-1726], ed. Henry Ellis. 3 vols. London, 1824; and edition, 1825.—and series [Hen. IV.-1795], 4 vols., 1827.—3rd series [1074-1799], 4 vols., 1846.
- 2107a. *Recueil des actes de Henri II. concernant les provinces françaises et les affaires de France: introduction [and atlas. 2 vols.]. By Léopold Delisle. Paris, 1909. [Contains, at pp. 507-57, a list of 569 charters, the full text of which will be printed in a succeeding volume to be edited by Elie Berger.]—Recueil de 109 chartes originales de Henri II. fa calendar]. By Léopold Delisle. Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, lxix. 541-80, 738-40. Paris, 1908.

Delisle, in his Mémoire sur la Chronologie des Chartes de Henri II. (Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1906, lxvii. 361-401) and his supplementary Notes sur les Chartes (ibid., 1907, lxviii. 272-314), contends that in 1172-73 the title 'Henricus rex Anglorum' was replaced in royal documents by 'Henricus Dei gratia rex Anglorum,' and hence that the king's style may be used as a test in fixing the dates of his charters, which are regularly undated. This view is assailed by J. H. Round in a paper on The Chronology of Henry II.'s Charters, in the Archæological Journal, 1907, lxiv. 63-79; but it is supported by R. L. Poole in an article on The Dates of Henry II.'s Charters, in the English Historical Review, 1908, xxiii. 79-83. For Delisle's reply to Round's criticism, see Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1907, lxviii. 525-36. See also the introduction to his Recueil des Actes, where questions of diplomatics and chronology are fully treated.

2108. *Rotuli chartarum, 1199-1216, ed. T. D. Hardy. Record Com. [London], 1837.

The introduction contains a good account of the structure of charters.

2109. *Rotuli litterarum clausarum [1204-27], ed. T. D. Hardy. Record Com. 2 vols. [London], 1833-44.—Close rolls of the reign of Henry III. [1227-42]. Rolls Series. [4 vols.] London, 1902-11.

The introduction to vol. i. of the Rotuli was also separately printed: A Description of the Close Rolls, with an Account of the Early Courts of Law and Equity, 1833. It contains some interesting remarks on the history of equitable jurisdiction.

Sir Thomas Phillipps is said to have printed Abbreviatio Rotulorum Clausorum ab 1 Edw. III. ad Rich. III.; and Index to the Close Rolls for Wiltshire, 3 Edw. III.-36 Hen. VI. For a transcript of a portion of the close roll 36 Henry III., see C. P. Cooper, Account of the Public Records, 1832, i. 414-35.

2110. *Rotuli litterarum patentium, 1201-16, ed. T. D. Hardy. Record Com. [London], 1835.—Patent rolls of the reign of Henry III. [1216-32]. Rolls Series. [2 vols.] London, 1901-03.

The introduction to the Rotuli was also separately printed, under the title, A Description of the Patent Rolls, to which is added an Itinerary of King John, 1835. See No. 2834.

2111. Rotuli selecti ad res Anglicas et Hibernicas spectantes, ed. Joseph Hunter. Record Com. [London], 1834.

Contains patent roll 7 John, pp. 1-38; letters patent of discharges of debts and arrears of accounts, and patents of annuities, enrolled in the memoranda of the Irish exchequer, Hen. V.-12 Hen. VI., pp. 39-ro3.

2112. Royal and historical letters during the reign of Henry IV., ed. F. C. Hingeston. Vol. i., 1399-1404. Rolls Series. London, 1860.

These documents, taken mainly from the Cottonian and Harleian MSS., relate to the affairs of Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, and other countries. For the Netherlands, 1405–13, see L. V. D. Owen, England and the Low Countries, in English Historical Review, 1913, xxviii. 13–33.

2113. Royal and other historical letters illustrative of the reign of Henry III., from the originals in the public record office, ed. W. W. Shirley. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1862-66.

Made up of 'litteræ regum,' or 'ancient correspondence,' together with some letters taken from the patent and close rolls. Valuable.

b. PARTICULAR COUNTRIES.

For a calendar of entries in the papal registers relating to Great Britain, see No. 612. The material on English affairs in the Venetian archives has been calendared by Rawdon Brown and others for the Rolls Series, in eighteen volumes (London, 1864–1912), the first of which covers the years 1202–1509.

France.

The French rolls extend from 26 Henry III. to 26 Charles II.; the Norman rolls, 2 John-10 Henry V.; the Gascon or Vascon rolls, 26 Henry III.—7 Edward IV. The Norman and Gascon rolls relate respectively to the affairs of Normandy and Aquitaine while those provinces were under the dominion of the English crown. The earlier French rolls relate mainly to the English possessions in France, but the later ones contain many diplomatic documents concerning European countries in general. For Norman and French rolls, see also Nos. 2141, 2144.

This valuable work contains letters patent and close, etc., of English kings relating chiefly to the affairs of Aquitaine. The earliest Gascon rolls, down to 1273, are not exclusively concerned with the affairs of Gascony, but contain charters and other documents enrolled in this series by reason of the presence of the king in Gascony. Bémont accomplished their publication for the reign of Edward I. from photographs supplied by the English government to the French: see Montagu Burrows, The Publication of the Gascon Rolls, Royal Hist. Soc., Trans., new series, 1892, vi. 109-24. A fragment of the roll of 26 Henry III. was printed by the Record Commission: Rotulus Vasconiæ, Henricus III. [London, 1836?], pp. 28. A roll of 1286, recently discovered, is described by Bémont in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1910, lxxi. 219-22.

§ 54. THE ARMY AND NAVY.

The principal sources for the study of the history of the army and navy are:—

- 1. Writs of military summons, most of which are entered on the close and treaty rolls: No. 2149.
- 2. Muster, retinue, and marshalsea rolls, giving the names of those who served in various campaigns: Nos. 1946, 2146-7, 2149. For a muster roll of the army, 1417, see Benjamin Williams's edition of Gesta Henrici V. (No. 1789), 265-73; and for part of a muster roll, 21 Edward III., see Yeatman, Feudal History of the County of Derby (No. 871), i. 479-82.
- 3. Accounts of payments to men who served in various campaigns: Nos. 2140, 2148, 2150.
  - 4. Ordinances for the army and navy: Nos. 2143, 2145.
- 5. The Black Book of the Admiralty, the chief source for the study of maritime law: No. 2145.
- 6. The Bayeux Tapestry, which throws light on the battle of Hastings and the events which led to it: No. 2139. Baudri, bishop of Dol, 1107-30, wrote a poem, addressed to Adela, daughter of William the Conqueror, in which he describes a tapestry similar to that of Bayeux; this poem has been edited by Léopold Delisle, in Mémoires de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie, 1871, xxviii. 187-224.
- 7. The scutage rolls and wardrobe accounts: §§ 50b, 50e, 50f, and Nos. 2093a, 2149.

There is an ancient English poem on the siege of Harfleur and the battle of Agincourt in Thomas Hearne's edition of the Vita et Gesta Henrici V. (No. 584), 359-75. Page's poem on the siege of Rouen, 1418, has been edited by James Gairdner: No. 1829. For the modern literature concerning the army and navy, see §§ 21, 68.

For contemporary continental authorities on the Hundred Years' war, see Molinier, Les Sources de l'Histoire de France (No. 30a), vol. iv.; and Pirenne, Bibliographie de l'Histoire de Belgique (No. 32). Molinier (vol. iii. nos. 2031, 2038, 2040, 2056) also points to various documents concerning the French wars of Edward I.

2138. An account of the army with which Richard II. invaded Scotland in 1385, ed. N. H. Nicolas. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxii. 13-19. London, 1829.

✓ 2139. *Bayeux tapestry (The) delineated. By C. A. Stothard. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Vetusta Monumenta, vol. vi. plates 1-17 (coloured). London, [1819-23]. The Bayeux tapestry reproduced in autotype, with historic notes. By F. R. Fowke. Arundel Soc. London, 1875; abridged editions, 1898, 1913. 79 plates. [Valuable.]—La tapisserie de Bayeux: 79 planches phototypographiques, avec un texte historique [based on Fowke's work]. By Jules Comte. Paris, 1878.

This tapestry is a strip of linen (formerly preserved in the cathedral of Bayeux, in Normandy, and now in the town museum of that city), in which is worked, in coloured wools, a series of events immediately preceding the death of Edward the Confessor and ending with the invasion of England and the battle of Hastings. It is about 20 inches wide and 230 feet long, and is divided into seventy-two compartments or scenes. The best authorities believe that it is a contemporary work made in Normandy by order of Bishop Odo for his newly-built cathedral of Bayeux, and that it is not the handiwork of Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror. Albert Marignan (La Tapisserie de Bayeux, Paris, 1902) holds that the story illustrated is based on the account of the Norman Conquest preserved by Wace in the Roman de Rou, circa 1170, and that the tapestry was designed between then and 1180: but his view is rejected by Gaston Paris, in Romania, 1902, pp. 404-19; by Maurice Lanore, in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1903, lxiv. 83-93, who believes that it was designed 1080-95; and by J. H. Round, in the Monthly Review, 1904, xvii. 109-26. The tapestry is valuable for the study of the events with which it deals. For the literature of the subject, see the bibliography in Fowke's book. 1875, pp. 97-102. Besides the works already mentioned, the principal accounts of the history of the tapestry are :-

2140. Compte (Le) de l'armée anglaise au siège d'Orléans, 1428–29, ed. Louis Jarry. Orleans, 1892.

The 'compte,' pp. 87-204, is a contemporary document which enumerates the English captains, their troops, pay, etc. It is preceded by an account of the organisation of the English army.

2141. Crecy and Calais [1346-47], from the public records, ed. George Wrottesley. Wm. Salt Archæol. Soc., Collections, vol. xviii. pt. ii. London, 1897.

Contains translations of extracts from the following records:-

French rolls, 19-21 Edw. III., 58-136.

Memoranda rolls, 21-35 Edw. III.,

Accounts of the treasurer of the royal household, 18-23 Edw. III., 191-219.

Norman roll, 20 Edw. III., 219-59. Calais roll, 21 Edw. III., 260-79.

2142. Diary of the expedition of Edward I. into Scotland, 1296, ed. P. F. Tytler. Bannatyne Club, Bannatyne Miscellany, i. 265–82. Edinburgh, 1827.

Contains the French text, which seems to be contemporary with the date of the expedition, and a sixteenth-century translation. This translation was also edited by N. H. Nicolas: A Narrative of the Progress of Edward I. in his Invasion of Scotland in 1296, in Archæologia, 1827, xxi. 478-98.

2143. Excerpta historica [ed. Samuel Bentley]. London, 1831.

Contains the ordinances made for the army by Henry V., in 1419, and by John Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, temp. Hen. VI. (taken from a MS. in the College of Arms), pp. 28-43. The ordinances of 1419 are also printed in the Black Book of the Admiralty (No. 2145), i. 459-72. Bentley devotes several pages to a description of the standards borne in the reign of Henry VIII., with a few of earlier date.

2144. Military service performed by Staffordshire tenants [1230-1392], ed. George Wrottesley. Wm. Salt Archæol. Soc., Collections, viii. 1-122, xiv. 221-64. London, [1888-94].

Translations of extracts taken mainly from the Scottish and French rolls.

2145. *Monumenta juridica: the black book of the admiralty [with a translation and an elaborate appendix], ed. Sir Travers Twiss. Rolls Series. 4 vols. London, 1871-76.

Vol. i. contains the Black Book, pp. 1-344; documents connected with the admiralty of Sir Thomas Beaufort, 9 Hen. IV.-4 Hen. VI., pp. 347-94; ordinances of war made in 1385 and 1419, pp. 453-72. Vols. ii.-iv. contain the Domesday of Ipswich, the Coutumes d'Oleron, the Spanish Customs of the Sea, the maritime laws of Gotland, Wisby, Flanders, etc.

The Black Book of the Admiralty is a collection of laws, in French and Latin, relating to the navy, the original MS. of which is preserved in the admiralty archives at Whitehall. Selden calls it the 'jewel of the admiralty records.' The earlier part seems to have been compiled in Henry VI.'s reign; but it includes some documents of the time of Edward III., together with certain ordinances which purport to have been made in the 12th and 13th centuries. For the Rolls of Oleron, see also No. 2391c.

- 2146. Muster roll for the rape of Hastings, 13 Edward III. Collectanea Topog. et Genealogica (No. 820), vii. 118–28. London, 1841.

2151. Scotland in 1298: documents relating to the campaign of Edward I. in that year, ed. Henry Gough. London, etc., 1888.

Contains two rolls of the horses belonging to the royal household, and numerous extracts from patent and close rolls, etc. Valuable.

2152. The siege of Caerlaverock, 1300, with the arms of the earls, barons, and knights who were present; with a translation, a history of the castle, etc., ed. N. H. Nicolas. London, 1828.— A better edition, by Thomas Wright: The roll of arms of the princes, barons, and knights who attended Edward I. at the siege of Caerlaverock; with a translation. London, 1864.

An interesting French poem, giving a catalogue of Edward I.'s followers, with a description of their coat-armour and persons, and an account of the siege.

55. FEUDAL TENURES: INQUESTS POST MORTEM, ETC.

- a. General, Nos. 2153-61.
- b. Particular Counties, Nos. 2162-92.

The public records relating primarily to feudal tenures are:—

r. Inquisitions post mortem, Henry III.—Charles II. (Nos. 2153—6, 2162, etc.). These were held on the death of any of the king's tenants-in-chief, to enable him to exercise his rights of relief, wardship, and escheat. The jury, assembled by the escheator of the county, declared what lands the tenant had at the time of his death, what their annual value was, by what rents or services they were held, who was the next heir, and how old he then was. If he was of age, he paid a feudal relief to the crown; if he was a minor, the king would have the wardship of the estate; if there was no heir the estate would escheat to the crown. Althoughthe regular series of these records does not begin till early in Henry III.'s reign, similar information regarding reliefs, wardships, and the like is afforded by certain rolls of the year 1185 (No. 2159). The inquests post mortem are the favourite hunting-grounds of genealogists; they are also of great value for the study of manorial history, for they often include minute 'extents,' or surveys, of manors, which give details regarding the tenants on an estate, their services and holdings. Filed with these documents are many inquisitions ad quod damnum (Nos. 2094, 2105); but from I Edward II. to 39 Henry VI. the latter form a separate series. Lists of abstracts of inquests post mortem preserved in public libraries will be found in Richard Sims's Manual for the Genealogist, 1856, pp. 125-8. For the escheators' accounts, which give many details regarding feudal property, see Deputy Keeper's Reports, 1840, i. 139-42.

- 2. Hundred rolls (No. 2160). They contain inquisitions by a jury of each hundred concerning infringements of the king's rights, encroachments on the royal demesne, and oppressive measures of the sheriffs and other local officers of the crown. During the disorders of Henry III.'s reign the magnates and sheriffs had been guilty of many usurpations and exactions. 1274 and again in 1279 Edward I. appointed commissioners who visited the various counties to secure data regarding the nature of these abuses. The jury for each hundred gave information concerning the owners and occupiers of lands, the extent and tenures of their estates, the services rendered by under-tenants. the feudal profits of the king which had been wrongfully withheld. manorial courts and privileges, exactions of the nobility and royal officers, and many other matters. The verdicts or reports of the juries throw much light upon feudal tenures and manorial institutions. In 39 Henry III. and after 8 Edward I. similar inquisitions were held before the itinerant justices, and are entered on the eyre rolls.
- 3. Testa de Nevill, or Liber Feodorum (No. 2161), a register compiled from inquisitions, many of the originals of which still exist in the Public Record Office. It contains an account of knights' fees, serjeanties, widows and heiresses whose marriages were in the gift of the king with the value of their lands, churches in the gift of the king, escheats, and the amount of scutage and aid paid by each tenant. This record enabled the exchequer officials to determine from whom aids, scutages, and other feudal profits might be demanded by the crown. 'Testa' seems to refer to the record chest in which the register was preserved; but it is uncertain whether the title is derived from Ralph de Nevill.

an exchequer officer of Henry III., or from Jollan de Nevill, an itinerant justice of the same reign, or from John de Nevill, an official of Edward I.'s time. The title Testa de Nevill refers only to certain older lists or returns which form a small part of the whole register. The latter includes numerous returns for the reigns of Richard I. and John; the bulk of the material in the printed work belongs to the first half of Henry III.'s reign. The compilation in its present form is usually ascribed to the time of Edward II., but it may have been made late in the reign of Edward I.

- 4. Kirkby's Quest. This is a survey of various counties of England, made, probably in 1284-85, under the direction of John de Kirkby, the king's treasurer. It comprises in most cases abridgments of original inquisitions, or extracts from them, and gives information concerning the knights' fees held of the king or of others; some of the complete returns have, however, survived. The survey resulted from certain reforms in the exchequer ordained by the statute de scaccario, 12 Edward I. 'The return of knights' fees, which eventually determined the importance of this survey to later exchequer officials, and to modern students, was apparently a subordinate part of the inquiry, not required by the statute, and possibly designed to facilitate the collection of the scutage of 10 Edward I.' See Nos. 2164, 2166b, 2168, 2171, 2186, 2191; and, for the part relating to Leicestershire, see Nichols, County of Leicester (No. 996), vol. i. pp. cxxii.-The best account of Kirkby's Quest is in Inquisitions and Assessments (No. 2157), vol. i. pp. viii.-xxii. The original inquisition for the hundred of Roulowe, Bucks, is printed in full. ibid., i. 86-90.
- 5. Nomina Villarum (No. 2158). This document comprises returns made by sheriffs as to what cities, boroughs, and townships there were in each hundred or wapentake, and who were the lords thereof. This information was needed for a military levy in 9 Edward II. (1316), because each township was required to find one man-at-arms.

Many of the public records mentioned in the preceding sections of this chapter also contain much material relating to knights' fees and to other feudal tenures: for example, Domesday Book and similar surveys,  $\S 50a$ ; the books of the exchequer,  $\S 50b$ ; taxation rolls, especially the scutage rolls and the Book of Aids,  $\S 50f$ . For local manorial records, see  $\S 57$ ; and for the modern literature concerning feudal tenures,  $\S \S 22$ , 69.

Genealogist, new series, i. 190–94, 206–13; ii. 61–64, 88–93; iii. 49–53, 98–100, 179–85, 210–15; iv. 55–59, 119–22, 143–8, 215–17; vi. 158–64, 243–50. London, 1884–90.
- 2155. Calendarium inquisitionum post mortem sive escaetarum [Hen. III.-Rich. III.]. Record Com. 4 vols. [London], 1806–28.

Printed from an inaccurate MS. calendar, which seems to have been compiled in the reign of James I. It contains many inquests which are not inquisitions post mortem, and no apparatus is provided to distinguish the latter from the former. For a better edition, see No. 2153.

- 2156. Heredes ex inquisitionibus post mortem, 1272–1439, ed. Thomas Phillipps. Middle Hill Press, 1841. pp. 87.
- 2157. *Inquisitions and assessments relating to feudal aids, with other analogous documents preserved in the public record office, 1284–1431. Vols. i.-v. Rolls Series. London, 1899–1908.

The work is designed to illustrate the succession of holders of land during the years 1284-1431, and may be regarded as a supplement to the Testa de Nevill. It is based on Kirkby's Quest, Nomina Villarum, the Book of Aids (above, p. 427), the aid of 31 Edward I., and the subsidy rolls of 6 and 9 Henry VI. Covers all the Counties but Yorkshire.

2159. Rotuli de dominabus et pueris et puellis de donatione regis in xii. comitatibus, 31 Hen. II., 1185, ed. Stacey Grimaldi. London, 1830. pp. 54.—A new edition is in preparation for the Pipe Roll Society.

Contains abstracts of inquisitions the object of which was to ascertain the wardships, reliefs, and other feudal profits due to the king from the widows and children of his tenants-in-chief. Much information is given regarding the value and quantity of their lands, etc.

2160. *Rotuli hundredorum, temp. Hen. III. et Edw. I. Record Com. 2 vols. [London], 1812-18.

Covers all the present counties of England except Cheshire, Cumberland, Durham, Lancashire, Middlesex, Monmouth, Surrey, and Westmorland; the records for the counties of Huntingdon, Oxford, and Cambridge are especially full. Contains most of the hundred rolls of Edward I.'s reign and some of the inquisitions of 39 Henry III. For the rolls omitted in these two volumes, see Scargill Bird's Guide (1908), 140-42; and No. 2187.

2193. Analecta Franciscana sive chronica aliaque varia documenta ad historiam fratrum minorum spectantia. Edita a patribus collegii S. Bonaventuræ. Vols. i.–v. Quaracchi, 1885–1912.

A valuable collection. Thomas of Eccleston's De adventu fratrum minorum in Angliam, i. 215-75: see No. 2201. A brief account of the numerous recent publications of texts and critical studies relating to the Franciscans is given in Paschal Robinson's Short Introduction to Franciscan Literature, New York, 1907. Important publications are due to the British Society of Franciscan Studies (Nos. 1059, 2214a, 2227-7a, 2256, etc.). See also Archivum Franciscanum Historicum, Quaracchi, 1908, etc.

2194. Ancren riwle: a treatise on the rules and duties of monastic life. Edited and translated, from a semi-Saxon MS. of the thirteenth century, by James Morton. Camden Soc. [London], 1853.—The nun's rule, being the Ancren Riwle modernised by James Morton [i.e. Morton's translation], ed. [F. A.] Gasquet. London, 1905.

Throws light on the state of society and of religion in medieval England. Morton shows that the real author was probably Richard Poore, who was bishop of Salisbury 1219-29, and died 1237.

2211. *Taxatio ecclesiastica Angliæ et Walliæ auctoritate Nicolai IV. Record Com. [London], 1802.

In 1288 Pope Nicholas IV. granted the tenth of the revenue of the clergy to Edward I. for six years, to defray the expenses of a crusade; and the king ordered a new valuation of all ecclesiastical benefices in the provinces of Canterbury and York, which was completed in 1291–92. A revised valuation for the province of York was made in 1317 and following years, and is printed with that of 1291–92 in the volume published by the Record Commission. Until 1535 grants of the clergy in parliament and convocation were based upon the Taxatio Ecclesiastica. Fitzralph, archbishop of Armagh, directed against the friars, A.D. 1357], ii. 466-87. A much briefer work than his De Pauperie Salvatoris (which is also directed against the poverty and privileges of the friars), written 1350-53 in seven books, the first four of which are printed by R. L. Poole as an appendix to his edition of Wyclif's De Dominio Divino, Wyclif Society, London, 1890. Fitzralph died in 1360.

2222. Historians of the church of York and its archbishops, ed. James Raine. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1879-94.

For the portion relating to the Anglo-Saxon period, see No. 1441. most important biography in vol. ii. is the history of four archbishops of York, Thomas I., Gerard, Thomas II., and Thurstan, A.D. 1070-1127 (with additions to 1153), by Hugh the Chantor, or Hugh Sottovagina, precentor of York: a valuable account of the controversy between the archbishops of Canterbury and York, told by an eye-witness. Vol. ii. also contains a letter of Archbishop Ralph to the pope, 1119, concerning the same controversy; anonymous lives of archbishops Thurstan and William Fitzherbert; several papers relating to Archbishop Scrope and his execution in 1405; Chronica Pontificum Ecclesiæ Eboracensis, A.D. 601-1519, the part from 1147 to 1373 by Thomas Stubbs, a writer of the 14th century; etc. Vol. iii. is a collection of letters, wills, and other documents, from 930 to 1522; they are connected with the history of the northern bishoprics, and are taken from the registers of the archbishops of York, etc. Thomas II., see W. E. Hodgson, The Life of Thomas II., Archbishop of York [1108-14], Nottingham, 1909.

2223. Historical papers and letters from the northern registers, ed. James Raine. Rolls Series. London, 1873.

Contains many letters of the archbishops of York and of the bishops of Durham and Carlisle, A.D. 1265-1415.

Alexander III. (d. 1181).

2224. Alexandri III. Romani pontificis Opera omnia, id est epistolæ et privilegia, in Migne's Patrologia, vol. cc. Paris, 1855.

Many of the letters relate to England, especially to the conflict between Becket and Henry II. See No. 2229.

Bacon, Roger (d. 1294).

An edition of Bacon's writings, of which the first volume is already in press, is in preparation by a committee connected with the commemoration of the seventh centenary of his birth, in 1914. See p. 669, below.

2227. Fr. Rogeri Bacon Opera quædam hactenus inedita, ed. J. S. Brewer. Vol. i., containing Opus tertium, Opus minus, and Compendium philosophiæ [with a valuable preface]. Rolls Series. London, 1859.—Opera, ed. Robert Steele. Pt. i., Metaphysica de viciis contractis in studio theologie; pts. ii.—iv., Communium naturalium liber i. [(2 vols.) and liber ii.]. 4 vols. Oxford, [1905]—13.—Excerpts from Bacon's works are edited by Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxviii. 569–83. Hanover, 1888.

A part of the Opus Tertium has recently been edited by Pierre Duhem, Un Fragment Inédit de l'Opus Tertium de Roger Bacon, Quaracchi, 1909; another part by A. G. Little, as vol. iv. of the British Society of Franciscan Studies, 1912, pp. 92. See also Little's paper in English Historical Review, 1912, xxvii. 318-21.

2227a. Fratris Rogeri Bacon Compendium studii theologiæ, ed. H[astings] Rashdall. British Soc. of Franciscan Studies, vol. iii. Aberdeen, 1911. pp. 118.

Bacon's 'last work,' written in 1292. At pp. 71-112 there is a full list of his writings, compiled by A. G. Little. For an earlier list, see Little's Grey Friars (No. 1059), 195-211. Cf. Steele in Athenæum, Sept. 20, 1913, p. 284.

2228. The Opus majus of Roger Bacon, ed. J. H. Bridges: 3 vols. Oxford, etc., 1897-1900.—New edition of the introduction, by H. Gordon Jones: The life and work of Roger Bacon. London, 1914.

Becket (d. 1170).

Garnier's Vie, and nine biographies in Robertson's collection; are contemporary works, written soon after Becket's death (before the end of Henry II.'s reign); and several of the biographers were intimate friends of Becket or had been in close contact with him. See Robertson's prefaces; Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, ii. 309-88; W. H. Hutton, S. Thomas of Canterbury (a collection of extracts from contemporary writers, London, 1889), 271-80; Louis Halphen, Les Biographes de Thomas Becket, in Revue Historique, 1909, cii. 35-45; and No. 2230.

For modern biographies, see Nos. 3117-28.

2229. * Materials for the history of Thomas Becket, ed. J. C. Robertson. Rolls Series. 7 vols. London, 1875–85.—Extracts from the various lives noted below are edited by Pauli in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 17–42. Hanover, 1885.

Vol. i. Vita S. Thomæ auctore Willelmo monacho Cantuariensi.

Vol. ii. Lives of Becket, by Benedict of Peterborough, John of Salisbury, Alan of Tewkesbury, and Edward Grim.

Vol. iii. Lives of Becket, by William Fitzstephen and Herbert of Bosham. See No. 2235.

Vol. iv. Two contemporary anonymous lives of Becket, and the Quadrilogus. One of the anonymous lives was formerly ascribed to Roger of Pontigny. The Quadrilogus is a composite life drawn from earlier biographers. It exists in two forms: one was written in 1198-99 by a monk of Evesham; the other is of later date. Vols. v.-vii. Letters written to or by Becket or relating to him. Among these are letters from Henry II., Alexander III., John of Henry II., Alexander III., John of Salisbury, Gilbert Foliot, Arnulf of Lisieux, Herbert of Bosham, and Peter of Blois.

This collection of lives and letters has superseded the older one by J. A. Giles in his Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583).

2230. Thómas Saga Erkibyskups: a life of Becket in Icelandic, with English translation, ed. Eiríkr Magnússon. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1875–83.

There was a Thomas Saga in Iceland in the 13th century, but the saga as it has come down to us was probably written by Arngrim, abbot of Thingeyrar, who died in 1362. It was compiled mainly from Benedict's work (No. 2229) and from a contemporary life of Becket by Robert of Cricklade. It contains some details which are not found in the other extant biographies. Magnússon, in vol. ii., has carefully investigated the chronological order of the contemporary lives of Becket.

- 2231. Vie de Saint Thomas. Par Garnier de Pont Sainte Maxence, ed. Célestin Hippeau. Paris, 1859.
- A valuable French poem, completed in 1176. See Eugène Etienne, La Vie de St. Thomas composée par Garnier (Paris, 1883); also Le Roux de Lincy's essay on La Vie et la Mort de Saint Thomas de Cantorbéry, par Garnier de Pont-Sainte-Maxence, in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1842, iv. 208-41.

Beckington, Thomas (d. 1465).

He was bishop of Bath and Wells, and was often employed by Henry VI. on diplomatic missions. See G. G. Perry, Bishop Beckington and Henry VI., in English Historical Review, 1894, ix. 261-74.

Translation only. The Latin text is printed in the Official Correspondence of Beckington (No. 2106), ii. 177-248. A French translation, with notes, by Gustave Brunet was published in the Indicateur of Bordeaux in 1842, under the title Journal d'un Ambassadeur Anglais à Bordeaux en 1442.

Beckington wrote in Latin a journal of his mission to Calais, 1439, which is printed in Proceedings of the Privy Council, ed. N. H. Nicolas (London, 1835), v. 334-407.

2233. Letters of queen Margaret of Anjou and bishop Beckington and others, written in the reigns of Henry V. and Henry VI., ed. Cecil Monro. Camden Soc. [London], 1863.

For a more valuable collection of Beckington's letters, see No. 2106,

Blois, Peter of (d. circa 1204).

He was secretary of the archbishop of Canterbury, and was in great favour at the court of Henry II.

2234. Petri Blesensis Bathoniensis archidiaconi Opera omnia, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 4 vols. Oxford, 1846-47.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, vol. ccvii. Paris, 1855.

Vols. i.-ii. Epistolæ. Written mainly 1169-1202; many of them relate to English affairs. See No. 2229.

Written any of Henricum II. et abbatem Bonævallensem, etc.

Vol. iv. Sermones, etc.

Bosham, Herbert of (f. 1162-86).

2235. Herberti de Boseham S. Thomæ Cant. clerici a secretis Opera omnia, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 2 vols. Oxford, 1845–46.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, cxc. 1070–1474. Paris, 1854.

Contains Vita S. Thomæ (valuable), Liber Melorum, Epistolæ, etc. The Liber Melorum, which is mainly a comparison between the sufferings of Becket and Christ, is of little historical value. For the Vita S. Thomæ, written 1184-86, see No. 2229. Herbert was a member of Becket's household.

Bozon, Nicole.

2236. Les contes moralisés de Nicole Bozon, frère mineur, ed. L. T. Smith and Paul Meyer. Société des Anciens Textes Français. Paris, 1889.

A collection of stories used in sermons; written in Anglo-French about 1320. The writer assails prelates and others in high places, and exhibits sympathy for the lower classes. 'Il n'y a pas, dans toute la littérature anglo-normande, un second ouvrage qui puisse nous donner une idée aussi complète de ce qu'était en Angleterre et au commencement du xive siècle la prédiction populaire.' On Bozon, see Herbert (No. 515a), 100-105.

Bromyard, John of (fl. 1390).

2237. [Johannis de Bromyard Summa prædicantium.] Nuremberg, 1485; without title-page.—Another edition, 2 pts., Venice, 1586.

Contains matters suitable for use in preaching, arranged alphabetically under topics. John was a Dominican who denounced Wyclif's doctrines.

Cantilupe, Thomas de (d. 1282).

2237a. De S. Thoma de Cantilupe episc. Herefordiensi in Anglia apud montem Flasconis in Hetruria pontificia commentarius prævius, in Bolland's Acta Sanctorum Octobris (No. 603), i. 539–609 (vita), 610–705 (miracula). Antwerp, 1765.

Based on the almost contemporary Processus Canonisationis preserved in the Vatican (Vat. MS. 4015). See T. F. Tout's elaborate article in Dictionary of National Biography, 1886, viii. 448-52; and No. 2400.

Chartres, Ivo of (d. 1116).

2238. S. Ivonis Carnotensis episcopi Epistolæ, in Migne's Patrologia, clxii. 10–296. Paris, 1854.—Translated by Lucien Merlet: Lettres de S. Ives, évêque de Chartres. Chartres, 1885.

Many of these letters are addressed to persons in England. See, farther, Molinier (No. 30a), ii. no. 1878.

Dervy, Walter of.

2239. Walteri abbatis Dervensis Epistolæ, ed. C. Messiter. Caxton Soc. London, 1850.

The editor of the volume says that Walter was 'the abbat of Dervy, or Montier-en-Der, a monastery in the diocese of Catalaunia [Châlons-sur-Marne], in France,' Among Walter's correspondents were Becket and John of Salisbury,

Foliot, Gilbert (d. 1188).

2240. Gilberti episcopi primum Herefordiensis deinde Londoniensis Epistolæ [1139-89], ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ

(No. 583). 2 vols. Oxford, 1845.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, exc. 739-1068. Paris, 1854.

Foliot was a bitter opponent of Becket. See No. 2229.

Gascoigne, Thomas (d. 1458).

2241. Loci e libro veritatum: passages selected from Gascoigne's Theological Dictionary illustrating the condition of church and state, 1403–58, ed. J. E. T. Rogers. Oxford, 1881.

Combats evils in the church, assailing the clergy for neglecting their duties; and gives information regarding the university of Oxford. A valuable work, badly edited. On Gascoigne's Theological Dictionary, see James Gairdner, Lollardy (No. 3167), i. 243-64.

Giraldus Cambrensis (d. circa 1220).

See No. 1782.

2242. *Giraldi Cambrensis Opera, ed. J. S. Brewer, J. F. Dimock, and G. F. Warner. Rolls Series. 8 vols. London, 1861-91.

Vol. i. De Rebus a se Gestis; Invectionum Libellus; Symbolum Electorum. These works give many details regarding the author's life. The Symbolum Electorum is made up chiefly of his letters and poems.

Vol. ii. Gemma Ecclesiastica. Interprets disputed points of doctrine; gives regulations regarding services, etc., throwing light on the manners of the age and on the condition of morality and religion in certain districts of England and Wales.

Vol. iii. De Invectionibus; De Menevensi Ecclesia Dialogus; Vita S. David. The first two works contain various details regarding Gerald's life.

Vol. iv. Speculum Ecclesiæ (mainly an attack on the monastic bodies); De Vita Galfridi Archiepiscopi Ebor', d. 1212 (containing some useful details regarding the reigns of Henry II, and Richard I.).

Vol. v. Topographia Hibernica; Expugnatio Hibernica. See No. 1782.

Vol. vi. Itinerarium Kambriæ; Descriptio Kambriæ. See No. 1782. Vol. vii. Vita S. Remigii (an untrustworthy history of the bishops of Lincoln, 1067-1200); Vita S. Hugonis. This life of Hugh, bishop of Lincoln, 1186-1200, is trustworthy, but contains little that is new.

Vol. viii. De Principis Instructione Liber. Translated by Joseph Stevenson, Church Historians of England (London, 1858), vol. v. pt. i. Completed about 1217. It is directed against the princes of Gerald's own time, especially against Henry II. and his sons, and contains many references to the affairs of Henry II.'s reign. See No. 540.

Grosseteste, Robert (d. 1253).

2243. *Roberti Grosseteste episcopi Lincolniensis Epistolæ, ed. H. R. Luard. Rolls Series. London, 1861.—Die philosophischen Werke des Robert Grosseteste, Bischofs von Lincoln, ed. Ludwig Baur. Münster, 1912.

Grosseteste, a secular himself, was the first lector of the Franciscans at Oxford. His letters (about 1210-53) throw light on the condition of the English church. Some of them are addressed to Henry III. and Simon de Montfort. Luard's preface contains a good account of Grosseteste's life. See Nos. 2221, 2495, 2801, 3132-7; and Charles Jourdain, Doutes sur l'Authenticité de quelques Ecrits contre la Cour de Rome attribués à Robert Grosse-Tête, in Comptes Rendus de l'Académie des Inscriptions (année 1868), 1869, iv. 13-29; reprinted in his Excursions Historiques, Paris, 1888.

Kyteler, Alice.

2244. A contemporary narrative of the proceedings against dame Alice Kyteler, prosecuted for sorcery in 1324 by the bishop of Ossory, ed. Thomas Wright. Camden Soc. London, 1843. pp. 61.

Lanfranc (d. 1089).

For modern biographies, see Nos. 3138-40.

2245. Beati Lanfranci archiepiscopi Cantuariensis Opera omnia, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 2 vols. Oxford, 1844.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, vol. cl. Paris, 1854.

Contains Vita Lanfranci auctore Milone Crispino; Epistolæ; Statuta pro Ordine S. Benedicti, etc. Milo Crispin was a pupil of Lanfranc and precentor of Bec; his life of Lanfranc is of some value. Lanfranc's letters are important for ecclesiastical history in the reign of William I. On his forgeries, designed to assert his rights against those of the archbishop of York, see Heinrich Böhmer, Die Fälschungen Erzbischof Lanfranks, Leipsic, 1902. For three letters from Pope Clement III. inviting Lanfranc to visit Rome, see F. Liebermann, Lanfranc and the Antipope, in English Historical Review, 1901, xvi. 328-32.

Lincoln, Hugh of (d. 1200).

For Gerald de Barri's life of Hugh, see No. 2242; for modern biographies, Nos. 3141a-44.

2246. *Magna vita S. Hugonis episcopi Lincolniensis, ed. J. F. Dimock. Rolls Series. London, 1864.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 316–23. Hanover, 1885.

Written by Adam, abbot of Evesham, Hugh's chaplain; completed before 1220. Contains many notices of public affairs,

PART IV

2247. Metrical life of St. Hugh, bishop of Lincoln, ed. J. F. Dimock. Lincoln, 1860. pp. 54.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 323-4. Hanover, 1885.

Probably written in 1220 or soon afterwards.

Lisieux, Arnulf of (d. 1184).

2248. Arnulfi Lexoviensis episcopi Epistolæ, ed. J. A. Giles, Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). Oxford, 1844.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, cci. 17–152. Paris, 1855.

Many of these letters are addressed to Henry II., Becket, and other English prelates. For other letters of Arnulf and his English contemporaries, see Spicilegium Liberianum (ed. Francesco Liverani, Florence, 1863), pt. i. 551-3, 573-92, 603-28; or Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1902, lxiii. 352-73. See also No. 2229; and cf. Molinier, Sources (No. 30a), ii. no. 1908.

Losinga, Herbert de (d. 1119).

2249. Epistolæ Herberti de Losinga, Osberti de Clara, et Elmeri prioris Cantuariensis, ed. Robert Anstruther. [Half-title: Scriptores monastici.] Brussels, etc., 1846.—Also published by the Caxton Society, London, 1846.

Herbert de Losinga, bishop of Norwich, was in high favour at the court of Henry I. Osbert de Clare, prior of Westminster (d. circa 1136), wrote a life of Edward the Confessor: No. 1378. Elmer (d. 1137) was prior of Christ church, Canterbury.

2250. The life, letters, and sermons of bishop Herbert de Losinga; the letters, as translated by the editors, being incorporated with the life, and the sermons being now first edited, with an English translation and notes, by E. M. Goulburn and Henry Symonds. 2 vols. London, etc., 1878.

Map, Walter (d. circa 1210?).

2251. Gualteri Mapes De nugis curialium, ed. Thomas Wright. Camden Soc. [London], 1850.—Extracts, ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 61-74. Hanover, 1885.—New edition in preparation, by M. R. James. 740

Completed about 1190. It is a 'book of court table-talk,' a collection of notes on the life of his day made at different times, including the gossip of courtiers, an attack on the monastic orders, a valuable sketch of the history of the English court from the reign of William II. to that of Henry II., etc. The author was one of Henry II.'s itinerant justices. For the poems ascribed to him, see No. 2761. There is a good account of Map by George Phillips: Walter Map, ein Beitrag zur Geschichte König Heinrichs von England und des Lebens an seinem Hof, in Sitzungsberichte der Akademie der Wissenschaften, Phil.-Hist. Classe (Vienna, 1853), x. 319-99. See also J[acques] Bardoux, De Walterio Mappio, Columbariis [Coulommiers], 1900 (the most exhaustive account of his life); and W. L. Jones, Walter Map, Soc. of Cymmrodorion, Trans., 1905-06 (London, 1907), 161-88.

Mirk, John.

2252. Instructions for parish priests. By John Myrc, ed. Edward Peacock. Early English Text Soc. London, 1868.—Revised edition, by F. J. Furnivall, 1902.

A poem in English, written not later than 1450, although the language is of somewhat older date. Mirk also compiled Liber Festialis, a collection of English sermons, circa A.D. 1400, printed in 1483, 1493, 1494, 1495, 1496, etc.; [new edition] edited from the MSS. by Theodor Erbe, pt. i. (text and glossary), Early English Text Soc., London, 1905.

Netter, Thomas (d. 1430).

2253. * Fasciculi zizaniorum magistri Johannis Wyclif cum tritico, ascribed to Thomas Netter of Walden, ed. W. W. Shirley. Rolls Series. London, 1858.

A series of documents extending to 1428, connected by a narrative, In this work we have the only contemporary account of the rise of the Lollards. Shirley, in his valuable introduction, states that a large part of the work was probably compiled in 1392-94 by Stephen Patryngton, who gave his papers to Netter, and that the latter made additions during the years 1414-28. In 1426 Netter also completed his Doctrinale Fidei Ecclesiae Catholicæ contra Wiclevistas et Hussitas, 3 vols., [Paris], 1521-32; other editions, Venice, 1571 and 1757-59. Netter, who is better known as Walden, was the confessor of Henry V. and one of the ablest opponents of the Lollards.

Norwich, William of (d. 1144).

2254. The life and miracles of St. William of Norwich. By Thomas of Monmouth; edited, with a translation, by Augustus Jessopp and M. R. James. Cambridge, 1896.

This life, compiled in 1172-73 by a monk of Norwich, is the starting-point of the myth of Jewish ritual murders, and throws some light on the religious life of England in the 12th century. The Jews were accused of crucifying William in 1144. For a similar legend regarding Hugh of Lincoln (d. 1255), see Dictionary of National Biography, 1891, xxviii. 169-71; Child, Popular Ballads (No. 2753), iii. 233-43; and Jewish Encyclopedia, 1904, vi. 487-8.

Ottoboni Fieschi (d. 1276),

2255. Letters of cardinal Ottoboni [1265-68], ed. Rose Graham. English Hist. Review, xv. 87-120. London, 1900.

He was papal legate in England, 1265-68. Under the name of Hadrian V. he was pope, July 11-Aug. 16, 1276.

Peckham, John (d. 1292). See No. 3148a.

2256. Registrum epistolarum Johannis Peckham archiepiscopi Cantuariensis [1279–92], ed. C. T. Martin. Rolls Series. 3 vols. London, 1882–85.—New edition, pts. i.—ii. [1279–87], Canterbury and York Soc., London, 1908–10.

Valuable. The edition in the Rolls Series omits some portions, but the new edition will comprise the whole register. Other works of Peckham recently published: Canticum Pauperis [a defence of Franciscan poverty, written 1269-79], in Bibliotheca Franciscana Ascetica Medii Aevi, iv. 133-205, Quaracchi, 1905; and Tractatus Tres de Paupertate, ed. C. L. Kingsford, A. G. Little, and F. Tocco (British Soc. of Franciscan Studies, vol. ii.), Aberdeen, 1910.

Pecock, Reginald (d. circa 1460).

2257. The repressor of overmuch blaming of the clergy. By Reginald Pecock, ed. Churchill Babington. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1860.

Pecock was made bishop of Chichester in 1450, but was deposed for heresy in 1457. His Repressor, written in English about 1449, defends the clergy against the attacks of the Lollards. It is valuable because 'it preserves to us the best arguments of the Lollards against existing practices which he was able to find, together with such answers as a very acute opponent was able to give.' The introduction to vol. i. contains a good account of Pecock's life. See also James Gairdner and James Spedding, Studies in English History, 1881, pp. 19-54; James Gairdner, Lollardy (No. 3167), i. 202-42; and No. 3149. Besides the Repressor, Pecock wrote A Book of Faith, ed. J. L. Morison, Glasgow, 1909, a portion of which, entitled A Treatise proving Scripture to be the Rule of Faith, was edited by Henry Wharton, London, 1688.

Purvey, John (d. circa 1428).

2258. Remonstrances against Romish corruptions in the church, addressed to the people and parliament of England in 1395. By John Purvey, ed. Josiah Forshall. London, 1851.

Assails the clergy and the pope. During the later years of Wyclif's life Purvey assisted him in his parish duties, *

Rievaulx, Aelred of (d. 1166).

2259. Beati Aelredi abbatis Rievallensis Opera omnia, in Migne's Patrologia, vol. cxcv. Paris, 1855.

Sermones, 209-500.
De bello standardii, 701-12. See
No. 1834.

Vita S. Edwardi regis, 739–90. See No. 1378.

Rolle, Richard (d. 1349).

2259a. Yorkshire writers: Richard Rolle of Hampole and his followers, ed. C[arl] Horstmann. 2 vols. London, etc., 1895–96.

Religious treatises and other documents, chiefly of a mystical character.

St. Carilef (or St. Calais), William of (d. 1096).

2260. Symeonis monachi Opera omnia, ed. Thomas Arnold. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1882-85.

De injusta vexatione Willelmi Episcopi Primi per Willelmum regem filium Willelmi Magni, i. 170-95: a valuable historical document which gives a vivid account of William II.'s persecution of the bishop of Durham owing to the latter's complicity in the plot of Odo of Bayeux. It is also printed in Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum (London, 1817), i. 244-50. See E. A. Freeman, Reign of William Rufus (No. 2813), ii. 730. The anonymous author of the tract was probably a contemporary monk of Durham. The work is translated in Joseph Stevenson's Church Historians of England (No. 597), iii. pt. ii. 731-50.

Salisbury, John of (d. 1180).

For modern biographies; see Nos. 3152-8.

2261. *Joannis Saresberiensis Opera omnia, ed. J. A. Giles Patres Ecclesiæ (No. 583). 5 vols. Oxford, 1848.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, vol. cxcix. Paris, 1855.—Extracts (chiefly from the Polycraticus), ed. Pauli, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 43–52. Hanover, 1885.—Joannis Saresberiensis Policratici libri viii., ed. C. C. J. Webb. 2 vols. Oxford, 1909. [The best edition; an edition of the Metalogicus is in preparation.]

Vols. i.-ii. Epistolæ, 1155-80, Valuable, especially for the conflict between Henry II. and Becket. Many of them are also printed in Recueil des Historiens de la France (No. 575), 1814, xvi. 488-625; and in No. 2229.

Vols. iii.-iv. Polycraticus sive De nugis curialium et vestigiis philosophorum. This Statesman's Book, or Trifles of Courtiers, dedicated to Becket in 1159, is John's most important work. It deals with the principles of government, with philosophy, learning, and the vices of the age, particularly those of the court, giving vivid glimpses of the corruption in church and state. Vol. v. Opuscula: Metalogicus, etc.

An important work printed by neither Giles nor Migne is the Historia Pontificalis, edited by Wilhelm Arndt in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xx. 515-45. John of Salisbury, 'for thirty years the central figure of English learning,' was employed on diplomatic missions by Henry II., and he was the confidential adviser of Becket. For his life of Becket, see No. 2229; cf. Molinier, Sources (No. 30a), ii. no. 2039.

Somercote, Lawrence of (fl. 1254).

2261a. Der Traktat des Laurentius de Somercote Kanonikus von Chichester über die Vornahme von Bischofswahlen, 1254, ed. Alfred von Wretschko. Weimar, 1907. pp. 56.

Tewkesbury, Alan of (d. 1202).

2262. Alani abbatis Tewkesberiensis Scripta quæ extant, ed. J. A. Giles. Caxton Soc. Oxford, 1846. pp. 60.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, cxc. 1475–88. Paris, 1854.

Alan's writings comprise a life of Becket (No. 2229) and fourteen letters; these letters are also printed in Giles's edition of the works of Herbert of Bosham (No. 2235).

Wulfstan (d. 1095).

See No. 3163.

2263. Willelmi Malmesburiensis Libri tres de vita S. Wulstani episcopi Wigorniensis, ed. Henry Wharton, Anglia Sacra, ii. 239–70. London, 1691.—Also in Migne's Patrologia, clxxix. 1734–72. Paris, 1855.

Wyclif, John (d. 1384).

For other sources relating to the Lollards and their opponents, see Nos. 1745, 1807, 1861, 2221, 2237, 2253, 2257-8, 2756; for modern biographies of Wyclif, Nos. 3164-78a.

2264. A catalogue of the original works of John Wyclif. By W. W. Shirley. Oxford, 1865.

2265. *Select English works of John Wyclif [sermons, treatises, controversial tracts, etc.], ed. Thomas Arnold. 3 vols. Oxford, 1869—71.—English works of Wyclif hitherto unprinted, ed. F. D. Matthew. Early English Text Soc. London, 1880.

In his introduction Matthew deals with the life of Wyclif; valuable,

2266. *[Wyclif's Latin works.] Wyclif Soc. [32 vols.] London, 1883–1913.

Contains Polemical Works, De Civili Dominio, Speculum Ecclesiæ, Sermones, De Officio Regis, etc. For a partial list, see Dictionary of National Biography, 1900, lxiii, 221-2, # § 57. LOCAL RECORDS AND LOCAL ANNALS.

- a. General, Nos. 2266a-d.
- b. Particular Counties, Boroughs, Manors, etc., Nos. 2267-2750a.

The principal categories of sources included in this section are:—

I. Manorial records: account rolls, court rolls, and extents. The account rolls of bailiffs and reeves give the income of the lord from various sources and the expenditures made on his behalf. The court rolls, minutes of proceedings in the manorial courts, throw light on the condition of the peasants and on their relations to their lords. The earliest account rolls and court rolls are of the first half of the thirteenth century, but court rolls of that century are not very common. Maitland in his Court Baron (No. 1878) edits certain tracts on the method of holding the manorial tribunals. 'The "extent" of a manor,' says he, 'is a description of it which generally gives the names of the tenants. the size of their holdings, the legal character of their tenure, the amount and nature of their rents and services, whether rendered in money, in produce, or in labour. Generally the extent is the result of a sworn verdict returned by a jury of tenants to a set of interrogatories addressed to them by the lord's steward . . . . Domesday Book is an extent of the realm made on the king's behalf by local juries. Gradually the lords of manors, especially the religious houses, followed the example thus set. We have a few extents from the 12th, many from the 13th century.' The same writer aptly remarks that 'the extent displays the manor at rest, the court roll the manor in motion.' It is often difficult to distinguish the former from the rental and the customal, or customary. Many extents are found in monastic chartularies and registers: for example, Nos. 2384, 2406, 2708. Besides those mentioned in this section, some are printed in the Monasticons of Dugdale and Oliver (Nos. 613, 624); others are comprised in the inquests post mortem (§ 55). The Hundred Rolls (No. 2160) give valuable extents of manors in Cambridgeshire and some other counties. Many manorial records are preserved in the British Museum and in the Public Record Office. See Public Record Office Lists and Indexes (No. 473), nos. vi. and xxv.: List and Index of Court Rolls [Edw. I.-Geo. III.], 1896; and List of Rentals and Surveys [Edw. I.-Charles II.], 1908. See also Lists of Manor Court Rolls in Private Hands [ed. A. L. Hardy], Manorial Society's Monographs (No. 547). nos. 1, 2, 4, London, 1907-10, pp. 21, 25, 23 (2nd edition of pt. i., 1913). This society is preparing a card index of all the references to manors and manorial documents in the volumes of the Historical MSS. Commission. For a short list of printed court rolls, see F. J. C. Hearnshaw, Leet Jurisdiction (No. 2970a), 156-8; and see Nos. 516a, 826a. The materials for the study of manorial history are well set forth by Miss Davenport and Miss Moore: Nos. 64, 66a.

2. Municipal records. Although few of the manorial rolls are found in their original repositories, the municipal muniments which have survived are in large part preserved in the borough archives. Few boroughs have records older than the thirteenth century, and in many towns the oldest muniments are of the fourteenth or the fifteenth century. In many local archives we find municipal charters, chamberlains' accounts or other 'compotus' rolls, assembly or council rolls, court rolls, gild-merchant rolls, and books (with such designations as White Book, Red Book, Black Book, etc.) containing ordinances and miscellaneous matters. See Gross, Bibliography of Municipal History (No. 66); and his Town Records of Great Britain, in American Historical Review, 1896, ii. 191–200. Some of the collections, etc., of most importance for the study of borough institutions are:—

Domesday Book: No. 1884.
Rotuli Parliamentorum: No. 2010.
Palgrave's Parliamentary Writs:
No. 2004.
Prynne's Parliamentary Writs: No. 2006.
Hardy's Rotuli Chartarum: No. 2108.

Chartæ Hiberniæ: No. 2128. Gross's Gild Merchant: No. 824. Smith's English Gilds: No. 2214. The Peers' Reports: No. 2944. Reports of the Historical MSS. Commission: No. 503 and app. B.

3. Ecclesiastical records, especially episcopal registers, monastic chartularies, and churchwardens' accounts. 'Every bishop kept (and still keeps) a register of all his official acts. The first page generally contains the account of his consecration or appointment; then follow the Bulls and other privileges which he received from the Popes. The bulk of each volume is occupied with the records of institutions to benefices, acts of consistory courts, and lists of persons ordained; to which, in many instances, important wills are annexed. This may be considered as an adequate description of the general run of registers. There are, however, frequent exceptions. Those of Canterbury and York contain proceedings with the Suffragans, records of Convocations and Councils, and a vast number of letters on public business' (William Stubbs, Registrum Sacrum Anglicanum, 1897, p. vii.). For a list of MS. registers, see ibid., pp. xiii,-xvi. The earliest seem to be those of Lincoln and York, which begin in 1217 and 1225 respectively. For lists of monastic chartularies preserved in the British Museum, the Public Record Office, and other repositories, see No. 2200. Many of them contain not only charters, but also manorial extents and other valuable documents. One of the oldest is Heming's Chartularium (No. 1417), which was compiled soon after the Norman Conquest. The chartularies in some religious houses were called registers or coucher books. The Bannatyne Club and the Maitland Club published several registers of Scotch monasteries. Dugdale's Monasticon (No. 613) is an invaluable collection of extracts from the chartularies. registers, and chronicles of religious houses in England and Wales. Monastic chronicles of purely local interest are also included in this section; many of them contain manorial and other records: see T. D. Hardy, Catalogue of Materials, vol. ii. pp. lix.-lxiv. Luard's Annales Monastici, and other monastic chronicles which throw light on public affairs, are entered in § 48. The earliest churchwardens' accounts date from the fourteenth century, and are worthy of more attention than they have thus far received; but most of those that have survived begin after 1485. See B. L. Hutchins, Parish and other Accounts, in Notes and Queries, 9th series, 1899, iv. 301-2, 414-15, 452-3; 1900, v. 63-64; Elsbeth Philipps, List of Printed Churchwardens' Accounts, in English Historical Review, 1900, xv. 335-41; J. C. Cox, The Parish Registers of England, London, [1910], and Churchwardens' Accounts, London, 1913; A. M. Burke, Key to the Ancient Parish Registers of England and Wales, London, 1908. For the various ecclesiastical records, see below, index, under 'Accounts,' 'Chartularies,' 'Churchwardens' Accounts,' 'Registers.'

4. Private deeds, wills, and letters. Many other collections of charters besides those of boroughs and monasteries are entered in this section. After the Norman Conquest we have few wills before the fourteenth century; those enrolled in the court of husting, London (No. 2506), are among the earliest. For general collections and calendars of wills relating to various counties, see § 58c. The most notable family papers are the Paston Letters (No. 2531); next in value are the Trevelyan Papers, Shillingford's Letters, and the Plumpton Correspondence (Nos. 2300, 2317, 2713).

County bibliographies and local record societies will be found in §§ 2d, 15. Some of the county histories and other works in § 24 contain local records; the Guide to the Victoria History of the Counties of England (No. 839) has lists of chartularies, court rolls, etc. For surveys, subsidy rolls, feet of fines, plea rolls, inquests post mortem, and other public records relating to particular shires, see §§ 50-56.

Vol. ii. contains rotuli communiariorum, 1416–1535; terrariorum, 1401–1513; and the rolls of various other monastic officers, 1278–1538. Vol. iii. contains rotuli bursariorum, 1371–1541, etc., with a full index and glossary. Valuable.

2341. * Feodarium prioratus Dunelmensis [ed. William Greenwell]. Surtees Soc. Durham, etc., 1872.

Inventarium prioratus Dunelmensis, 98-211: an inventory of lands and moveables, 1464.

Le convenit, 212-17: an agreement hetween the bishop and the prior of Durham, in 1229.

Attestaciones testium, 220-301: concerning a dispute between the bishop and the convent, circa 1225.

2342. Halmota prioratus Dunelmensis: extracts from the halmote court or manor rolls of the prior and convent of Durham, 1296–1384 [ed. W. H. D. Longstaffe and John Booth]. Surtees Soc. Durham, etc., 1889.

Valuable.

2343. *Historiæ Dunelmensis scriptores tres, Gaufridus de Coldingham, Robertus de Graystanes, et Willelmus de Chambre [ed. James Raine]. Surtees Soc. London, etc., [1839].

Liber Gaufridi de Coldingham de statu ecclesiæ Dunelmensis, 1152–1214, pp. 1-31. The author was sacrist of the priory of Coldingham, a cell of the priory of Durham, and seems to have flourished early in the 13th century. His chronicle devotes some attention to the public affairs of the kingdom.

Graystanes's Historia de statu ecclesiæ Dunelmensis, 1214–1336, pp. 33–123. The author, a monk of Durham, was elected bishop of Durham in 1333, but was prevented by intrigue from taking possession of the see. His chronicle devotes some attention to public affairs, and is more valuable than the other two.

Chambre's Continuatio historiæ
Dunelmensis, 1336-1571, pp. 12556: a somewhat meagre collection of historical notes, the earlier part of which may have been written by a William de Chambre who received a corrody from the prior and convent of Durham in 1365.

These three chronicles are inaccurately printed in Wharton's Anglia Sacra (No. 600), i. 718-84. Raine's edition has an elaborate and valuable appendix of charters, letters, papal bulls, etc., illustrating the history of the convent and see of Durham.

2346. *Registrum palatinum Dunelmense: the register of Richard de Kellawe, bishop of Durham, 1311–16, ed. T. D. Hardy. Rolls Series. 4 vols. London, 1873–78.—Indexes: No. 2337.

Vol. iii. contains various documents, 1279-1374, including part of Bishop Bury's register, 1338-45, and part of William Legat's. Vol. iv. contains additions from plea rolls, letters patent and close, and other public records, with excerpts (mainly 1312-45) from the letter-book of Bishop Bury. These four volumes are of great value for the history of the palatinate of Durham. For extracts from registers of Durham, see No. 2223. Fragments of Bishop Bury's register and other documents, 1330-45, are also published by the Surtees Society: Richard d'Aungerville of Bury, Durham, etc., 1910.

2347. Sanctuarium Dunelmense et sanctuarium Beverlacense [ed. James Raine]. Surtees Soc. London, [1837].

Contains registers of persons who sought sanctuary in Durham cathedral, 1494-1524, and in the church of St. John, Beverley, 1478-1539.

2348. Wills and inventories illustrative of the history, manners, language, etc., of the northern counties of England, from the eleventh century downwards [ed. James Raine; pt. ii. by William Greenwell, pt. iii. by J. C. Hodgson]. 3 pts. Surtees Soc. London, etc., [1835]—1906.

Those dating before 1500 (i, 1-104) relate mainly to the counties of Durham and Northumberland.

2445. *Registrum Roffense: a collection of antient records, charters, etc., illustrating the history of the diocese and cathedral church of Rochester, ed. John Thorpe [the elder]. London, 1769.

—Index to the monumental inscriptions in the Registrum Roffense. [By F. A. Crisp]. London, 1885. pp. 14.

The Registrum contains charters, bulls, ordinations, pleadings, etc., many of them taken from the episcopal registers of Rochester.

2446. *Textus Roffensis, ed. Thomas Hearne. Oxford, 1720.

—An historical account of the Textus Roffensis. By Samuel Pegge. London, 1784. pp. 47.—Notes on the Textus Roffensis. By Felix Liebermann. Kent Archæol. Soc., Archæologia Cantiana, xxiii. 101–12. London, 1898.

According to Liebermann, this work was written circa 1140-50 by an unknown scribe, who was induced to compile it by Ernulf, bishop of Rochester. The first part is a rich collection of Anglo-Saxon laws, the second is a chartulary of the church of St. Andrew. Hearne does not edit the whole work. Most of the charters are printed in Kemble's Codex (No. 1419) and in Thorpe's Registrum Roffense (No. 2445).

2447. Willelmi de Dene Historia Roffensis [1314-50, with a continuation to 1540], ed. Henry Wharton, Anglia Sacra, i. 356-83. London, 1691.

LANCASHIRE.

General: Duchy of Lancaster, etc.

In 1868 Queen Victoria presented to the nation the ancient muniments of the duchy of Lancaster (Nos. 2450–60), some of which were removed to the Public Record Office in that year and the rest in 1873. These documents relate to Lancashire and most of the other counties of England in which estates were held of the duchy. See Public Record Office, Lists and Indexes (No. 473), nos. xiv., xl.; and No. 2766.

2448. Charters of the duchy of Lancaster. Translated and edited by William Hardy. London, 1845.

Contains the charters granted by the crown to the earls and dukes of Lancaster, 1342-99; together with the subsequent acts of parliament relating to the management of the Lancastrian possessions as settled upon the king, to 1558. For charters 1093-1216, see No. 1925a.

General.

2530. Norfolk records: a collection of record-references derived from indexes in the public record office, London, ed. W. D. Selby and Walter Rye. Norfolk and Norwich Archæol. Soc. 2 vols. Norwich, 1886–92.

Index locorum to the debanco rolls, 1307-27, i. 223-65.
Index to four series of Norfolk inquisitions, Hen. III,-Charles I, ii. 1-146.

2531. *Original letters written during the reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., and Richard III. [and Henry VII.], ed. John Fenn. 5 vols. London, 1787–1823.—New edition, abridged, by A. Ramsay: Paston letters. 2 vols. London, 1840–41.—New edition, with many additions, by James Gairdner: The Paston letters, 1422–1509. 3 vols. London, 1872–75; reprinted, with the errata corrected, 3 vols., 1896; reprinted again [with a supplement], 4 vols., Westminster, 1900–01.—New complete library edition, ed. James Gairdner, 6 vols., London, 1904.

These letters were written by or to members of the family of Paston in Norfolk. Many of them are from Sir John Fastolf and other persons of high rank. They elucidate public affairs and domestic manners. Gairdner's elaborate introductions furnish a good account of the public and private life of the 15th century as illustrated by the Paston letters.

2532. Some Norfolk guild certificates [12 Rich. II.], ed. Walter Rye. Norfolk and Norwich Archæol. Soc., Norfolk Archæology, xi. 105–36. Norwich, 1892.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

2549. *Chronicon Petroburgense, ed. Thomas Stapleton. Camden Soc. London, 1849.

Compiled in the reign of Edward I. by an unknown monk of the abbey of Peterborough. The chronicle begins in 1122, and for 150 years comprises brief entries relating principally to public affairs. The greater part of the work, A.D. 1273-95, pp. 20-155, relates mainly to lawsuits in which the abbey was involved. The appendix, pp. 157-83, contains Liber Niger Monasterii S. Petri de Burgo, a valuable survey of the manors of the abbey, 1125-28; together with a list of knights' fees held of the abbey, 1100-1120. For these knights' fees, see J. H. Round, Feudal England, 1895, pp. 157-68. For other chronicles of Peterborough, see Nos. 1747, 2552.

- 2550. Compotus of the manor of Kettering, 1292, with translation, ed. Charles Wise. Kettering, 1899.
- 2551. Exemplification of records and charters relating to the manor of Morton Pynkeny, etc., in the county of Northampton, temp. Edw. II. and Edw. III., ed. L. B. L. Collectanea Topog. et Genealogica (No. 820), iv. 223-31. London, 1837.
- 2552. Historiæ cœnobii Burgensis scriptores varii, ed. Joseph Sparke, Historiæ Anglicanæ Scriptores [pt. iii.], 1–256. London, 1723.

Hugonis Candidi cœnobii Burgensis Historia, A.D. 655-1177, pp. 1-94. Contains some passages relating to general history, most of which were taken from the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle. Hugh was a monk of Peterborough (d. circa 1175). His work was continued by Robert Swapham.

Roberti Swaphami Historia cœnobii Burgensis, 1177-1245, pp. 97-122. Written between 1250 and 1262. Swapham or Swafham (d. circa 1273) was cellarer of the abbey of Peterborough. Continued by Walter de Whitlesey. Walteri de Whitlesey Historia cœnobii Burgensis, 1246-1321, pp. 125-216. Contains an extent of the manors of the abbey and escheators' accounts, 15 Edw. II., pp. 175-216.

Historiæ cœuobii Burgensis continuatio, per anonymum, 1321-38, pp. 217-37.

Historia vetus cœnobii Petriburgensis, 241-56: an abridged Anglo-French poetical version of the work of Hugh Candidus, to 1132, written about the end of the 12th century.

Evesham, Hagley Hall, Hales, Kyre Park, etc.

2700. *Chronicon abbatiæ de Evesham ad annum 1418, ed. W. D. Macray. Rolls Series. London, 1863.—Extracts, 1035–1236, ed. Liebermann, in Pertz's Scriptores (No. 594), xxvii. 422–5. Hanover, 1885.

Bks. i.-ii. contain the life and miracles of St. Egwin, bishop of Worcester (d. 717). Bk. iii., which sets forth the actual history of the abbey from 714 to 1418, was written by Thomas of Marlborough, abbot of Evesham (1230-36), as far as the year 1214, and from 1214 to 1418 by an unknown continuator. The work furnishes us with a vivid picture of the inner life of a great monastery. Much attention is devoted to the struggle of the abbey to secure exemption from the visitations of the bishop of Worcester, 1202-1206, pp. 109-200; and the constitutions of the abbey, 1214, are given in full, pp. 205-22. #### a. POETRY.

In the second half of the twelfth century the poems of Nigel Wireker, John de Hauteville, and those ascribed to Walter Map (Nos. 2751, 2761) throw light on the corruptions of the church and the manners of the age. In the fourteenth century Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, and Piers Plowman (which goes under the name of Langland, No. 2759), illumine all sides of religious and social life; Laurence Minot sings of the wars of Edward III., while Gower and the author of Richard the Redeless devote much attention to the government of Richard II. The political poems from John to Richard III. (Nos. 2754-6a) reflect the popular sentiments of the times concerning political and religious questions. Some of them—for example, the Song of Lewes (No. 2755)—are of considerable historical value; but after the reign of Edward III. their importance wanes. See Gustav Liebau, König Eduard III. im Lichte Europäischer Poesie, Heidelberg, 1901.

See the histories of English literature by Ten Brink and Morley (Nos. 35, 49); J. J. Jusserand, Histoire Littéraire du Peuple Anglais, [i.] Des Origines à la Renaissance, Paris, 1894, 2nd edition, 1896 (translated under the title, A Literary History of the English People, London, 1895, 2nd edition, 1907); Gustav Körting, Grundriss der Geschichte der Englischen Litteratur, Münster, 1887 (4th edition, 1905); Cambridge History of English Literature (No. 37a), vols. i.—ii.; and W. ## General: Political Poems, etc.

2751. Anglo-Latin satirical poets and epigrammatists of the twelfth century, ed. Thomas Wright. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1872.

Nigelli Speculum stultorum, i. 3-145; Tractatus Nigelli contra curiales et officiales clericos, i. 146-230. Both are dedicated to William Longchamp, bishop of Ely, and satirise the follies of the age, especially the corruptions of the church. The author, Nigel Wireker, was precentor of Canterbury. His principal work is the Speculum Stultorum. See Immanuel Weber, De Nigello Wirekero, Leipsic, [1679].

Johannis de Altavilla Architrenius, i. 240-392. Written about 1184; the 'Archweeper' laments over the vices of mankind; the author, John de Hauteville, is said to have been a monk of St. Albans.

Alexandri Neckam (?) De vita monachorum, ii. 175-200.

For some political poems of the 12th century, edited by C. L. Kingsford, see English Historical Review, 1890, v. 311-26.

2752. Cy ensuyt une chanson moult pitoyable des oppressions que la povre commune de Engletere souffre soubz la cruelte des justices de Trayllbastun [ed. Francis Cohen, afterwards Sir Francis Palgrave. London, 1818].

Also contains a poem on the death of Simon de Montfort, and two other poems. There is another song on the death of Simon, edited by F. W. Maitland, in English Historical Review, 1896, xi. 314–18; reprinted in his Collected Papers (No. 656a), iii. 43–49.

2753. English and Scottish popular ballads, ed. F. J. Child. 5 vols. Boston, etc., [1882-98].

The best collection of ballads; admirably edited. Supersedes Child's older collection: 8 vols., 1857-58 and 1864. There is a much abbreviated edition by Helen Child Sargent and G. L. Kittredge, Boston, etc., [1904].

2754. Political poems of the reigns of Henry VI. and Edward IV., ed. Frederic Madden. Soc. of Antiq. of London, Archæologia, xxix. 318-47. London, 1842.

For some earlier poems, see ibid., 1817, xviii. 21-28, Death of Edward III., etc.; 1824, xx. 1-423, Creton's Deposition of Richard II.; 1827, xxi. 43-78, Siege of Rouen, temp. Hen. V.

2755. *Political songs of England, from the reign of John to that of Edward II. Edited and translated by Thomas Wright.

Camden Soc. London, 1839.—Another edition, 'revised' by Edmund Goldsmid, in his Bibliotheca Curiosa. 4 vols. in 1. Edinburgh, 1884.

Goldsmid omits some of the longer poems printed by Wright. The most valuable song in Wright's volume is that on the battle of Lewes (pp. 72-121), which was written soon after the battle. It is a remarkably bold and complete statement of the baronial programme of constitutional reform. The author was a Franciscan friar. There is an excellent edition of this Latin tract by C. L. Kingsford: The Song of Lewes, Oxford, 1890.

On pp. 323-45 Wright prints a song on the times of Edward II., written about 1320, of which we have a better edition by C. Hardwick: A Poem on the Times of Edward II., Percy Society, 1849, pp. 35.

2756. *— Political poems and songs relating to English history, from the accession of Edward III. to that of Richard III., ed. Thomas Wright. Rolls Series. 2 vols. London, 1859–61.

Les Vœus du Héron (with an English translation), i. 1-25. Relates how Edward III. came to declare war against Philip of Valois in 1338; composed about 1341. It was also printed by La Curne de Sainte-Palaye, Mémoires sur l'Ancienne Chevalerie (Paris, 1826), ii. 95-111.

John of Bridlington, i. 123-215. Contains a critical review of the political acts of Edward III., especially from 1327 to 1346, in Latin verse with a prose commentary; completed about 1370 (Tout, Political History of England, p. 457, says not before 1377), by an unknown writer who adopts the pseudonym ' John of Bridlington.'

The Reconciliation of Richard II. with the City of London, 1393, by Richard de Maidstone (d. 1396), an admirer of Richard II., i. 282-300. Earlier edition, by Thomas Wright, Camden Soc., 1838.

The Complaint of the Plowman, also called the Plowman's Tale, i. 304-346. Assails the clergy; written about 1394. There is a better edition in Skeat's Complete Works of Chaucer (No. 2757), vii. 147-90. Another English poem by this unknown author is Pierce the Plowman's Crede, ed. W. W. Skeat, Early English Text Society, 1867; revised edition, Oxford, 1906, pp. 73: a Wyclifite satire, written about 1394 and directed particularly against the friars.

John Gower's Corruptions of the Age, Vices of the Different Orders of Society, King Richard II., Tripartite Chronicle, Verses on Henry IV., etc., i. 346-63, 417-54, ii. 1-15. These poems of Gower assail the government of Richard II. and denounce the Lollards. They are all included in Macaulay's edition (No. 2758). For his Vox Clamantis, see also No. 2758.

The Deposition of Richard II., also called Richard the Redeless, i. 368-417. See No. 2759.

Jack Upland, ii. 16-39; also printed in Skeat's Complete Works of Chaucer (No. 2757), vii. 191-203. A popular indictment of the corruption of the friars, written in 1402.

The Libel of English Policy, ii. 157-205. See No. 2800.

For two poems on the siege of 'Harflet' (Harfleur) and the battle of Agincourt, which have been wrongly ascribed to Lydgate, see Thomas Hearne's edition of the Vita et Gesta Henrici V. (No. 1814), 359-75; and N. H. Nicolas, History of the Battle of Agincourt (London, 1827), pp. ccxlix.—cclxii. See also Oskar Emmerig, 'The Bataile of Agyncourte' im Lichte Geschichtlicher Quellenwerke, Nuremberg, 1906, pp. 67 (intended as an introduction to a new critical edition of the poem); and his Dariusbrief und Tennisballgeschichte, in Englische Studien, 1908, xxxix. 362-401.

2756a. Twenty-six political and other poems, ed. Josef Kail. Pt. i. Early English Text Soc. London, 1904.

Composed in the first quarter of the 15th century.

Chaucer (d. 1400).

2757. Complete works of Geoffrey Chaucer, ed. W. W. Skeat. 7 vols. Oxford, 1894–97.—Poetical works of Chaucer. Edited by Richard Morris, with memoir by [N.] Harris Nicolas. 6 vols. London, 1891.—The student's Chaucer, being a complete edition of his works, ed. W. W. Skeat. Oxford, [1894].—Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, ed. A. W. Pollard and others. Globe edition. London, 1898; reprinted 1899, 1901.—A six-text print of Chaucer's Canterbury tales, in parallel columns, ed. F. J. Furnivall. Chaucer Soc. 8 pts. London, [1868–77]. Index, by Hiram Corson, London, 1911, pp. 121. For the Ellesmere facsimile, see p. 46, above.—Various other works of Chaucer, and treatises illustrating his works, published by the Chaucer Society, 1868, etc.

The Canterbury Tales give vivid glimpses of the social life of England. See William Godwin, Life of Chaucer, 2 vols., London, 1803 (2nd edition, 4 vols., 1804); Matthew Browne [W. B. Rands], Chaucer's England, 2 vols., London, 1869; Bernhard ten Brink, Chaucer, pt. i., Münster, 1870; T. R. Lounsbury, Studies in Chaucer, 3 vols., New York, 1892; R. K. Root, The Poetry of Chaucer, Boston, etc., 1906; G. G. Coulton, Chaucer and his England, London, 1908; E. P. Hammond, Chaucer, a Bibliographical Manual, New York, 1908 (valuable); John Koch, A Detailed Comparison of the Eight Manuscripts of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, Heidelberg, 1913.

Gower (d. 1408).

2758. Complete works of John Gower, ed. G. C. Macaulay. 4 vols. Oxford, 1899–1902.—Poema quod dicitur Vox clamantis necnon Chronica tripartita auctore Johanne Gower, ed. H. O. Coxe. Roxburghe Club. London, 1850.

The Vox Clamantis is an important Latin poem, begun in 1381, which deals with the causes of the uprising of 1381. It gives a vivid picture of the condition of society, denouncing the vices of the clergy, knights, peasants, merchants, and lawyers. The Tripartite Chronicle inveighs against Richard II.'s public policy from 1386 to 1399, and defends Henry IV.'s usurpation of the throne. For some of Gower's other historical poems, see No. 2756. See also Karl Meyer, John Gowers Beziehungen zu Chaucer und König Richard II., Bonn, 1889, pp. 73. Macaulay's edition supersedes much previous discussion.

Langland (d. 1400?).

√2759. The vision of William concerning Piers Plowman [together with Richard the Redeless]. By William Langland, ed. W. W. Skeat. Early English Text Soc. 4 pts. London, 1867–85.—The vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman, together with Richard the Redeless, ed. W. W. Skeat. 2 vols. Oxford, 1886.

The Vision of Piers Plowman, begun about 1362, throws much light on the social condition of England, especially on the life of the lower classes. It defines the political rôle of the commons, with whom the author exhibits sympathy, and attacks abuses in the church. Richard the Redeless, written in 1399, is a valuable poem on the misrule and deposition of Richard II. Other editions, by Thomas Wright: The Deposition of Richard II., Camden Society, 1838; and No. 2756.

See Ernst Günther, Englisches Leben im 14. Jahrhundert, dargestellt nach The Vision of Piers the Plowman, Leipsic, 1889, pp. 62; J. J. Jusserand, Les Anglais au Moyen Age, l'Epopée Mystique de William Langland, Paris, 1893; C. Ziepel, The Reign of Richard II. (No. 2875). Jusserand's work has been translated by 'M. E. R.': Piers Plowman, a Contribution to the History of English Mysticism, London, 1894. The authorship of Piers Plowman has been much discussed: see J. M. Manly, in the Cambridge History of English Literature, ii. 1-42, and in Modern Philology, 1909, vii. 83-144; J. J. Jusserand, in Modern Philology, vi. 271-329, vii. 289-326; and R. W. Chambers, in Modern Language Review, 1910, v. 1-32. The last four papers have been collected and published by the Early English Text Society as The Piers Plowman Controversy, London, etc., 1910. - 2769. Manners and household expenses of England in the thirteenth and fifteenth centuries [ed. T. H. Turner]. Roxburghe Club. London, 1841.

Contains the household roll of Eleanor, countess of Leicester, 1265; accounts of the executors of Queen Eleanor, 1291; accounts, etc., of John Howard, duke of Norfolk, 1462-71. Valuable.

2770. Roll of the household expenses of Richard de Swinfield, bishop of Hereford, 1289-90, ed. John Webb. Camden Soc. 2 vols. [London], 1854-55.

Vol. i. Text and appendix. | Vol. ii. Abstract and illustrations.

c. WILLS AND DEEDS.

Down to 1858 there were in each diocese an episcopal registry or depository of wills, and various minor registries. The most important of the depositories was the prerogative court at Canterbury, the records of which, beginning in 1383, are now in Somerset house, London. Many wills of persons dying within the province of Canterbury, from 1312 onward, are also preserved at Lambeth palace. The archbishop of Canterbury had exclusive right to grant probate of a will if the deceased person had goods in more than one diocese of the province of Canterbury. There was a similar archiepiscopal court of the province of York, the records of which, beginning in 1389, are now at York. Most of the wills formerly preserved in the diocesan courts, which were merged in the court of probate in 1858, are now deposited in the district registries. The old and the new repositories are clearly indicated in Marshall's Handbook (No. 2774).

Paris, 1877.—Translated by Henry Pyne: England and France in the fifteenth century: the contemporary French tract entitled The debate between the heralds of France and England. London, 1870.

Le Débat des Hérauts was written about 1456 by a Frenchman, to prove the superiority of France over England. The portion dealing with the riches of the two countries is of interest to students of economic history. A response was made in English by John Coke in 1549: The Debate between the Heralds of England and France (London, 1550).

2798. Hanseakten aus England, 1275–1412, ed. Karl Kunze. Verein für Hansische Geschichte, Hansische Geschichtsquellen, vol. vi. Halle, 1891.

Contains many documents concerning English trade.

2800. The libell of Englishe policye, 1436, ed. Wilhelm Hertzberg. Leipsic, 1878.—Other editions: in Richard Hakhuyt's Principal Navigations, etc., of the English Nation, 1599, i. 187-208; and Wright's Political Poems, 1861 (No. 2756), ii. 157-205.

A plea for the maintenance of England's commercial and naval supremacy.

✓2801. *Walter of Henley's Husbandry, together with an anonymous Husbandry, Seneschaucie, and Robert Grosseteste's Rules [with a translation]. Edited by Elizabeth Lamond, with an introduction by William Cunningham. [Royal Hist. Soc.] London, etc., 1890.

These four French tracts were compiled in the 13th century, and deal with the management of rural estates. Walter of Henley gives practical directions regarding tillage; the anonymous Husbandry is primarily concerned with the accounts of an estate; the Seneschaucie describes the functions of the steward and other manorial officers; Grosseteste's Rules, written in 1240-41, lay down maxims for the management of the household of the countess of Lincoln, For additions to Cunningham's introduction, see Royal Hist. Soc., Trans., 1895, ix. 215-21; see also his Growth of English Industry and Commerce (No. 1195), vol. i.

CHAPTER II

§ 59. GENERAL.

The best general accounts of the history of this period will be found in the works mentioned in § 17, especially Pauli, Geschichte von England; Stubbs, Constitutional History; and Pollock and Maitland, English Law. See also The Political History of England, ed. Hunt and Poole (No. 632a); A History of England, ed. Oman (No. 634a); Ramsay's volumes (No. 636); Palgrave, English Commonwealth (No. 1497); and the bibliographical lists under the names of kings in the Dictionary of National Biography.

Most of the works mentioned in §§ 59-63 deal mainly with political history. Supplementary material concerning political affairs will be found in § 65, parliament; § 68, army and navy; and § 70, the church.

For relations between England and the continent, especially during the Hundred Years' war, see Ernest Lavisse (editor), Histoire de France, 9 vols. in 18, Paris, [1900–11]; Arthur le Moyne de la Borderie, Histoire de Bretagne [to 1715], vols. i.-v., Paris, 1896–1913; Henri Pirenne, Histoire de Belgique, vols. i.-iv., Brussels, 1900–11 (2nd edition of vols. i.-iii., 1902–12, 3rd edition of vol. i., 1909; translated into German by Fritz Arnheim, 4 vols., Gotha, 1899–1913, and into Flemish by R. # § 60. WILLIAM I.-RICHARD I. (1066-1199).

For the general history of the period, see especially Ramsay. Adams, and Davis (Nos. 636, 2807a, 2810b). Freeman (Nos. √2812-14) gives the fullest account of the reigns of William I. and William II. On the results of the Norman Conquest, see also Stubbs, Constitutional History, Pollock and Maitland, English Law; Liebermann, Leges Edwardi; Maitland, Domesday Book; and Round, Feudal England: Nos. 643, 657, 1405, 1493, 2827. The battle of Hastings is dealt with below, § 68 (and cf. No. 2812); and Domesday Book, above, § 50a. ✓ Round's Geoffrey de Mandeville and the preface to vol. iii. of Howlett's Chronicles of Stephen, Henry II., and Richard I. (Nos. 1667, 2828) are valuable for the reign of Stephen. The excellent survey of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I. in Stubbs's Constitutional History is supplemented by his prefaces to Benedict of Peterborough and Roger of Hoveden (reprinted in No. 2806), and by Miss Norgate's work (No. 2822). √ Round's Commune of London (No. 2826a) contains a chapter on the coronation of Richard I. The author believes that knight service was not gradually evolved after 1066 out of the Anglo-Saxon obligation to provide one armed man for every five hides, but was introduced de novo by the Conqueror; that 'the assessment of knight service was based on a five knights unit, irrespective of area or value'; and 'that the feudal element introduced at the Conquest had a greater influence on our national institutions than recent historians admit.' He contends that the English defence at Hastings consisted not of palisades, but of a shield wall.

§ 61. THE THIRTEENTH CENTURY (1199-1307).

Of the general writers mentioned in § 17, Pauli, Ramsay, and Stubbs (Nos. 633, 636, 643) discuss the history of this century with some fulness; see also Adams, Tout, and Davis (Nos. 632a, 634a), and § 70a. For the reign of John, see Nos. 2822, 3081; and Stubbs's edition of Walter of Coventry, vol. ii. preface. The literature relating to the Great Charter is examined in § 51b. The best biographies of Simon de Montfort are those of Bémont and Prothero (Nos. 2830, 2841). Blaauw (No. 2831) gives a good account of Henry III.'s struggle with the barons; see also Gasquet (No. 3084). For episodes in his relations with France, see Elie Berger, Les Préparatifs d'une Invasion Anglaise et la Descente de Henri III. en Bretagne (1229-30), in Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, 1893, liv. 5-44 (also issued separately); and Charles Bémont, La Campagne de Poitou, 1242-43 (Taillebourg et Saintes), in Annales du Midi, 1893, pp. 289-314. Good short accounts of Edward I.'s relations to Scotland will be found in J. H. Burton's History of Scotland, 2nd edition, Edinburgh, 1873, ch. xviii.; E. A. Freeman's Historical Essays, London, 1871, pp. 53-78; to 1290, in Wyckoff's treatise (No. 2807); and see Bain (No. 2807). * On the taxation of this period, see S. K. Believes that there was no second trial of John by the peers of France; contends that he was condemned in 1202 on the complaint of the counts of La Marche and Eu, but not in 1203 for the murder of Arthur. See No. 2833.

- 2833. GUILHIERMOZ, P. Les deux condamnations de Jean Sans-Terre par la cour de Philippe-Auguste. Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, lx. 45-85. Paris, 1899.

He believes that John was condemned twice by the court: once in 1202, on complaint of the counts of La Marche and Eu, and a second time in 1203 for the murder of Arthur. For a reply from Bémont and a rejoinder by Guilhiermoz, see Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des Chartes, lx. 363-72. Charles Petit-Dutaillis and Gabriel Monod agree with Bémont: Revue Historique, 1899, lxxi. 33-41; 1900, lxxii. 96-99, 100-101. See also Achille Luchaire, La Condamnation de Jean Sans Terre en 1203, in Séances et Travaux de l'Académie des Sciences Morales et Politiques, new series, 1900, liii. 161-8; also printed in Revue Historique, 1900, lxxii. 285-90. Kate Norgate, in her paper on The Alleged Condemnation of King John in 1202 (Royal Hist. Soc., Trans., 1900, xiv. 1-18), believes that the condemnation of 1202 as well as that of 1203 is factitious. F. M. Powicke (King John and Arthur of Brittany, in English Historical Review, 1909, xxiv. 659-74) holds, especially on the authority of the Annals of Margam, that John was condemned for the murder of Arthur. ## a. EDWARD II. AND EDWARD III.: THE BLACK DEATH, ETC.

Apart from the general works named in § 17, especially Nos. 632a, 633, 634a, 636, there is no good history of Edward II.'s reign; but a useful sketch of parts of it is given by Stubbs in his introduction to the Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I. and Edward II., ii. pp. lxxv.-cix. (reprinted in No. 2806). See also Tout (No. 2858b). There is need of a good history of the reign of Edward III. to take the place of Longman's and Mackinnon's; Delachenal's work on Charles V. (No. 2853) is excellent for the period that it covers. Trevelyan (No. 2872) deals with the political events of the years 1368-77.

On the Black Death, see especially Creighton and Gasquet (Nos. 1228, 2850); also Nos. 694, 1807, 2495, 2598b, 2857-8, 2981, 3047a, 3051, 3097. For works on the English in France in the fourteenth century, see the bibliographical footnotes in Lavisse, Histoire de France, iii. pt. ii., and iv. pt. i., passim; also the other French writers noted on p. 611, above (vol. ii. of

A good short account.

2857. ROGERS, J. E. T. England before and after the black death. Fortnightly Review, iii. 191-6. London, 1866.

Contends that the population of England before the outbreak of the pestilence could not have exceeded two and a half millions. See also his History of Agriculture (No. 1199), vol. i. passim; Seebohm (No. 2858); and B. H. #### b. HENRY IV. AND HENRY V.

Wylie's Henry IV. is elaborate and scholarly. The fullest surveys of the reign of Henry V. are Goodwin's and Tyler's. Tyler vigorously vindicates the character of Henry V. against the charges of debauchery and immorality during his youth; and this view has been confirmed by the researches of Ewald, Solly-Flood, and others.

d. RICHARD III.

Buck, Halsted, Legge, Lodge, Markham, Sharon Turner (History of England during the Middle Ages), and Walpole try to vindicate the character of Richard. The opposite view is presented by Gairdner, Jesse, and Pauli. Gairdner gives the best general account of the reign.

2904. Buck, George. The life and reign of Richard III. London, 1646.—Reprinted in White Kennett's Complete History of England, i. 514-77. London, 1706.

The first attempt to prove that Richard was innocent of the crimes imputed to him.

This work, which displays much critical acumen, tended to discredit the accepted view of Richard's character.

§ 64. THE CROWN AND THE KING'S COUNCIL.

For the general works on the crown, and the original sources concerning the privy council, see §§ 18, 51.

There is no detailed history of the privy council. The older authorities on this subject have been superseded by Baldwin's studies. See also Maitland, Memoranda de Parliamento (No. 2008), pp. xxxiv.—xlvii., temp. Edw. I.; Plummer's edition of Fortescue's Governance (No. 1873), 294—308, temp. Edw. IV.; and Nos. 2817, 2931, 2959. ## § 65. PARLIAMENT AND LEGISLATION.

The best authorities are Pike, the Peers' Reports (No. 2944), Riess, and Stubbs, Constitutional History, especially ch. xx. See also §§ 18, 51; and, for the reign of Henry III., see Shirley, Royal Letters (No. 2113), vol. ii. preface, and Bémont and Prothero (Nos. 2830, 2841).

There is much valuable material relating to parliament and other institutions in the sessional papers of the house of commons, which are cited throughout the present work as 'Parliamentary Papers.' Before 1800 everything which would now be issued as a parliamentary paper was published in the journals or in the London Gazette. In 1800 many reports were collected and published as Reports from Committees of the House of Commons, 1715–1802 (15 vols. and index, London, 1773–1803). The regular publication of parliamentary papers began with those of 1801. They form a continuation of the Reports, and are numbered continuously under each session. An index will usually be found in the last volume for the session. There are also various general indexes, the most important of which are the Catalogue of Parliamentary Reports, 1696–1834 (London, 1834); three indexes comprising the years 1801–52, published in 1854, which deal with bills, reports of committees, and accounts and papers respectively; and a useful selected list, Catalogue of Parliamentary Papers, 1801–1900 (with a few of earlier date), London, [1904], and Supplement, to 1910, London, [1912]. For these and other indexes, see Gross, Bibliography (No. 66), 8–9; Index to Catalogue of Books in the Upper [Bates] Hall of the Boston Public Library (Boston, 1861), 335–49, and Supplement (1866), 241–52. See also General Index of the Sessional Papers printed by Order of the House of Lords, 1801–59 (London, 1859); 1859–70 (London, 1872); 1871–85 (London, 1890). Many of these papers are printed in duplicate in the series of the house of commons.

dixes ii.—iv. to the first report) third and fourth reports (dealing mainly with the history of the peerage).

Vol. v. Fifth report, i.e. appendix v.: patents of creation, etc., Stephen-Edw. IV.

The committee was first appointed in 1815, and was often revived between 1816 and 1829. Reports were made in 1816, 1817, and 1818; the first general report was presented to the lords in 1819, the second in 1820, the third in 1822, the fourth in 1825, the fifth in 1829. Vols. i.—iv. were reprinted for the house of commons in 1826 (Parl. Papers, vols, vi.—ix.); and for the lords in 1829 (Sessional Papers vols. cclit.—cclvi.). Vols. i.—iii., which are very valuable for the study of parliamentary history, will be found also in the Journals of the House of Lords, 1824, lvi. 470—1104; vol. iv., ibid. 1820, liii. 364—6 (2nd report), ibid. 1822—23, lv. 348—463 (3rd report), ibid. 1825, lvii. 1209—55 (4th report); and vol. v., ibid. 1829, lxi. 729—926. Madox (No. 2959) is the best authority on the history of the exchequer. On the origin of the exchequer, see J. H. Round, Commune of London (No. 2826a); the introduction to the Oxford edition of the Dialogus (No. 1915); Petit-Dutaillis's edition of Stubbs's Constitutional History (No. 643); and particularly Poole (No. 2959b). For the ancient practice of the court, see Sir T[homas] F[anshaw], The Practice of the Exchequer Court, London, 1658. Dowell's History of Taxation (No. 665) is supplemented by Vincent (No. 1957) and Mitchell (above, p. 618) for the thirteenth century, and by Ramsay (Nos. 2879, 2960) for the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

The subject of scutage has evoked much discussion. See Round, Feudal England (No. 2827), 262-88, and Studies on the Red Book (No. 1917); Hall, Red Book (No. 1917), vol. ii. preface; Pollock and Maitland, English Law, bk. ii. ch. i. § 3; and No. 2952.

§ 67. JUSTICE AND POLICE.

The principal modern treatises will be found in §§ 17c, 20, and the principal sources in § 52. Palgrave's Commonwealth (No. 1497), chs. vi. and ix. deals with frankpledge and police; chs. vii.-viii., and ii. 176-88, with the jury and older forms of trial; ch. ix., and ii. 1-87, with the eyre system and the king's court. See also the works of Foss and Madox (Nos. 327, 2959).

The introduction to Maitland's Select Pleas of the Crown (No. 2051) throws light on the origin of the courts of common pleas and king's bench. The best authorities on the history of the court of chancery are Kerly and Spence (Nos. 2974, 2984); see also Hardy's edition of the close rolls (No. 2109), vol. i. introd.; and Nos. 324, 2914a, 2967a, 2970, 2972, 2977, 2979–80, 2986. For the court of exchequer, see Price and Gross (Nos. 2959c, 2987). There is no good detailed account of the tribunals of the county and hundred. Some valuable information concerning their history is furnished by Pollock and Maitland, English Law, bk. ii. ch. iii.; Palgrave, Merchant and Friar (No. 2937), ch. ii.; Riess, Wahlrecht (No. 2946), ch. iii.; and Maitland (No. 2976).

The judicature of parliament and that of the forests are examined in §§ 19, 65, and No. 2052; the courts of manors, in Nos. 1584, 1586, 2408, 3054; the church tribunals, in No. 768a.

Legal procedure is most ably dealt with by Pollock and Maitland, Brunner, Thayer, and Bigelow (Nos. 657, 686, 704, 2965); and see Gross's Modes of Trial (No. 3221b). On the jury, see also § 20, and Nos. 652, 2975, 2987; on the frankpledge system, Nos. 694, 696a, and § 45; on the functions of the coroner, No. 2047; on gaol delivery, No. 1038a.

b. THE NOBILITY, FEUDALISM, AND KNIGHTHOOD.

The most elaborate work on the history of the peerage is the Peers' Reports (No. 2944). Much information concerning the nobility may also be obtained from other books mentioned in § 65, notably Pike's House of Lords (No. 2942). For earls and earldoms in the time of Stephen, Round's Geoffrey de Mandeville (No. 2828) should be consulted. Knight service is ably dealt with by the same writer in his Feudal England (No. 2827), see also No. 2952. For works on chivalry and knighthood, see Gatfield's Guide (No. 296), 245-67. ### d. JEWS.

There is no good general history of the medieval Jews of England. The most useful works are those of Hyamson, Jacobs, and Prynne. Some valuable papers have been published in the Transactions of the Jewish Historical Society: for example, (iii. 157–79) Joseph Jacobs's Aaron of Lincoln, 1899; (iii. 187–212) C. Trice Martin's Documents relating to the History of the Jews in the Thirteenth Century, 1899; and Nos. 3056, 3057a. See also Papers read at the Anglo-Jewish Historical Exhibition, London, 1887 (published, London, 1888): pp. 20–52, Joseph Jacobs, The London Jewry, 1290; pp. 136–69, Walter Rye, The Persecutions of the Jews in England (also published separately, London, 1887, pp. 36); pp. 170–230, Charles Gross, The Exchequer of the Jews of England (No. 3062); pp. 253–88, Hermann Adler, The Chief Rabbis of England. Jacobs and Wolf (No. 3065) give a good account of the sources and modern literature.

- a. General: The Papacy, etc., Nos. 3073-89.
- b. Monasticism, Nos. 3089a-3106.
- c. Biography, Nos. 3106a-80a.

a. GENERAL: THE PAPACY, ETC.

See §§ 16, 56, 57, for the sources; § 23, for general modern treatises; and § 24, for local church history, including Ireland and Wales. See also No. 1885a. There is a good short account of the church and of the relations of England to the papacy in Stubbs's Constitutional History, ch. xix.

3073. BISHOP, EDMUND. The English medieval institutes of cathedral canons. Dublin Review, cxxiii. 41-64. London, etc., 1898.

Deals especially with the defects of the system of secular canons, 3074. *BÖHMER, HEINRICH. Kirche und Staat in England und in der Normandie im xi. und xii. Jahrhundert. Leipsic, 1899.

Devotes particular attention to the period 1066-1154. In pt. ii., pp. 163-269, Böhmer deals with the contemporary literature concerning the relations of church and state in England, especially with an unpublished collection of thirty-five tracts, MS. 415 in Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, the compiler of which he calls 'der Yorker Anonymus' (fl. circa 1100). Some of these tracts are printed in his appendix, pp. 433-97.

a. OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE.

The best general work on English universities is Rashdall's. The most detailed accounts of the history of Oxford and Cambridge are presented by Lyte and Mullinger respectively (Nos. 3188, 3190). Cooper (No. 854) also gives valuable details regarding the annals of the university of Cambridge. A useful series of 'College Histories' is being published by Hutchinson and Company, London, 1898, etc.

See also Nos. 852, 3134; and, for the sources, § 58d. For an ancient calendar of Oxford, see No. 225b. Lists of the chief officers of the two universities will be found in Le Neve's Fasti (No. 809), vol. iii. See also H. P. Stokes, The Esquire Bedells of the University of Cambridge, 13th-20th Centuries, Cambridge Antiq. Soc., Cambridge, 1911, pp. 140.

There is a good survey of the literature in Rashdall's Universities (No. 3193), ii. 319-22, 543-4, et passim.

3181. BRODRICK, G. C. A history of the university of Oxford. London, 1886; 3rd edition, 1894.

Oxford, i. 237-51. | Cambridge, i. 367-76. | Dublin, i. 639-43.

An epoch-making work, but it does not deal in detail with the English universities.

3185. Fuller, Thomas. The history of the university of Cambridge. [London], 1655.

Two new editions appeared in 1840. This was formerly the standard work on the history of Cambridge university. It is now in large part superseded by Mullinger's book (No. 3190).

- 3186. HOLLAND, T. E. The origin of the university of Oxford. English Hist. Review, vi. 238-49. London, 1891.
- 3187. Huber, V. A. Die englischen Universitäten. 2 vols. Cassel, 1839-40.—Abridged translation, by F. W. Newman: The English universities. 2 vols. London, 1843.

Disfigured by many errors. Rashdall regards it as worthless, and Denifle says that in Huber's work 'es wird mehr philosophiert als geforscht.'

x 3188. LYTE, H. C. M. A history of the university of Oxford to 1530. London, etc., 1886.

The first attempt to write a critical history of the university. The best work on this subject, though some of Lyte's conclusions have been corrected by Rashdall.

- 3189. MASTERS, ROBERT. The history of the college of Corpus Christi, Cambridge [with an appendix of documents]. 2 pts. Cambridge, 1753.—With additional matter, by John Lamb, 1831.

The best book on this subject, but most valuable for later years. 'Es mangelt ihm aber an Methode, Selbständigkeit und Kritik': Denifle, vol. i. p. xv. Mullinger's History of the University of Cambridge (London, 1888) is a popular abridgment of the work published in 1873, continued to the present time.

3197. WOOD, ANTHONY À. The history and antiquities of the university of Oxford, ed. John Gutch. 2 vols. Oxford, 1792-96.

This used to be the standard work on the history of the university. It has been superseded by the treatises of Lyte and Rashdall (Nos. 3188, 3193). An imperfect Latin translation, which, however, contains lists of 'scriptores' omitted by Gutch, appeared in 1674: Historia et Antiquitates Universitatis Oxoniensis, 2 vols. in 1, Oxford.

APPENDIX B

THE HISTORICAL MSS. COMMISSION

The Royal Commission on Historical Manuscripts was established in 1869 'to inquire what papers and manuscripts belonging to private families and institutions are extant which would be of utility in the illustration of history, constitutional law, science, and general literature, and to which possessors would be willing to give access.' The reports of the commission are published among the parliamentary papers. The first report appeared in 1870, the seventeenth in 1907. Each report used to be followed by an elaborate appendix, which usually comprised several parts or volumes and contained valuable extracts from the documents examined; but since 1899 calendars of manuscripts such as were formerly published as appendixes have been issued independently. Apart from the material thus published, the commission has accomplished much for the arrangement and preservation of local muniments.

In order that each of the calendars of manuscripts now published independently may be presented in full in the lists given below, such volumes as may have already appeared as appendixes to earlier reports are listed a second time with the subsequent volumes under the name of the collection.

INDEX OF REPORTS, APPENDIXES, ETC.

The index given below relates only to the repositories which contain medieval manuscripts. All the reports on the archives of boroughs and cathedrals have, however, been included; most of them contain some medieval records. A useful list of the reports, together with an index of the collections examined, is appended to the Fifteenth Report, pp. 51-78; and a similar list is published with each of the later reports and calendars of manuscripts. There is also a list in the Catalogue of the Record Publications, etc. (No. 539).

In the following index the numerals refer to reports, unless accompanied by the title of a separate collection.

APPENDIX C

ROLLS SERIES: INDEX OF TITLES OF WORKS CONTAINED IN THE CHRONICLES AND MEMO-RIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND

For the Rolls Series, see No. 539. The object of the following index is to make the contents of the Chronicles and Memorials more accessible to students, and to facilitate the handling of the volumes, especially in libraries like that of the British Museum, where the volumes are arranged on the shelves in the order of their publication. The numerals in bold-faced type refer to the numbers of the works as they are listed in the official catalogue of the Rolls Series (No. 539), and as they are arranged in the reading room of the British Museum. The other numerals refer to the numbered titles in the body of the present work.

APPENDIX D

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLES OF THE PRINCIPAL SOURCES

These tables comprise only a selection of the more important sources. For a similar list of the chroniclers, etc., see Potthast, Bibliotheca, ii. 1718-21. In the first table given below the sources are arranged according to the last year embraced in each work; in the second table, according to the initial date of each record or series of records; in the third table, according to the date of the composition of the treatise. The numerals in the third column refer to the numbered titles in the present volume, except in the table of public records, where most of the references are to sections. The following contractions are used: c. = circa; w. = written.
